STATISTICS

This document reports the details of 3916 individuals, of which 1975 are male and 1941 are female. Of the 2936 individuals with recorded birth and death dates, the average lifespan was 55.8 years. Of these, 1568 males averaged 56.9 years, and 1368 females averaged 54.4 years.

The longest living male was William Powell[2638], who died aged 110. The longest living female was Anne Boden[1361], who died aged 106.

There are 2129 families reported. 1744 of these families are reported as having children, with an average of 1.8 children per family.

THE NARRATIVE SECTIONS

The "Direct Relations" section reports the details of individuals who have a direct family connection to Howard Charles Thomas[2]. The section is broken into sub-sections for each generation, within which the individuals are listed in order of closeness of relationship. The sequence numbers are used throughout the document to cross-reference back to the detailed entry of an individual.

With a narrative section, each generation is shown as a separate subsection, within which the individuals are listed in order of the closeness of their relationship to Howard Charles Thomas[2].

COUSIN RELATIONSHIPS

Cousin relationships are determined by distance (first, second, third, etc.), and times removed.

Distance is determined as one less than the lower number of the previous generations traversed back from each of the individuals until the first common ancestor is found. Thus, if two people of the same generation have a common great-grandparent (three generations back), they are second cousins.

Removal is determined by the number of generations which separate the two people. For example, consider your first cousin's children. Because your common ancestor with them is your grandfather (two generations back) and their great-grandfather (three generations back), you are first cousins, once removed.

Translated and edited by Howard Thomas Doreen Duggan was born in 1924 in Lorenzo Marques, today's Maputo, capital of what was then Portuguese colony of Mozambique. Her father, Hector, was a British merchant her mother from the South African Afrikaner family of Van Rooyen. In the early 1930s, Hector Duggan left Mozambique with his wife and children to return to London, then to Paris, where his business called him.
In 1940, after the invasion of France by the German army, the Duggan family tried to return to England, but French police order stated that any British citizen, or citizen considered to be of an enemy power, must be confined. Doreen was arrested in Paris and sent to a collection centre in Vichy. She remained there a few months before authorities let her join an aunt (presumably Hector’s aunt) in the town of Moissac, the chief town of the Tarn-et-Garonne, famous for its grapes Chasselas. This is where she made the acquaintance of her future husband, Georges Levitte. It was there that she gave birth to John David, June 14, 1946.
Doreen, a Protestant from Southern Africa was the antithesis of Georges, Jewish who was born in 1918 in Ekaterinoslav, today Dnipropetrovsk, Ukraine. In this large industrial city near the Donbass coalfield, the Levitte family enjoys an easy life until the revolution of 1917.
Considered a "White Russian" hostile to the integration of Ukraine into the USSR, the grandfather of John David fled in 1922 to Wiesbaden, Germany, before moving to Metz, east of France, and then Paris.
In 1940, Georges Levitte was a student at the Sorbonne when the Wehrmacht entered Paris. He immediately went into hiding under the name of Guy Ledoux, and joined the Resistance.
With his brother Simon, and some others, George went to Moissac. In various ways, his group saved nearly five hundred children, most of whom are future orphans of the Holocaust.
However, after the invasion of the free zone by the German army in November 1942, the resistance raided many strategic locations.
Georges Levitte, who died in 1999, never bragged about his service to free France.
Jewishness are transmitted by women, and Doreen Levitte, being Protestant Anglo-Afrikaner, meant that Jean-David Levitte, his brother and two sisters are not Jews. .

Georges Levitte, aged about 27, married Doreen Duggan[31], aged about 21, in 1945. They had one son:
Jean-David Levitte born on 14 June 1946

The way in which women poets have "vanished" from our poetic history can be observed by a closer examination of the works produced in any decade of this century. Consider, for example, the history of the Veldsinger's Club, probably the most important and energetic group of poets in South Africa in the period 1908-1915. The club consisted of a core membership of practising poets, but the monthly meetings were also attended by interested persons. The membership included both men and women: Francis Emley Walrond, George Murray Johnstone, Denys Lefebvre, Robert A. Nelson, William Blane, Alice Mabel Alder, Mary Byron, Beatrice Allhusen, and Theodore Hermann van Beek. The club produced a volume of poetry in 1910, Veldsinger's Verse, and many members had individual collections published, including Beatrice Allhusen and Mary Byron who each published two collections.43 Yet it is the male poets - Francis Emley Walrond, Denys Lefebvre, William Blane and George Murray Johnstone - who have survived in anthology after anthology, while Mary Byron and Beatrice Allhusen have not. While their contemporaries were prepared to accept them as equal partners, subsequent critics and anthologists have quietly excised them from our poetic history.

George Murray Johnstone, aged about 28, married Josephine Mary Simmonds[67], aged 21, on 17 November 1909 in Lydenburg, South Africa. They had one son:
Bligh Murray Johnstone[16] born on 22 June 1912; died on 27 May 1913

70. CLAUDE CHRISTOPHER BOLAND SIMMONDS (Howard Charles's great-uncle[34]) was born in 1895, in Transvaal, South Africa, to George Christopher Simmonds[119] and Mary Ann Boland[120]. He died on 9 March 1973, aged about 77, in Elandsfontein, Fochville, South Africa.

71. CICELEY ESME GIBBINS (Howard Charles's great-aunt by marriage[75]) was born in 1909, in Free State, South Africa. She is no longer living.

Claude Christopher Boland Simmonds[70], aged about 34, married Ciceley Esme Gibbins, aged about 20, on 22 August 1929 in Johannesburg, South Africa, and they were divorced.

72. CYRIL WALTER BOLAND SIMMONDS (Howard Charles's great-uncle[33]) was born on 4 July 1903, in Lydenburg, South Africa, to George Christopher Simmonds[119] and Mary Ann Boland[120]. He died (Coronary thrombosis) on 14 March 1974, aged 70, in Krugersdorp, Transvaal, South Africa.

73. MYRA JENNETTE ? (Howard Charles's great-aunt by marriage[74]).

Cyril Walter Boland Simmonds[72] married Myra Jennette ?. They had one daughter:
Felicity Mary Simmonds[17] born in 1940; died in 2005

74. STELLA VAN ROOYEN (Howard Charles's great-aunt[45]) was born on 5 September 1890, in Alexandria, Eastern Cape, South Africa, to Gert Renier van Rooyen[121] and Cornelia Maria (Nellie) Rautenbach[122]. She died on 2 December 1952, aged 62, in Johannesburg, South Africa.

The following information is also recorded for Stella. Divorce on 25 March 1922, aged 31, in Umtata, Eastern Cape, South Africa.

Stella married twice. She was married to John Henry Hill[75] and Claude Edward Dicey[76].

This is the record of an Application for a Judicial Separation set down for adjudication in the Umtata Magistrates' Court on 25.3.1922. The Plaintiff was Stella Hill (born van Rooyen) of Umtata and the Defendant, John Henry Hill, a Sergeant in the South African Police Force, stationed at Umtata. Indictment. The application for a Judicial Separation was on the grounds that the Defendant had been badly and systematically ill-treating his wife over an extended period and this was allied to repeated alcohol abuse. The plaintiff provided extensive evidence in support of her claims. The Plaintiff was also petitioning for custody of the couple's 3 minor children, girls aged 7,9 & 10 years and maintenance of £20 per month for the 3 children. The couple was married at Benoni, Transvaal on 23.3.1911. The verdict of the outcome of the Application was that the Plaintiff was awarded a Judicial Separation, with effect from 28th March, 1922, in terms of a mutual agreement between the 2 litigants and maintenance was set by the Court as follows: 1. The Defendant was ordered to pay the fees for the 3 girls to attend the St Mary's Diocesan School for Girls, Umtata, as long as required and was to pay maintenance as follows: £54 per month for the first 3 months, April to June, 1922. Thereafter maintenance was to be £51 per month. Maintenance was to continue until each of the 3 children reached the age of 16 years, when they were to be free to decide whether they wanted to live with their mother or father. No order as to who was to pay the costs of the application was made at this point. The Court ruled that the Defendant could be allowed to retain a Joint Estate to manage family funds.

75. JOHN HENRY HILL (Howard Charles's great-uncle by marriage[98]) was born in 1879 to Frederick Hill and Eliza ?. John Henry was an Officer with the Cape Mounted Police. He resided. Extract from “Hinckley Times and Guardian” Friday May 1, 1931
TOOK DOWN LAST GERMAN FLAG IN AFRICA
Death of Mr J. H. Hill
Another Old Hinckleyan
The death took place at 76 Southfield Road, Hinckley, last Saturday at the age of 52, following a short illness of Mr John Henry Hill, son of the late Frederick Hill of Hinckley, and a nephew of the late Mr Willoughby Hill, a former licensee of the Castle Tavern in Upper Castle Street.
Mr Hill was very proud that he was an old boy of Hinckley Grammar School. He fought with the Leicestershire Yeomanry throughout the Boer War, and after spending a short time on leave at his home in England, returned to South Africa and served with the Cape Mounted Police until two years ago. He took down the last German flag in Africa and brought it to the country to present to the Museum of Hinckley Grammar School.
FRIEND OF SOUTH AFRICAN CRICKETERS
Deceased was an enthusiastic cricketer, and besides being a vice president of Hinckley Town Club, was a member of the Leicestershire Club. He was personally known to members of the South African team which toured this country two seasons ago, and came over with them on the same boat.
He was equally keen on football, and until recently regularly attended Hinckley United’s matches on the Holywell. While in South Africa, Mr Hill was well-known Freemason. He was one of the founders of the Philipstown Lodge, and held several important offices at various times. Deceased was also a member of the Hinckley Constitutional Club.
FUNERAL AT HINCKLEY
The funeral took place at the Hinckley Cemetery on Wednesday, the officiating minister being the Rev. S B Green, pastor of Hinckley Congregational Church. Many old friends gathered to pay their last respects.
The wreaths included the following:
From sister and Auntie Louie, with love; With sincere sympathy, Auntie Lizzie, Norrie and Lance; Fond and happy memories, Stan and Elsie; Remembrance cousins Lizzie, Alice and Jenny; In remembrance, Jim and Beat; In remembrance Nelly and family; With kind regards Mr and Mrs H and Walter Marshall; Sincere sympathy Floss and Walter and Margaret; With deepest sympathy Mr and Mrs Davy; With deepest sympathy, the members of the Hinckley Constitutional Club; In remembrance his old pals at the “Barley Sheaf”; Fondest memories Fred and Ivy; With deepest sympathy Mr F Hill (Burbage); In remembrance Arthur, Edna, Flo and Sydney; In fond remembrance Florrie.

(Memories of Clare Beavis Wiggill:
When Charles Perry van der Merwe retired from the mines, he and Ada bought a farm in Linden, Tvl. and planted fruit trees. He died not long afterwards of lung related issues and Ada was unable to continue alone, running the farm and fell behind with the mortgage payments and the farm was repossessed.

I grew up at No 6, First Street, Parkhurst. There was a cottage in the garden and in her declining years Cornelia (whom we called Groetjie) and Ada lived in this cottage. My father was a very generous person, loved people, was a gregarious and sociable person, an Englishman who embraced and enjoyed the diversity of the peoples of South Africa. I remember well as a small girl wandering in and out of the cottage and was always made welcome, which was a delight. I can recall very well the days before Groetjie’s death, as all the aunts ‘descended’, the drapes were drawn and Margaret and I were shooed out by the aunts. I was 5 years of age and remember being very sad not knowing why I was not allowed in to see her. I feel sure by the time Groetjie was living with us, her English must have been quite good. My father Richard, came out from England in 1938 and besides a few Afrikaans swear words, had no Afrikaans at all and yet was able to communicate with her and had a very high regard for her.

Ada lived with my family for most of my parents married life. My parents built a house in Beaufort Road, Bryanston and we moved there with Ada in about 1954. Ada lived a short while at Little Roseneath, (I remember visiting her there when Daphne first learned to drive), prior to us all moving to Port Elizabeth in about 1959. She lived with us in Port Elizabeth until my mother, Daphne’s death, in 1971 and then returned to Johannesburg, where she spent her last few years living with Rita.

With regard to Porphyria, Ada and my mother, were tested for Porphyria at the same time. Ada’s blood test was negative, however Daphne was positive. Rita I believe was negative and died just before her 90th birthday. I understand that the levels of prophyrans in the blood can fluctuate, which might explain why Ada showed negative. Margaret is positive and I am negative. It certainly can be passed on through the male line, however more females present with the disease, female hormones have something to do with that. Daphne died at the age of 56, of Porphyria related issues, having developed a form Scleroderma, which ended up causing kidney failure.

This is where things start to get a bit interesting. Our second daughter Gayle Wiggill (married to Dr Tim Ross), qualified as a Doctor and then started studying Dermatology. In her 3rd year of Dermatology studies she applied for a training position at Cambridge, but the position for an overseas student was taken, however she managed to get a position at St Georges Hospital in Tooting, London. Soon after her arrival there she found that the Dermatology Department had developed a special focus on the various forms of Porphyria and other diseases caused by extreme sensitivity to sunlight. During her year at St Georges, she saw a patient who had an extremely rare and unusual form of Porphyria and she was asked if she would present this case to The Royal Society. She was told that it was a real honour and Dermatologists could wait a life time to present a case to The Royal Society, but it was her patient and she was to do it. Geoffrey Dean then in his ’90’s and, living in Dublin, attended Gayle’s presentation. Gayle following her presentation had occasion to later talk to Geoffrey Dean, about her family connections to Porphyria and about Daphne. After many years living in Australia, unfortunately she was not able to recall the van Rooyen connection. He did say that Daphne wouldn’t have died under his watch. Geoffrey Dean mailed her a copy of the “1866 cape town marriage register: gerrit jantz from veldkamp free buerger at Stellenbosch young man (YM) with Adriaantjie adriaanse from Rotterdam young woman (YD)”, which I would be happy to pass on to you, if you would like a copy.

Gayle returned to Melbourne and qualified as a Dermatologist. She now has a young family, but works two days in private practice and one day in the Dermatology Department at the Royal Melbourne Hospital, where their focus is also the Porphyrias and sunlight sensitivity disorders. She has become somewhat of an expert and I am sure Daphne would be very proud of her.
78. CHARLES THEODORE PERRY VAN DER MERWE (Howard Charles's great-uncle by marriage[99]) was born in November 1880, in Hanover, Cape Province, South Africa, to Jan Albertus Johannes van der Merwe and Johanna Carolina Perry. Only mention of Duggan in the Georges Levitte notes

Quote: "Every man is the product of history, and Jean-David Levitte is both rich, complex and tragic secret. Maternal side, his roots on the side of Lourenco Marques, today Maputo, the capital of what was then the Portuguese colony of Mozambique. This is where Doreen Duggan was born in 1924, a British merchant father of Welsh origin and a South African mother of the great family of Afrikaner Van Rooyen. In the early 1930s, Hector Duggan left Mozambique with his wife and children to return to London, then Paris, where his affairs call."

However there is a Harold James Duggan born Jan- Mar in Cardiff entry Volume 11a page 360

The 1901 Census gives the address as: 25 Clarence Embkt, Cardiff, Glamorganshire, Wales

Harold James Duggan, aged 22, married Lydia Doreen van Rooyen[80], aged 23, on 28 August 1923 in Johannesburg, South Africa. They had three children:

- Letter from Basil van Rooyen 16 October 2011:
  - My mum was Dorothy Amelia Wood. Her father, she told me, came out as a school headmaster from England just before the Boer war - and married Joanna de Wet. He died from a lung disease leaving "Mama" as my gran was known, to bring her and her two sisters up. They were all educated at Potch Girls convent I think. Baby, as the youngest was known, married Sydney Harrison, and had a son Leonard. They were very poor, and Lenny top Matric won him a 4 year scholarship for milling engineering in England. He went by ship, and on the way, Baby had a stroke, and died ( Like Dolly, she was a chain-smoker). Lenny learnt by telegram, and on arrival my mum spoke to him and told him to make his mum proud and proceed to Manchester I think. 2 weeks later, Lenny's father Sydney died. Devastated, Lenny noe flew back at my Mum's expense to the little they owned, and the funeral, but on his arrival at Palmietfontein airport, where I had driven my mum to meet him, ( me 19, Lenny 17) there were throngs, and my mum had those hip operations (7 - a world record) so I left her and went ahead to meet Lenny. We came to my mum and found a crowd around her, lying on the ground having a coronary. It was to scar both of us for life. Lenny had a great career, marrying a hoteliers daughter - and shee called me one day from CapeTown where they lived, to say that he went for his sunday jog, and died on the road of a heart attack. My mum's other sister was Nancy. She married a Truelock, and had a son John. She also died of a heart attack - as did my mum, and Victor, and his brother John.

Victor Ignatius van Rooyen[84], aged 25, married Dorothy Amelia Wood, aged about 20, on 29 September 1928 in St Mary's Cathedral, Johannesburg. They had two children:

She was secretary to the Vice Rector of Wits University. Worked for travel side of the national airlines and was posted to New York. There she mysteriously arranged her own funeral and then hanged herself from the curtain rail. Early 1950's

Pierre: I think my Dad and Roma were very close. Possibly he was first born and she second and perhaps they grew up together. I do remember being taken to Roma’s flat in the Ansteys Building in Johannesburg. I suppose I was about five years old then. Roma was part of the South African team that along with the USA, Britain, France, and China founded UNO, the United Nations Organization. Much later, the name was shortened to UN, United Nations. Her death, which was reported on the front page of the Star, caused a great deal of shock and grief in our family, but we never found out the reason for the suicide. My dad suggested she might have been passed over for promotion which rightfully was hers. Apparently she was very ambitious. Regarding how close brother and sister were, all Roma’s possessions, furniture and books were shipped to us in South Africa. That is as much as I know. Hope it helps.

Your info about Roma has filled in some facts for me. I know she was born 13 July 1906 in Alexandria, on the family farm Dekselfontein. She married Arthur James Tait, who was born in Glasgow in 1896. He died on 22 October 1934 at the Berea Nursing Home in Durban. His estate describes his profession as “Agent”. They didn’t have any money, and in fact he left Roma 298 pounds, 180 pounds cash and the rest in gold shares. He left his brother (Alan Francis Tait) two gold ladies wrist watches, and one gold signet ring (value 9 pounds).

I can’t find out when they were married, but if she got married at say 20, then they were only married for 14 years, and he was only 38 and she 28 when he died.

She must have been a determined career woman as she died well off leaving an estate of over 2000 pounds. There is no-one left who can explain why she would have taken her own life, but there are clues in what I’ve just written, and what you told me.

I attach her death certicate, a little gruesome, but it does show what I have managed to get from the state archives.

87. ARTHUR JAMES TAIT (Howard Charles's great-uncle by marriage[101]) was born in July 1896, in Glasgow, Scotland, UK, to William Tait and Mary Ker. He died on 22 October 1934, aged 38, in Berea Nursing Home, Durban, South Africa.

  On 21.3.15 Lt. J(ohn?) C. Joubert de la Ferté and his passenger Lt. Davyck Moherly Veitch, flying Avro 504, ser. no. 753 (Peter Dye gives 1001) for No. 1 Squadron were hit by AA fire and forced to land in Holland. Veitch escaped from internment, returned to duty and was subsequently killed on 8.7.16 flying as a pilot for 70 Squadron. Joubert, though, is something of a mystery. He appears to have remained in internment until an early 1918 repatriation. His aviation career prior to being downed has not been seen print as far as I know through his RAeC ticket certificate No. 610 was achieved at Brooklands on 29.8.13 in a Vickers biplane. His name has appeared at various times in C&C US & GB as well as OTF, Henshaw and Bruce, but reference little beyond casualty details.

122. CORNELIA MARIA (NELLIE) RAUTENBACH (Howard Charles's great-grandmother[37], see Maternal Ancestry) was born on 31 March 1870, in Patensie, Humansdorp, Eastern Cape, South Africa, to George Frederik Rautenbach[163] and Adriana Maria Ferreira[164]. Cornelia Maria (Nellie) became known as ‘Nellie’. She died on 30 March 1952, aged 81.

Cornelia Maria (Nellie) married twice. She was married to Gert Renier van Rooyen[121] and A Donaldson[123].

Citation: Source 16. Unreliable or estimated.

It is not known how Cornelia met Gert Reynier van Rooyen. However, church records show they were married in Alexandria on 8 August 1889. There are two photographs extant taken in Grahamstown. They show Doreen aged 3 or 4, so the photos would have been taken about 1903. John would have been 2 years old, and Victor not yet born. This explains why there are no other photos. Possibly Cornelia was pregnant with Victor and could not travel. The other photo taken at that time was Cornelia's mother-in-law, Maria Dorothea van Rooyen. The family moved to Benoni about 1910. There are memories of Thelma (born 1911) saying that she was born in Benoni.

On 9th November 1916, Cornelia began divorce proceedings against her husband. The summons was addressed to Gert Reynier van Rooyen residing at the Durban Deep Gold Mine near Roodepoort. Cornelia was stated as being resident at Benoni district of Boksburg.

The order was: 1. Restitution of conjugal rights failing which dissolution of the marriage. 2. Forfeiture of all the benefits arising in the marriage in community. 3. Custody of the minor children. 4. Costs of the suit. 5. Alternative relief. The affidavit states: “The defendant continued to live with Plaintiff until February 1916 when he wilfully and maliciously deserted her and refused to return. Signed in Johannesburg 28th October 1916. The defendant (Gerrit Reynier) stated that he is resident at Durban Deep “and that the Plaintiff refuses to live with him there”. He claims Cornelia deserted him in June 1915 “and that notwithstanding repeated requests to return to him, the Plaintiff refuses to do so.” Cornelia replied with an affidavit dated 12 April 1917 that Gerrit had not returned to her. The divorce was granted.

It is important to state that Cornelia had no trade nor profession, and had to support minor children. Doreen was 18, John 16, Victor 14, Roma 11, Naomi 9, and Thelma 6. She was only 47. It is fair to assume that Gerrit paid no costs, and that she was destitute. Stella had married in 1911, Ada was married, and Engela was single and possibly about to move to Middelburg, where she would die the following year. Dorothy was due to marry in July. On 28 July, she married Albert Edward Boland Simmonds at the Johannesburg magistrates court. She was living 113 6th Avenue Mayfair, and he at 100 Elston Avenue, Benoni. The witnesses were Engela, and Cornelia, but signed as Mrs Donaldson. So, she had been saved from destitution by Donaldson sometime between May and the end of July 1917.

Notes from Clare Beavis

On the question of Cornelia’s mastery of English or not, my memory goes back to Parkhurst, when I about 5 years of age and my recollection, bearing in mind my father never learnt Afrikaans, was that she was more than able to hold a conversation with him. Ada spoke the ‘Queen’s English’, without a hint of an Afrikaans accent. I feel sure Ada and her brothers and sisters must have been schooled in Alexandria at an English school. This little village would have been very English in the late 1800’s early 1900’s, given the overwhelming influence of the children and grandchildren of the approx. 4600 1820 British settlers to the Albany. I notice the photograph of Cornelia was taken in Grahamstown, very close to Alexandria. Years later I asked Ada if she could speak Afrikaans. Her response was classic: We did speak a little ‘kitchen Dutch’ to the servants. Remember Ada and Cornelia shared the cottage in the garden and I can never remember Afrikaans being spoken between them.

Gert Renier van Rooyen[121], aged 23, married Cornelia Maria (Nellie) Rautenbach, aged 19, on 8 August 1889 in Alexandria, Eastern Cape, South Africa, and they were divorced. They had ten children:

I can't help but wonder whether their reason for going to South Africa related to gold-mining at all. I don't know how much you know about Mary Ann and the Boland family (so apologies if I'm telling you things you already know) but Mary Ann's father William was a very successful gold chain maker who would undoubtedly have been very knowledgeable about new opportunities for gold prospection. William Boland was in business both by himself and with his brother Richard in the jewellery quarter of Birmingham and they also had a branch of their business in Hatton Garden in London. I know that William traded overseas because he took on the fake name 'Emil Bolander' from c.1892 when dealing with overseas transactions presumably thinking it would help him within the foreign markets. So, even though George Christopher Simmonds was an accountant, I do wonder whether he and Mary Ann headed out to South Africa on the suggestion and maybe the contacts of William Boland. By the way, I have built quite a comprehensive time-line of the career of Mary Ann's father and uncles within the gold industry if you're at all interested in that.

William (Mary Ann's father) and his two older brothers Richard and John all entered into the gold jewellery industry in varying capacities. It would seem that they had learnt much about gold and were influenced heavily by their father John who had also been in the trade. He is listed in Pigot & Co.'s Directory in 1828-9 as being a gilt toy maker in Birmingham. In 1841, William was living in Caroline Street, in the All Saints parish of Birmingham, firmly within the Jewellery quarter of the city. He was living in a house with all of his siblings (assumedly following the death of their parents). His brother Richard was the head of the household and was a gilt toy maker like his father before him whilst William was a jewel apprentice. In the 1849 and 1850 Birmingham trade directories, Richard was listed as a guard chain maker living in Aston Village. He is also listed as being in business with someone by the name of 'Goode'. Goode & Boland had a business together as gold and silver guard chain makers based at 24 St Paul's Square and they also had a branch at 59 Hatton Garden in London. They were described as "manufacturers of jewellery and chains and samples in the rough and subsequent stages. Specimens of blood stones slit by a self-acting machine." At this stage, William Boland didn't appear to be a major part of that particular business if at all. By 1851, Richard (now a goldsmith) had moved to London and was living in Lambeth with his new wife. William and John were still living in Birmingham with their sister Mary. William was stated in the census to be a refiner and John was described as a gold chain maker. By 1857, Richard and William had entered into a partnership with another gold chain maker called Payn and they entered their mark at the Birmingham Assay Office on the 9th February 1857, from an address at 44 Hockley Street, Birmingham. In the Birmingham City Directory for 1858, Boland, Payn & Boland are listed as gold and silver chain makers and jewellers working out of 19 Hall Street, Birmingham and 85 Hatton Garden, London. This partnership was dissolved by mutual consent on 6th January 1862 when John Payn retired. The London Gazette reported that the Boland brothers would continue in trade together and would take on all debts due to or on the firm. In 1864, the business premises at 19 Hall Street, Birmingham was put up for sale by private contract. An advert dated 22nd October 1864 describes an “extensive and valuable plant comprising c.25 sorts (?) of presses and tools for the manufacture of cable, pillar and cylinder chains of the best patterns. Draw plates, rolls, benches and slitting machine, furnaces and gilding apparatus – EVERYTHING necessary for the manufacture of gold, silver and plated chains of all the kinds with two valuable iron safes and warehouse fitting.” Later that year, Richard and William dissolved their partnership on 3rd November 1864 by mutual consent and on 14th November 1864, Richard Boland was declared bankrupt. Between 1865-1870, Richard was working ‘solus’ at 8 Caroline Street. It is unclear which premises William may or may not have been working from during this time. By 1871 however, the business was running in their joint names again but this time at 5 Caroline Street. Both men were described as manufacturers in the 1871 census with Richard in particular (who actually lived at the business premises) specifying that he was a manufacturer of plated chains, employing 20 people. Richard then disappeared from the scene in 1874 and died in early 1878. In 1876, the business (formerly known as Richard & William Boland) was styled as ’Bushnell & Co’ and William set up on his own at 1 Caroline Street, Birmingham. By 1880 however, Bushnell & Co had disappeared and 5 Caroline Street had reverted to the name of William Boland. He ran these premises as a branch until 1887. After this date, William worked solely from the premises at 1 Caroline Street which he had occupied in total between 1876 until his death in 1900. It remained in the family at least until its final listing in 1916 when Sarah Boland took over and continued the business. In a catalogue of advertisement imitation of ‘spade’ guineas and their halves, William Boland is mentioned as having produced one under the name ‘Guillaume Bolander’ and it was used in connection with the issuer’s export trade to France. The legend on the guinea, when translated and reasrranged reads: “William Boland, king of watch-chains, Caroline Street, Birmingham, Est’d 1791” The suffixing of Boland’s surname when advertising to the French is curious but explicable. After a very long period of his being, apart from Richard, the only Boland in the Birmingham directories, a name ‘Emil Bolander’, merchant, started to appear next to his from 1892 and continued intermittently until 1912. Emil Bolander was part of a firm of export merchants called Schatz & Bolander. It is possible that William Boland noticed this incursion of foreign-sounding names and thought it would be a good idea to pirate the one resembling his own in order to inspire confidence for his trade abroad, or simply for a lark, like his extravagant export slogan. The ‘established 1791’ was probably pure fiction.

Olifantshoek was the name the area before it was renamed Alexandria in 1856. It might have been established by the Dutch colonial government in the late 18th century, but was named Alexandria in 1856 after Reverend Alexander Smith. It has a warm temperate climate and is unusual in southern Africa in having no distinct dry or wet season, with rain received throughout the year. Alexandria is one of the most important chicory producing areas in South Africa and is also known for pineapple production and dairy farming.

Die boere langs die Visrivier was destyds gedurig deur inboorlingstamme aangeval en van hulle vee beroof.

Fought at the Battle of Blood River 16 December 1838.

On 28 June 1842, Cloete's troops marched to the deserted settlement of Congella—all but Dr Wilhelm Schultz, two Boers and a German man called W. Gueinzuis had fled—and instructed his men to collect whatever provisions they could find. Cloete noticed that there were several Zulu onlookers and told his translator to shout to them that they could keep the Boers' livestock. He then sent a messenger to Pretorius to tell him that he would grant amnesty to all Boer deserters who submitted to British rule.

Soon, Dirk van Rooyen and Theunis Gerhardus Oosthuizen had been killed by the Zulu. After their cattle were stolen from their farms between the Umlaas and Illovo Rivers, the two men banded together and followed the tracks left by the Zulu. Shortly after making a campfire, they were attacked by the Zulu, who stabbed them to death and then returned to the men's homes and cut and beat the women there. They stripped the women naked and chased them into the veld, where they were only found three days later by a Boer patrol under Bart Pretorius. The terrified women had had no food since they were attacked and had endured the relentless rain with no clothing. Ironically, Van Rooyen and Oosthuizen had refused to join Pretorius's commando against the British.

Kwaai Martha
Martha Johanna Ferreira was christened on 25 Oct 1772. She married Petrus Hendrik Ferreira in 1791 and died around 1839.
During the Black Circuit of 1812 - 1813, which was held in George, she became known as "Kwaai Martha" (Afrikaans for "Angry Martha") and was accused of beating her slave. Martha was described in court records as "a woman bearing all the appearance of a better than ordinary farmer's education".

Fort Frederick in Port Elizabeth
At her trial witnesses testified that Martha beat her slave Manissa almost daily with a shambok (type of whip) and even caused Manissa to lose one of her eyes. On one particular day Manissa was sent to fetch wood. when Manissa didn't return after a while Martha followed her, but returned home without her. Coenraad De Buys was one of the community members who testified against her.
Later, about a half hours walk from the farmhouse, a bundle of firewood which was tied with twine was found. At that same location was a trail of bloody footprints, puddle of blood, a piece of taiboshout (hardwood), dragmarks, 'n karos and the small footprints of Martha Ferreira.
This incident took place while Martha lived in the Blockhouse; this was more than likely at Fort Frederick. Fort Frederick was built in 1799 to defend the mouth of the Baakens River, Fort Frederick stands overlooking the Port Elizabeth Harbour.
Martha testified that Manissa, a Mozambican slave, was bought from an Englishman bought while they lived in Algoa Bay. She said that Manissa was very young, tender and small and that she had only chastised her except that she once hit on her back with a cane about five times.
Martha further testified that Manissa suffered from "Mozambiquean sickness" and that she died from bloodletting, adding that the night before her death, Martha looked after her for the whole night, reporting her death to Veldkornet Jan van Niekerk, her brother. She had another of her slaves, Esua bury Manissa's body.
Ten other charges were brought against Martha, for cruel and repeated ill treatment which had occasioned the death of no less than seven persons, namely the slave Steyn, the Hottentots Griet, Koosje, and Abigail, and the Hottentot Rachel, and the wounding or maiming the Hottentots Lys, Hendrik, and Klaas, most of all which under such circumstances as must strike with horror every person possessed of the least sense of feeling, and which, if proved, could not be attributed to sudden passion or anger, but to a most malicious and deliberate cruelty, such, as among others that after having inflicted several wounds on the Hottentot Rachel and maimed her in the head and other parts, she intentionally had her burnt alive with the hut in which she lived; and that the Hottentot Hendrik, who was very young, having remained some days out in the fields with the calves, she put his feet into a pot of boiling water, and having made a fire under it, the toes fell off in consequence.
During the hearing at George concluded. Martha Ferreira was completely acquitted of some of the cases, while others were dismissed due to lack of adequate witnesses. The only charge to which she was convicted, was wounding a slave on his head, for which a fine was imposed.
Martha's husband, Petrus, was also charged during the Black Circuit. He was accused of taking away a little Hottentot named Kleinveld, and drove him on before his horse in such a manner that the horse trod on his in consequence of which he died four days afterwards.
Coenraad's testimony further alienating himself from the community there. A short while later, in 1813 Coenraad moved north to the central region of the Gariep River and gathered his extended family together with allies from the Khoi, Oorlams Afrikaners, Basters and Xhosa.

Michael, Gabriël and Doris, with their families as well as other Buys, at first settled on a farm at Goedgedacht and later at Kranskop in the Soutpansberg. It was to these places that Michael arranged for a Scottish missionary couple, Reverend Alexander MacKidd and his wife, to come to live and to work amongst the Buys people and this they did from May 13, 1863. It was in fact this missionary who facilitated their access to these farms which belonged to neighbouring farmers. Michael often related how his father Coenraad read to the family from the Bible and prayed, and this made a profound impression on him. Ironically though, the Buyses had by now, in general, Michael included, adopted the practices of the local black communities, polygamy included, circumcision being the only one strongly discouraged by him. He soon forbade his children to marry more than one wife, although he „took” some 20 women in the course of his life. He did however eventually relinquish all but one of these wives. Both the influence of the mission and the missionaries resulted in the Buyses increasingly rejecting what was regarded as black/heathen customs and practices. They furthermore regarded themselves as superior and demanded not to be part of a mixed congregation and to be educated separately and not in Sotho but in Dutch. Michael Buys was concerned about the future of his offspring. At all costs he wanted to prevent further verswarting? (blackening) and purposely endeavoured to ensure that marriage should only take place between „those of a kind? In his view whiteness of skin was the Buyses most important asset.

Georg Friederich RAUTENBACH was born about 1724/1734 in Tremnitz, Greiz, Thuringen, Deutschland.
He was in the service of the HOIK.
He arrived on the Roosenburg at the Cape of Good Hope during 1757, employed as soldier by the Dutch East India Company (VOC). On 18 April 1762 marries Maria Magdalena FERREIRA, widow of Franz Haarhof (married) 21/11/1751) and eldest daughter of Ignatio Leopoldus Ferreira and Martha Terreblanche.
He served at the Castle in Cape Town, where he became second in command. He was discharged in 1762.
In 1761 he became a citizen of Swellendam. From 1767 he lived on "Melkhoutessenbosch" Farm, (2156 Morgan) in the curve of the Gouritz River, 10 km from Herbertsdale. After his death his son Gerrit Hendrik inherited the farm.
In 1777 Georg acquired the Brakenfontein Farm on the western bank of the Boesmansrivier.
Rautenbachsdriif was in those days the only passable way through the Boesmansrivier. At that time it was the main route between Algoa bay (Port Elizabeth) and Albiane (Grahamstown) and the 1820 Settlers called it: "The Gateway to Settler Land".
Famous travellers such as Beutler, Swellengrebel, Winckleman, Barrow, Lichtenstein and general JW Janssens used the drift. Now Rautenbachsdriif lies on the Long Lee farm. The "Shamwari" game reserve has now been developed on the farm. In 1785 Georg was made a Lieutenant in the Swellendam Citizen's Force and later a member of the town and district council until 1791.
He makes provision in his will for his son Johann Christoph from a previous marriage in Germany and Maria Magdalena's four daughters from a previous marriage.”

Karel Pieter Landman (gebore dist. Uitenhage, Kaap Kolonie, 5.3.1796 - oorlede te Uithoek, Wasbank, Natal, 2.4.1875). Karel Landman, Voortrekkerleier, was die vierde en jongste seun van elf kinders van Johannes Abraham Landman en sy vrou, Martha Maria Rog. Landman is vermoedelik gebore op of De Staderivier, of Jammersfontein (Olijantshoek), twee plase wat sy vader kort na die eerste Britse besetting van die Kaap in 1795 verkry het. Vroeg in 1836 begin die eerste Olifantshoekers voorbereidings tref om die Kolonie te verlaat. Landman se broer, Johannes Abraham, is een van die leiers van 'n Trekgeselskap en in April 1837 volg die Uys-trek onder leiding van J. J. Uys en sy seun Petrus. Landman wat op die tydskrif reeds 'n vername rol in kerklike sake speel en bouwerk onderneem het, verkoop sy plaas op 10.6.1837 en begin met sy eie trekvoorbereidings. Eind Oktober van dieselfde jaar volg hy, sy vrou en ses kinders, vergesel van 'n aantal ingeboekte slawe min of meer in die waspore van die Uyse. Saam met hom trek nege-en-dertig gesinne (ongeveer 180 Blankes), feitlik almal bloedverwante en veeboere, onder wie die families Vermaak, Scheepers, Las, Van Niekerk, Van Rooyen, Nel, Booyzen en Rudolph.
Landman volg die traditionele binnelandse roete deur die Transorane en oor die Drakensberge en onder andere gou bygestaan deur die penvaardige J. B. Rudolph en sy eie oudste seun, Johannes Abraham. Op pad sluit nog groepies Trekkers hulle by hom aan. Toe Landman die Drakensbergpasse in Februarie 1838 nader, ontvang hy die ontevreden berigte van Piet Retief* se dood en die moorde in die Voortrekkerlaers. Hy stoot vinnig aan en bereik Gert Maritz* se groot laer digby Doornkop in Maart 1838, waar hy die Trekkers - in die woorden van Aletta Rudolph - "in diepe rou en verslagenheid" aantref.
"Among other prominent Voortrekkers were the Landmans, father and son. Carel Pieter Landman, the father, also had been a member of the "Commissie Trek," and was second in command to Pretorius in Natal. He led a party of thirty-nine families from Olifant's Hoek, in the Cape Colony. Until the arrival of Pretorius he was the head of the Boer emigrants in Natal. Then there were his brothers, Jan and Willem Landman. The Landmans became permanent residents of Natal and took prominent parts in public affairs. 2 Jacobus Johannes (Kootje) Burger became secretary of the Volksraad at Pietermaritzburg in succession to Bantjes. In later years he had a son, Schalk Willem Burger, who became a redoubtable general in the Anglo-Boer War (1899-1902), was a member of the Executive Council of the South African Republic, and survived to become a member of the Transvaal Parliament and of the Union Parliament. Jacobus Burger was a man of good education and, after his service as secretary of the Volksraad, became landdrost of Maritzburg and filled other public offices. He had a tall, somewhat lanky figure, dark hair, and a rather straggly beard. 3 Another prominent figure was Christian Muller, who was a member of many a council of war, and always relied upon for advice in difficult times. He had a profound acquaintance with the character (what is now called the "psychology") and the habits of the natives. Not easily deceived, he always met plot with counter-plot, and readily foiled a strategem. In battle he was a dauntless fighter. Tall, he was ruddy, and dark-bearded. 4 Joachim Prinsloo became president of the Volksraad at Pietermaritzburg and refused to submit to the authority of Queen Victoria. He was a man of..."

Burger Swellendam, hy het aanvanklik in die omgewing van Mosselbaai en later net ten ooste van Langkloof geboor voordat hy op 17 April 1776 Papenkuilsfontein by Algoabaai op sy naam gekry het en sodoende een van die eerste Afrikaner-pioniers in die omgewing geword het. Hier het hy ook die plase Claeskraal en Welgelegen besit. Sy naaste bure was Theunis Botha van die plaas Buffelsfontein - later Kraggakamma, Stephanus Scheepers op Kruisrivier en Johannes Wilhelms van Staden op Coega. In 1782 was hy lid van die ekspedisie wat na oorlewendes van die gestrande Grosvernor gaan soek het. Op sy plaas het die Britse garnisonen in 1799 Star Fort, die eerste amptelike verdedigingstruktuur aan die Oos-Grens opgerig. Hy is as bevelvoerder van Fort Frederick aangeweë in September 1802 toe die Kolonie in die hande van die Bataafse Republiek oorgegaan het. Tydens 'n besoek van goewerneur J.W. Janssens aan Algoabaai in 1803 is Thomas daar van aangegraak dat hy wreed teenoor nie-blanke ontleenthé he en gedeeltelik vir die onrust aan die Oosgrens verantwoordelik was. Terverre van rus en orde is hy en sekere van sy familieledes, onder andere sy dogter, die later bejaarde Kwaade Martha Ferreira van die Swarte Omegang uit Algoabaai verban, hy wou eerst daar gaan wonn. Sy oudste seun Ignatius Petrus het in 1803 daar gaan woon. Hy het Ruitersbosch gevestig, nie te ver van Hartebeeskuil sy geboorteplaas. Hy het o.a. in 1774 'n Jagersbosch, geleë aan die Kromrivier, aangeweë in Algoabaai. Die plaas was reeds in 1741 in besit van Dirk Marx sy latere skoonvader. Jagersbosch was 'n gewilde uitspanplek onder die reisigers. Hy het hom hoofsaalklik op veeboerdery toegelê en nie op die Ruitersbosch gevestig nie. In 1802 het hy 2 zoons, 2 dogters, 267 rundvee (beeste), 878 schapen, 2 leenplaatsen en in 1805 besit hy 38 osse, 8 beeste, 2 ryperde, 2 waens, 8 houtentot, 3 slawe en 154 skape. He was baptised on 3 February 1754, in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa. He died on 14 November 1840, aged about 86, in Ezeljachts, George, Cape Province, South Africa.

Johannes’ will which was drawn up on the 30th of November 1826 and is housed at the National Archives in Cape Town, shows that he did not have many possessions (it states that his estate was worth less than 40 Pounds) and was in debt to his three sons-in-law to about 1000 Pounds.

Johannes married his indirect relation, Maria Pienaar[1258].

1111. CHRISTINA ELISABETH DU BOIS (Howard Charles's five-times-great-great-aunt[716]) was born on 11 February 1755 to Johannes (Jean) du Buis[1590] and Christina Scheepers[1404]. She died on 5 December 1842, aged 87, in Paardeberg, Stellenbosch, South Africa.

1112. GERHARDUS SCHOLTZ (Howard Charles's five-times-great-great-uncle by marriage[1163]) was born on 17 March 1765, in Stellenbosch, Western Cape, South Africa. He is no longer living.
Gerhardus Scholtz married Christina Elisabeth du Bois[1111].

1113. ELIZABETH DU BOIS (Howard Charles's five-times-great-great-aunt[715]) was born on 13 June 1756 to Johannes (Jean) du Buis[1590] and Christina Scheepers[1404]. She was baptised on 13 June 1756, in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa. She died in 1828, aged about 72. Elizabeth married three times. She was married to Johan Christiaan Mangelsdorf[1114], Johan Wilhelm Steudel[1115] and Johan Wilhelm Schmidt[1116].

1114. JOHAN CHRISTIAAN MANGELSdorf (Howard Charles's five-times-great-great-uncle by marriage[1167]) was born in 1749, in Maagdeburg, Preussen, Germany. He is no longer living. Johan Christiaan Mangelsdorf, aged about 27, married Elizabeth du Bois[1113], aged 20, on 25 December 1776.

1115. JOHAN WILHELM STEUDEL (Howard Charles's five-times-great-great-uncle by marriage[1169]) was born in 1727, in Backnang, Neckarkreis, Wuerttemberg, Germany. He is no longer living. Johan Wilhelm Steudel, aged about 51, married Elizabeth du Bois[1113], aged 23, on 13 June 1779.

1116. JOHAN WILHELM SCHMIDT (Howard Charles's five-times-great-great-uncle by marriage[1166]) was born in Stuttgart, Germany. He died on 3 March 1822. Johan Wilhelm Schmidt married Elizabeth du Bois[1113], aged 38, on 21 December 1794.

1117. COENRAAD (KGOWE) DU BUYS (Howard Charles's five-times-great-great-uncle[712]) was born in 1761, in Wagenboomrivier, Montagu, Cape, South Africa, to Johannes (Jean) du Buis[1590] and Christina Scheepers[1404]. Coenraad (Kgowe) became known as ‘Kgowe’. He died in 1822, aged about 61, in Soutpansburg, South Africa. Coenraad (Kgowe) married four times. He was married to Maria van der Horst[1118], Elisabeth of The Thembu[1119], Yese Mlawu[1120] and Nomente ?[1121].

Coenraad De Buys (1761 – 1821) was described as "a remarkable figure on the frontier of the Cape Colony. Travellers described him in tones of awe. Their accounts mentioned that he was an impressive figure, nearly seven foot tall and with enormous self-confidence.

Jean De Bus, a wine farmer from Calais, arrived at the Cape with the French Huguenots on board De Oosterland on 25 April 1688. He married a French woman, Sara Jacob, and his son Jean and grandson Jean (sometimes known as Jan) married Cape Dutch women. This last marriage produced a number of offspring including a son, Coenraad De Buys / Buys. Coenraad is regarded as the stamvader (progenitor) of the De Buys/Buys people.

By 1773, about eight homesteads had been built in the Langkloof. The pioneers of the area included Jan De Buys on the farm De Ezeljacht. He was the father of Coenraad De Buys. Coenraad was born on the farm Wagenboomrivier in 1761. He had his own farm, De Opkomst, near Kareedouw/Montagu.

When Coenraad was around 7 years old saw his father sitting on a chair "with his legs drawn up as stiff as planks". He was clutching his stomach and screaming. All that night he writhed in pain and died the next day. Coenraad walked to his half sister, Geertruy's house and hold her about the death. Geertruy told Coenraad that she had seen another man die in same way - her father, Christina's first husband, Dirk Minnie. It is widely believed that Christina had poisoned them both. Coenraad decided not to go back home and lived with Geertruy and her husband, David Senekal, raising the livestock he received from his father's estate. Christina married David's brother, Jacob Senekal within six months.

In the early 1780's Coenraad lived on a farm near the Bushmans River in the Zuurveld with a Baster-Khoikhoi woman, Maria van der Horst, with whom he had seven children. Maria was of slave descent. He often crossed the Fish River and raided cattle from the Xhosa. Langa, a Zuurveld chief, charged that De Buys had seized his wife and used her as a concubine, and two other chiefs said that De Buys had 'withheld' their wives and cattle. He went to live in the homestead of Ngqika well beyond the colonial border. Here he married Ngqika’s mother, Yese, and became Ngqika’s main advisor. He also took a Thembu wife, Elizabeth, and had many children with her.

During this time Coenraad was one of a number of white and coloured people who were on the Xhosa side in the frontier wars against the Boers and then the British. From 1799 the Rharhabe chief Ngqika (also known as Ngqika and Gaika)’s “Great Place” was shared by his erstwhile friend "Khula" or Coenraad De Buys. This place was apparently in the Tyumi river valley, just south of Hogsback.

On 20 Sept 1799, Dr Johannes Van Der Kemp, a missionary from the London Missionary Society, met Coenraad De Buys in Kaffirland, where Coenraad acted as interpreter for van Der Kemp with Ngqika. Coenraad also acted as advisor to Ngqika. Over that year and the next Coenraad and Dr Van Der Kemp's friendship grew. At the end of 1800 Coenraad and Van Der Kemp decided to try their way through the “Eastern Bosjesmen” - probably those near the Stormbergen -in order to find a new country. In the first days January of 1801, they were to cross the Kabusie river, the first stage of their trek. Van der Kemp was washed away by the strong river and nearly drowned in crossing, but Coenraad took no strides towards Van Der Kemp and plucked him out of the river basically without getting himself wet.

During the Batavian period he moved to a farm in the Langloof, where he lived with Maria, Elizabeth and large family of mixed-race children.

Around 1812 Coenraad was living in George again, but soon had a falling out with Martha Ferreira. At her trial witnesses testified that Martha beat her slave Manissa almost daily with a sjambok and even caused Manissa to lose one of her eyes. On one particular day Manissa was sent to fetch wood. When Manissa didn't return after a while Martha followed her, but returned home without her. Later, about a half hours walk from the farmhouse, a bundle of firewood which was tied with twine (made of tulip petals) was found. At that same location was a trail of bloody footprints, puddle of blood, a piece of taaboshout (hardwood), drag marks, 'n karos and the small footprints of Martha Ferreira.

This incident took place while Martha lived in a blockhouse; this was more than likely at Fort Frederick. Fort Frederick was built in 1799 to defend the mouth of the Baakens River and it stands overlooking the Port Elizabeth Harbour.

Martha testified that Manissa, a Mozambican slave, was bought from an Englishman bought while they lived in Algoa Bay. She said that Manissa was very young, tender and small and that she had only chastised her except that she once hit on her back with a cane about five times. Martha further testified that Manissa suffered from “Mozambiquean sickness” and that she died from bloodletting, adding that the night before her death, Martha looked after her for the whole night, reporting her death to Veldkornet Jan van Niekerk, her brother. She had her slave, Esua bury Manissa.

Several other cases were brought against Martha and, over time, the hearing at George concluded. Martha Ferreira was completely acquitted of some of the cases, while others were dismissed due to lack of adequate witnesses. The only charge to which she was convicted, was wounding a slave on his head, for which a fine was imposed. During her trial at George, Coenraad de Buys testified against her, thereby further alienating himself from the community there.

In 1813 Coenraad moved north to the central region of the Gariep River and gathered his extended family together with allies from the Khoi, Oorlams Afrikaners, Basters and Xhosa. Coenraad De Buys preceded organised trekking - he was 54 years old when he became a fugitive from a Boer rising in the eastern Cape Colony, suppressed by the British in 1815.

By 1818 Coenraad moved northwards to the present province of Limpopo, now trading with the Sotho-Tswana and perhaps the Portuguese near Mozambique. He left behind an enormous number of descendants of mixed origin, later called the Buys Bastaards, who formed a distinctive community. In 1820 Coenraad decided to move north down the Madikwe (Marico) River into the Limpopo valley. The Tsonga and Afro-Portuguese in the valley could supply him with gunpowder in exchange ivory. He settled above the tsetse-fly and malarial belt in the Tsapong hills east of Palapye, in present day eastern Botswana.

During the trip Elizabeth contracted yellow fever and died where they had settled. An already old, and for long unwell Coenraad was distressed. He undertook a last journey to Mozambique and asked his sons and their families to wait for him at the border, the Limpopo river. He never returned. It is believe that he died shortly after this. Coenraad's remains were never found and, although there were rumours that he intended traveling to the Portuguese East Coast, no proof was ever found of him ever arriving there.

The town of Buysdorp was named after Coenraad De Buys. The 11000 hectares of land which today comprises Buysdorp (‘Buys town’) is situated in the foothills of the remote Soutpansberg (‘Salt Pan Mountain’) of the far northern Limpopo Province of South Africa. A hybrid community of some 300 individuals (de facto) or a few thousand (de jure), the Buys people have been confronted with successive political dispensations over the years. Having over decades developed autonomous structures and procedures of local governance, the ‘fit’ with the pre-1994 South African government was as comfortable as it was unacceptable to the new post-1994 democracy. Still, their history of interaction and intermarriage with surrounding communities have shaped perceptions of phenotypical and genotypical singularity and resulted in strategies to articulate their autochthony in order to define their ethnicity and to develop a kind of ‘moral geography’; their model of space, of their land.

Coenraad did not contract a regular marriage before 1812 but, fairly early in his life, seems to have formed a liaison with Maria van der Horst, a Coloured woman by whom he had at least eight children from 1782 to 1805. All of them were baptized later when he was living in the district of Swellendam or George. Some of these children married whites but little is known of them or their mother Maria. It is also not known when and if they remained with De Buys during his subsequent wanderings. Living on the Bushmans River De Buys soon quarrelled with the Xhosa of the Saurveld.

He also forged the names of signatories to a petition that he had materially altered, defaulted on his loan-farm rent in 1792, and clashed with the landdrost of Graaff-Reinet, H.C.D. Maynier, under whom he and others refused, after 1789, to serve during the Second Frontier War, a war which had, to a great extent, been provoked by the actions of De Buys and other irresponsible people. The Xhosa in the Saurveld, the 'field-cornets' and, above all, Maynier himself accused him of being a turbulent spirit stirring up strife on the frontier by his high-handed treatment of the non-whites. When Maynier himself had been expelled in February 1795 and the short-lived separatist administration had been established in Graaff-Reinet, De Buys, known for his strong Patriot and anti-Orange sentiments, was again persona grata with the Graaff-Reinet burghers for a time as on 14 June 1796 he had volunteered, moreover, to help them by controlling the Xhosa on the frontier.

His strongly anti-British influence with the Xhosa was, however, one of the main reasons why he was not included in the general amnesty of 12 September 1796, granted in Graaff-Reinet by the new British government at the Cape. De Buys was ordered to leave the Colony and on 14 February 1798 a reward of 100 rix-dollars was offered for him by the Governor, Earl Macartney. By adding political agitation to robbery and violence among the Saurveld Xhosa he condemned himself to more than 6 years as an outlaw with the Xhosa beyond the Fish River, for, despite various attempts to obtain his pardon, he kept to his expressed intention not to return as long as the Colony was under British rule. The Van Jaarsveld rebellion (21 January 1799) brought him back to the Colony for a short period (28 January 1799 to 20 February 1799), when he played a leading role in the plan to get the support of the Xhosa for the burghers. Sensing the futility of this attempt at insurrection, De Buys attempted to obtain a pardon through the landdrost before returning to Ngqika, in whose territory he must have heard of the fate of the rebel ringleaders and realized that there was no hope of his being pardoned at that juncture. He seems to have spent much of 1799 in trying to get to the Portuguese East Coast and, when this failed, he remained with the Tambookies (Thembe). Thus reports by both Boer and British leaders that he planned to invade the Colony at the head of a Xhosa army can be discounted. Even Maynier states that De Buys had no share in the Third Frontier War (1799-1802).

By 20 September 1799 De Buys was back with Ngqika on the Tyme River (present day Alice), where he met and befriended the London Missionary Society (L.M.S.) missionary Dr Johannes T. van der Kemp, with whom he ultimately settled beyond the Keiskamma on land which Ngqika granted him to satisfy De Buys, who was strongly influencing the young Rarabe chief at the time. It was also around this time that Coenraad hunting countless lions and elephants? When a liaison developed between De Buys and Ngqika's mother, Yese, a most capable and highly esteemed woman, this influence increased considerably. He never seems to have lived with her although he evidently regarded himself as a modern patriarch, during his sojourn among the Xhosa. To his credit it must be said that he remained a true friend to Van der Kemp, whom he delivered safely in the Colony on 27 April 1801, despite the difficulties of a four months' trek via the Kei River and the Stormberg mountains. During their trip to Graaff Reinet they were attacked by Bushmen several times and at least five of their party were killed. Van der Kemp nearly drowned crossing a river, but Coenraad bravely saved him by grabbing his coat and lifting him out of the water. Van der Kemp remained in Graaff Reinet to work among the many Khoikoi assembled there. De Buys himself returned for a time to the Tambookies but was with Ngqika when the Batavian Republic took over the government of the Cape in March 1803. Soon afterwards an anonymous memorandum, probably written by Maynier and submitted to the Batavian government, referred to De Buys as 'the moving cause of all unpleasantness with the Kaffirs' on account of the cruelties perpetrated by him on Bantu and Hottentots, and a man known to the Graaff-Reinet officials as a very troublesome character. But on 8 April 1803 the new Governor, General J.W. Janssens, while on his way to the frontier, wrote to De Buys, requesting his assistance in negotiating peace with the Saurveld Xhosa. After some hesitation he met the Governor at Kookhuis, on the Fish River (15 June 1803), bringing with him papers to explain his conduct during the British period and arranging shortly afterwards the historic meeting of Janssens with Ngqika at the Kat River (23 June 1803), at which De Buys was present and when he acted as the interpreter. Janssens was not impressed by De Buys's appearance and manner, but ordered him to return to the Colony with a few White renegades who lived among the Xhosa. De Buys was pardoned and was given a farm, De Opkomst aan de Kogga, in the lower Langkloof, in November 1803. After several delays, De Buys moved reluctantly to the Langkloof, where the Commissioner-General, Jacob Abraham de Mist, and his party met him at Avontuur on 31 December 1803. The man whom an associate had shortly before described to the government as 'an intriguer, without a single friend, who had been a good-for-nothing since his earliest youth and had always been a firebrand and persecutor among Christians as well as Blacks' impressed De Mist, who had a long discussion with him and remarked on his uncommon height, the strength yet admirable proportion of his limbs, his excellent carriage and a certain modesty and reserve in manner and conversation.

For almost eleven years De Buys remained on De Opkomst with his numerous household, the members of which he never returned in the official census until that of 1813, when he described his wife as a certain Elizabeth 'born in the land of the Makina, beyond the Tamboekies', by whom he had had 2 sons, Gabriel and Michiel and whom he had married at Swellendam on 7 December 1812. De Buys did not get on very well with his neighbours and, after his evidence against Martha Ferreira, the accused in a criminal trial on 3 October 1812, and the general reaction to his marriage he left the Colony in disgust. Martha was accused of abusing and murdering some of her mixed-blood ("bastaard") servants.

After living in the vicinity of what is now Beaufort-West in the Nuweveld, he and some non-whites, including members of his own household, crossed the Orange River and proved a constant menace to mission work, especially at Klaarwater (Griquatown), from where many reports about his raids reached the Colony. There is scarcely any evidence that he returned to 'Kaffirland' or played any part in the Slagtersnek rebellion of 1815, as is sometimes assumed. Attempts by the colonial authorities and Andries Stockenström, the landdrost of Graaff-Reinet, to apprehend him while he was living among the Griquas, failed. De Buys and his followers had moved, by 1815, to the western Transvaal and stayed in the north as the 'guest' of various chieftains like Moroka, Moletsane, Sekwati and Makaba. It is known that De Buys lived among the Hurutshie at their old kraal Tshwenyane (at the Enzelsberg, Marico) after 1815 and was given the sobriquet 'Môre' (his greeting to them in the morning). During 1816 three slaves from a farm in the Sueewberg escaped to the Orange River. Andries Stockenström believed that the plot had concerned more than just those three and that the slaves of field cornet [Andries Burger] and his brother Schalk Burger had for some time back been planning such a scheme, proposed by one of those now absent, who had been enticed thereto by some Bastards who had visited Graaff-Reinet, with a party of missionaries some time before, and had promised him safe retreat where he never again would be found; but the remainder not being able to procure horses, were left behind, as the principals fearing that their plot would be discovered, could wait no longer.

These Bastards who offered safe retreat to the slaves would more than likely have been Coenraad and his family who would have visited Graaff-Reinet around this time. At the same time, Stockenström believed that there were several other slaves who had escaped from the colony and who had been planning to join the Tswana, but found that the latter were so exasperated by the raids of Coenraad De Buys and other fugitives from the colony that they would not accept any escaped slaves into their ranks. Stockenström therefore allowed three burghers to go to the Griquas to recover these slaves, and wrote to the missionary at GriquaTown, William Anderson, to persuade him to return the slaves to them. In the event, they had little success. One of the slaves who had escaped from Andries Burger later achieved a certain amount of fame. Indeed, he was one of the two runaways to the north, of whom a certain amount is known. His name was Joseph Arend and he was later to become Robert Moffat's first convert.

He had been born at the Cape in about 1781 and trained as a builder and thatcher, after the manner of the Cape mixed-blood ("bastaard") servants. His treatment from his master [that] had determined him to abscond beyond the limits of the colony'. He described it as a harrowing experience: "He was two months on the journey from his master's house, north of Graaff Reinet (Graaff Reinet), till he reached the Great Orange River, seventeen days of which he lived on the bark of mimosa tree. His strength was so reduced by hunger that he could only proceed very slowly. On the 17th day, he thought he must have died had he not shot a Guinea fowl. On reaching a Coranna kraal, on the Great River, he was so exhausted that for eleven days he was hardly able to move from the spot on which he lay down. The Corannas treated him kindly, and he remained with them six months."

At this stage, living in all probability on the middle reaches of the Orange, around modern Bethulie, Arend was out of reach of organized Griqua power, as the Griquas did not move to Philippolis for another decade. Nevertheless, when he heard that the Griquas had sent three escaped slaves back to the colony, he decided to make sure he remained out of their grasp.

Moreover, he had evidently stolen a gun and probably, despite his description of the journey, a horse -something that Campbell with his evangelical rectitude did not mention - and preferred to make better use of it, and his various skills, than was possible in the precarious, uncertain and essentially poverty-stricken life of the IKora. Perhaps, in addition, he had already met Coenraad De Buys, the giant Afrikaner frontier man who at this time was moving north from the Lang Kloof to Transorangia with the clan he had himself propagated. This was largely because, it would seem, his trading activities with the Xhosa had gone sour on him, as the customers to whom he had given goods on credit had reneged on him and his Cape Town backers were now dunning him. At all events, the two, Joseph Arend and Coenraad De Buys, with the latter's adherents, formed a formidable partnership in the dangerous business of interior elephant hunting, trading and raiding. Arend was soon able to amass a considerable quantity of ivory; but because neither he nor Buys could sell directly to the colony, they made an abortive attempt to open up trade links with Delagoa Bay (Maputo). Arend, with his stock of ivory and cattle, settled down near the new mission station of Kuruman.

Unlike many of the runaways, Arend had not rejected all aspects of colonial culture. Rather he wished to gain full acceptance into it - a far-sighted decision with his progeny in mind. That and no doubt a genuine religious calling - for there were few whose evidences of conversion satisfied the fastidious Moffat, the strictest of all missionaries in this regard - led him first to build the mission house and church in Kuruman and then to be received into the church as Moffat's first full convert. But his 'owner' was also to be satisfied. Through the mediation of the traveller George Thompson, Arend used some of the ivory he had collected to buy himself free, for 1,500 Rixdollars. Within the orbit of colonial South Africa, even far beyond its borders, property rights still had to be respected even by those men and women who were the property.

Travelling northwards, Coenraad was perhaps the first white man, after the ill-fated expedition of Cowan and Donovan in 1809, to see the Limpopo River. Dr Alexander Cowan and Lieutenant E.D. Donovan led an expedition in 1808 to spy out the trade route north of Dithakong and down the Limpopo valley to Delagoa Bay. Cowan and Donovan perished on the Limpopo in the country of the Laka of chief Mapela, a group of "Tebele" traders and raiders living in the hill-forts of the Waterberg mountains south-east of present Martin's Drift. It is believed that they died of malarial fever-hardly surprising as it was now the wet summer period of 1808-1809. One story claims that they were deliberately drowned, thrown into the raging Limpopo river with their wagons, because a Laka rain-doctor claimed that the rotating wagon-wheels were tokens of witchcraft which would stop the rain. The horses of the intruders were eaten, and found to be rather disgusting, just like zebra meat.

Remains of Cowan and Donovan's expedition are said to have been found along the Limpopo River in the 1850's -including regimental buttons of the 83rd regiment of the British Army (from Donovan's tunic), pocket knives and "other trifles". In about 1821, while trekking eastwards along the river, his wife died of fever. It is said, De Buys, grief-stricken, addressed his family and left that night, never to be seen again. It is possible that he succumbed to fever while on trek in the wilderness, probably in the direction of Inhambane. The descendants that he left in the Soutpansberg when he disappeared included not only the two sons of Elizabeth, his Tambookie wife, but others, of whom four sons are known. Doris Buys, another son, is mentioned by Louis Tregardt and assisted Andries Hendrik Pogtieter in 1846 in his attack on the Pedi, east of the Olifants River. These descendants became the 'Buysvolk' (Buys People). The eldest, Gabriel, took a message for Louis Tregardt to Lourenço Marques and others rendered valuable service as wagon-drivers and assistants. The 'Buysvolk' or 'Buys-Basters' to this day inhabit the settlement of Mara-Buys and its surrounding area, thirty miles west of the town of Louis Trichardt, which was formed after 1885 on land granted to the Buys descendants in perpetual quitrent by President Paul Kruger of the Transvaal Republic.

At age 22, he had a loan farm near Willowmore (or De Opkomst near Kareedouw). Shortly afterwards he had a loan farm in the Zuurveld, east of the Bushman's River. He owned or loaned three farms in the Eastern Cape (Zuurveld): Brandwagt, De Driefonteinen and Boschfontein. The historian Peter M. Sebina derived Kgowe, Coenraad's nickname which was given to him by the Xhosa, from an ancient Tswana verb go kgowa, meaning "to peel with a knife". Because the painfully sunburnt Coenraad had left him with red skin that "was regarded as bare flesh peeled off with a knife".

After his favourite wife died of Yellow Fever he told his children that he was going and that they must stay there and not follow him, that night Coenraad left and was never seen again. By this time Coenraad was suffering quite badly with rheumatoid arthritis and had suffered a stroke which left his speech difficult and his left side of his body paralyzed. Death from malaria is highly likely. Coenraad is said to have sired 315 mixed-race children by a variety of black and Khoisan wives and had over 3000 grandchildren.

Dr Johannes Theodorus Van Der Kemp

Dr Johannes Theodorus van der Kemp was the second son of Cornelius van der Kemp, Rotterdam's leading reformed clergyman, and Anna Maria van Teylingen. Johannes was born on 17 May 1747 in Rotterdam, Holland and died on 15 December 1811 in Cape Town. He attended the Latin schools of Rotterdam and Dordrecht. He subsequently enrolled at the University of Leiden in 1763 where he studied medicine, but when his elder brother Didericus was appointed as professor of church history he abandoned his studies.

Johannes joined the dragoon guards and fathered an illegitimate child, Johanna ('Antje'), whom he brought up himself. In 1778 he fell in love with Christina ('Stijntje') Frank (d. 1791). He lived with her for a year before being reprimanded by the Prince of Orance on this irregular state of affairs. As a result he both married Stijntje, on 29 May 1779, and quit the army.

Returning to his medical studies again, this in Edinburgh, he completed his Medical Doctorate within two years. He also prepared for publication a treatise in Latin on cosmology, entitled Parmenides which was published in 1781. He returned to the Netherlands, where he practised as a doctor first in Middelburg and then near Dordrecht. On 27 June 1791, his wife and daughter Antje were drowned in a yachting accident from which he only just escaped. As a result of this incident he experienced an emotional conversion back to the reformed Christianity of his family.

He served as a medical officer during the revolutionary campaigns in Flanders and then as hospital superintendent at Zwijndrecht, near Dordrecht. Whilst there in 1797 he came to hear of the formation of the London Missionary Society. After making contact with the Society he helped found the Dutch version Nederlandsche Zendinggenootschap. He was ordained in London in November 1798 and began recruiting men for the society. He sailed from London in December 1798 as one of the first three agents sent by the society to Cape, arriving in March 1799.

Whilst there he set up the first mission press and in 1799 printed the first work in book-form in South Africa.

Genealogy
which was an 8-page translation into Dutch of the London Missionary Society's letter to the inhabitants of the Cape.

He then went into Kaffirland to work among the Xhosa people at Ngqika’s Great Place (near present day King William’s Town). On 21 September 1799 Johannes met Coenraad and very quickly became good friends at Ngqika’s Great Place. Dr Johannes Van Der Kemp was the first missionary to cross the Fish River. From the Xhosa he received the name Jank’ hanna (‘the bald man’). Van Der Kemp refused to wear shoes or a hat. This was quite odd in the day because these offered protection from the harsh environment.

The age difference between Johannes and Coenraad was about the same as that between Coenraad and Ngqika. It was during this time that Coenraad was offered a pardon by George Dundas (which was done to persuade Coenraad to move away from, and therefore stop influencing, Ngqika). Coenraad turned the offer down. On Christmas day in 1799 Ngqika asked Johannes to pray to his God for rain, which the doctor did. A few hours later it began to rain, breaking a severe drought. Ngqika was impressed. Coenraad immediately seized the opportunity and demanded several head of cattle from Ngqika for introducing Van Der Kemp to Ngqika.

On 31 Dec 1801 Coenraad Van Der Kemp, 5 English deserters, 4 other burghers and all Coenraad’s wives, concubines and their children left the Great Place under the pretence of going to hunt elephants. They were attacked several times by bushmen and this was when Coenraad saved Van Der Kemp’s life.

In May 1801 they arrived in Graaff-Reinet where Van Der Kemp remained to work amongst the many Khoi-koi and Hottentots assembled there. Coenraad returned to Ngqika’s Great Place to repair his relationship with Ngqika around the second half of 1802. Before Coenraad left Johannes gave Coenraad a tortoise shell and silver bible which Coenraad promised to read the bible to his family daily.

In 1803 he established a mission settlement for vagrant Hottentots at Bethelsdorp where local farmers accused him of harboring lawless elements. He countered with a list of alleged ill-treatment of the Hottentots by local farmers, but the evidence proved unsatisfactory and the farmers were acquitted. On 7 April 1806 he married Sara Janse, a freed slave 45 years his junior, and had four children with her. This situation and his attitudes caused great opposition from within the colony, and he was for a time ordered by the government to leave Bethelsdorp. Armed with a background in European and classical philology, he pioneered in the study of Xhosa and Khoikhoi languages.

Together with his marriage, van der Kemp’s attitudes caused great opposition from within the colony, and he was for a time ordered by the government to leave Bethelsdorp. He died a few years later, in Cape Town, on 18 December 1811, of fever, and was survived by his widow.

1120. YESE MLAWU (Howard Charles's five-times-great-great-aunt by marriage[1136]). She is no longer living.
Yese married twice. She was married to Coenraad (Kgowe) du Buys[1117] and Mlawu Karharhabe (Great House Son).

Yese was a Tembu, the tribe from which brides were traditionally chosen for Xhosa royals. Said to have been a great beauty when she was young, she became extremely fat as she matured, and as her girth expanded, so did her influence over her son and their people.
Legend has it that Yese appeared to Mlawu, the son and heir of the tribal chief, Rarabe, from a cloud of mist on a mountain, and became his wife. In 1782, when their son, Ngqika, was three years old, both Mlawu and Rarabe were killed in battle against the Tembu. Regency over Rarabe's tribe was entrusted to Yese and Ngqika's uncle, Ndlambe, until the boy came of age.
Yese's power and special status were unique in Xhosa history. Many of the Rarabe saw her as a chief and her position was never questioned, not even when she was seen to be married to a white hunter, Coenraad du Buis, who fled to Ngqika's domain after involvement in an uprising against the British who offered a reward of £200 for his capture, dead or alive. He was given protection by Ngqika for several years and subsequently became a councillor and served as chief adviser to Ngqika. But Ngqika did nothing without first consulting his mother, and treated her with the utmost reverence. Du Buis apparently produced a sizeable clan of half-castes, and it is generally accepted that this is the origin of some of the white blood still evident today in many fair-skinned Xhosas.
Yese broke the mould of Xhosa women as 'the workers, the hewers of wood and drawers of water. They tilled the gardens, built the huts, prepared the food and cared for the children. On journeys, they carried. Nevertheless, any woman of strong mind and determination imposed herself forcefully, and on every level, whether she was a commoner or royal. This is continuously evident, from Ngqika's mother all the way to Winnie Mandela.'

In 1894, nine years after the British established their dominion over Tembuland, they annexed Pondoland, making the Pondo the last of the tribes to come under colonial rule in South Africa. During Faku's reign, all the land bordered by the Umzimkulu and the Umtata Rivers, the Indian Ocean and the Drakensberg mountains, was Pondoland, but during Shaka's reign of terror, the izidstkos [clans] scattered, and many never returned to the land of their ancestors. Faku, chief of the largest and wealthiest of all the tribes, retreated with his followers into the Umgazi area. In 1842, following the death of Dingane, they were able to resettle part of their ancestral land thanks to an agreement negotiated with the British by the missionary and politician Theophilus Shepstone. In return, Shepstone extorted from the Pondo a paramount chiefship.

When Nelson Mandela was practising as a lawyer, he found a copy of the treaty recorded in a Government Gazette:
We hereby for ourselves, our heirs and successors and for and on behalf of our respective tribes acknowledge and profess that from and after the execution hereof Theophilus Shepstone, Esquire, is and hereafter shall be, the Paramount and Exclusive Chief and Ruler of ourselves and the tribes belonging to us, as also of the country or territory now occupied or hereafter to be occupied by us or any of us or any part or portion thereof.
And we acknowledge Theophilus Shepstone, Esquire, as such Supreme Chief or Ruler, as effectively and to all intents and purpose, as firmly as if he had been or had become such Paramount Chief or Ruler by succession according to our laws or usage.
The treaty also gave Shepstone 'the full and complete control of Port St John's, [the trade line to the Cape], with power and authority to do and perform every act and matter necessary to the proper supervision and management of matters of such Port, short of fiscal alienation to one mile on each side of the river nor extend up its course beyond the influence of the tide.
Faku signed the treaty on 5 June 1854, and the heads of six other clans — the Nikwe, Mbulu, Xesibe, Boto, 1%vana and the Ngutyana of Madikizela — signed identical agreements.
During Falat's lifetime, the British effectively demanded only a de jure presence in the region, but his descendants were plagued by problems inherent to the treaty that ultimately led to dispossession of their land.
The Tembu, who had dared to defy — and beat — Shaka, were incorporated into the Pondo, and Faku, in turn, held in some esteem by Shaka, bowed the knee to Madikizela.
This august chess game of shifting power, intrigue and alliances forms the backdrop for the majestic history of the Pondo tribe and the Ngutyana clan — and that of the most famous woman in South Africa's recent history, Winnie Madikizela-Mandela.
She hailed from an imposing line of authentic and indisputable leaders. During a life beset with tragedy and tern, she ceaselessly demonstrated the well-chronicled characteristics of her ancestors, who were fearless and autocratic, with a natural penchant to command, and typified their dauntless courage, stubborn pride and instinctive aptitude for survival against all odds.

Winnie Madikizela was to the manner born.

Thomas Perry was recommended to the government of the Cape Colony by the British secretary of state in 1820 and arrived in the colony soon afterwards. He was registered as surgeon, apothecary and accoucheur in the Cape Colony on 13 April 1821, though it seems that he had no formal medical qualifications. By 1822 he was officially recognised as surgeon at Graaff Reinet, and by 1826 as surgeon of the sub-district Beaufort. In 1828 he was appointed district surgeon of Graaff Reinet, being one of the first batch of ten district surgeons appointed in the colony that year (Burrows, 1958). However, in the African court calendar he was already listed as district surgeon from 1823 onwards. By 1829 he was furthermore also deputy sheriff of Graaff Reinet. On 8 March 1822 he married Maria E. Muller with whom he had seven children. In 1831 a smallpox epidemic started among the Griquas in Philippolis and spread like wild-fire among the unvaccinated tribe. It was a severe form of the disease, with a mortality of 80% or more. Perry and Dr John Atherstone* went to the town to vaccinate the people and the epidemic did not affect the rest of the colony. For some years before 1830 Perry had made observations on horse sickness, to which he referred as "this deadly lung inflamation". During 1830 he wrote to the Governor describing the symptoms of the disease both before and after death, and discussed its possible cure. The Governor thanked him for his work and referred the report to the Colonial Medical Committee for possible publication. The paper was published under Perry's name with the title "On the horse sickness" in the July-September 1830 issue of the South African Quarterly Journal (Vol. 1(4), pp. 438-442).

Genealogy
VISCOUNTESS SUSANNA MINNAAR (Howard Charles's six-times-great-grandmother[478], see Maternal Ancestry(6)) was born on 17 July 1740, in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa, to Philippe Minnaar[1771] and Susanna Roux[1772]. She died in 1800, aged about 59. Susanna married twice. She was married to Christiaan Ernst Schütte[1375] and Roelof Campher[1308] (her indirect relation).

Citation: Source 69. Unreliable or estimated.

Her 1st marriage was to Jan Harm Steenkamp. When Steenkamp died she had one child. She married her second husband, Christiaan Ernst Schutte, at the age of about 23, on 25 September 1763 in Drakenstein. They had 5 children, three girls and two boys. Ten years later he died too and then she married Roelof Campher and had five more children.

The family name "Minnaar" is derived from the name french name "Mesnard" probably misinterpreted by the dutch as "Minnaar" meaning "Lover". During the 17th century, many French Huguenots left Europe to all parts of the world, seeking refuge from persecution of non-catholics at the time. Some of the Mesnard family departed for colonies around the world such as Canada, United States and South Africa. Today the family name has since been changed to many derivatives some of which are Maynard, Meinhard and Minnaar.

In 1688 Jean Mesnard and Louise Colbott landed in Cape Town in the ship the named the Berg China. This was the same ship carrying Ariaantje Jacobs and her sister. Jean Mesnard and Louise Colbott had 4 children, the children were: Jeanne (7 years - died age 13), Georges (9 years - died age 12), Jean (10 years - died age 9), Philippe (6 years, 1681-1751). Phillip was the only one of the sons who married, and it as far as it is known, all descendants, therefore, are of the Minnaar family in southern africa are descendants of Phillip Mesnard.

Other children traveling with the adults were (but not their actual children): Andre (5 months), Jacques (8 years).

They all arrived on 04 August 1688 (departed 20 March 1688) in Table Bay on the Berg China from Rotterdam. The ship was 160 feet long, carrying 175 passengers, 19 people died and 50 sick people on board on arrival. 34 huguenots and orphan girls. Captain was Samuel Janse van Grol. The ship belonged to the Chamber of Rotterdam. This was the same ship that carried Ariaantje Jacobs.

The Minnaar family history can be dated back to 1046 AC. Over the centuries it has undergone literal changes but kept its original phonetic value [M?n?r]. Mainard origin: Vendée (Poitou, France) First trace: 1046 à Talmond (Vendée) as MAINARD, père de Motto: "Pro Deo et Rege" in Latin reads "For God and the King".

In January 1739, activities in cattle rustling between Khoisan and the settlers in the Piketberg area, the authorities decided to authorise Carel Christoffel Countz, the substitute landdrost of Stellenbosch, to confiscate any cattle that he thought had been illegally acquired and to command the offenders to appear before the Council of Justice. In attempting to carry out these instructions, however, Countz succeeded in causing a great deal of dangerous resentment among the frontiersmen. His task could not have been an easy one, for the stolen cattle had been redistributed among the herds of a number of people in order to make identification more difficult. Countz undoubtedly made some mistakes but he had a pretty shrewd idea as to the identity of the offenders. He was aided by the confessions of Matthys Willemz and Pieter de Bruyn, who had been under arrest in the Castle for a 'considerable time' before they were identified by Captain Garen in March. Willemz and De Bruyn had revealed that well over a thousand cattle had been stolen from the Namaqua. (Page 63).

  Cornelis' farm was “Nabygelegen” in the Bovlei district of Wellington. Johan Lourens was foreman (kneeg) on J. de Savoye's farm at Wamakersvallei before being granted his own farm in 1707. Title was issued to Jan for the 20 morgen 320 square rood farm Stuk Land at Bovlei, Wamakersvallei on 11 May 1712. Jan signed his name with the mark of an anchor. He was apparently an industrious settler; by then he had 9 horses, 46 cattle, 300 sheep, 2 pigs, 3000 grapevines, and had harvested 30 muids of wheat, and owned a flintlock gun and a dagger. The farm was sold to Cornelis van Rooyen on 2 Dec 1721. It was later divided and became known as Nabygelegen, by which it remains known in Bovlei, Wellington. It is situated near to the Retief property Wel van Pas on a left-hand turnoff shortly before Bains Kloof Pas.

   Die vraag watter Gerrit van Deventer met Rachel Joubert getroud was blyk 'n taai toffeie te wees. Die publikasies "Pierre Jaubert en sy gesin/ Pierre Joubert and his Family" was die eerste een oor 'n Hugenee stamvader wat verskyn het (in 1997). Sedertdien het ek voortgegaan met navorsing doen oor die Joubert-familie en het ek nog inligting bygekry. Ek het egter nie nie weer aandag gee aan Rachel Joubert en haar mans nie en jou na vraag oor Gerrit van Deventer het my na my vergrootglaas laat gryp. My antwoord: ek kan jou nie op hierdie stadium 'n antwoord gee voordat ek nie meer navorsing in die argiewe gaan doen het nie.
   Watter inligting ek wel het is dat Rachel Joubert, die elfde en jongste kind van Pierre Joubert en Isabeau Richard op 22.1.1730 te Stellenbosch getroud is met Dirk Willem CRAFFORD. Hulle het op die veeplaas, wat 'n leningplaas was, Romansriver in die Land van Waveren (die huidige Tulbagh, geboer. Romansriver het gereges na De Plaisante, die leningplaas van Rachel se vader Pierre Joubert. Dirk Willem Crafford is tussen 1740, toe hy as bewerker van die leningplaas geregister is en 1744 toe sy en Rachel Joubert se boedelventaris by die weesheer geregister is, oorlede [KAB: RLR 10/1; 2.2.1740 bl.169; MOOC 8/6 no.61 Maart 1744]. Rachel Joubert trou op 30.12.1744 te Tulbagh met Gerrit VAN DEVENTER wat voortboer op Romansriver [KAB: RLR 10/1; 2.2.1740 bl.169; G4/9/1]. Toe Gerrit en Rachel se testament op 2.1.1757 opgestel is was hy sieklik. Hy is later in die jaar oorlede [KAB: MOOC 7/1/9 no.105] en Rachel trou vir 'n derde keer op 24.8.1760 te Tulbagh met Johannes Albertus VAN EMMENES. Hy boer die volgende 36 jaar op Romansriver.
   In die drie testamente wat Rachel Joubert en haar drie mans opgestel het word slegs melding gemaak van drie kinders, aldri uit haar huwelik met Dirk Willem CRAFFORD, nl. Elisabeth Cornelia CRAFFORD, Rachel CRAFFORD en Jan CRAFFORD.
   Volgens De Villiers/Pama se Geslagsregisters van die ou Kaapse Families. Deel een 1981 bl.172 gee onder Andre die volgende kinders aan vir stamouers Gerrit Janse van Deventer en Ariaantje Jacobs se oudste kind Jan (b1) en sy vrou Magdalena Brits:

- Gerrit, gedoop Paarl 14.5.1713
- Gerrit, gedoop 12.2.1719; trou 30.10.1744 Rachel JOUBERT, weduwee van Dirk Crafford en hertrou 3.2.1754 Maria Susanna SWART by wie hy sewe kinders het.

Op bladsy 69 van dieselfde publikasie word stamvader Gerrit Jansz van Deventer se agste en jongste kind aangegee as Gerrit [moeder nie genoem nie], gedoop Paarl 14.5.1713; trou 30.10.1744 Rachel JOUBERT. Volgens die doopregister van die Drakenstein (Paarl) gemeente van die NG Kerk is 'n Gerrit VAN DEVENTER op 14.5.1713 gedoopt. Sy vader word aangegee as Gerrit JANS VAN DEVENTER, sy moeder se naam is nie ingevul nie; "als getuygen zijn s Jon Jan Gerritsz, en sijn dogter Jakomijn".

Rachel JOUBERT se broer François is op 6.11.1729 in die kerk te Drakenstein (Paarl) getroud met Geesje (Gesina) VAN DEVENTER, gedoopt 18.8.1707, 'n dogter van Gerrit Jansz en Arriaenje Jacobs. Hulle huwelik was kinderloos en op 18.2.1731 hetrou Francis JOUBERT in Kaapstad met Elisabeth CRONJE by wie hy nege kinders gehad het.

Die vraag bly nog steeds: met watter Gerrit VAN DEVENTER is Rachel JOUBERT getroud? Wie was Gerrit van Deventer (b8) se moeder?

Dirk Willem Theunis Crafford[1392], aged about 39, married Rachel Joubert, aged about 19, on 22 January 1730 in Cape, South Africa. They had two daughters:

- Elizabeth Cornelia Crafford[1080] born in 1731
- Rachel Crafford[996] born on 1 July 1736 in Stellenbosch, Western Cape, South Africa; died in Cape, South Africa on 24 August 1783.

THE ORIGINS OF SOUTH AFRICA'S FERREIRA FAMILY

Most South Africans are proud of the fact that they can trace their heritage back to Dutch, German or French forefathers. The influence of other European nations on the composition of the Afrikaner before 1807 was negligible. It is thought that it was as little as 2.9%. These particular forefathers came from Sweden (40), Denmark (37), Norway (16), Italy (4), Portugal (2), Austria (2), Poland (1), Finland (1) and Hungary (1).

The two Portuguese mentioned were both from Lisbon and both were shipwrecked along the Cape coast. They were Ignácio Ferreira (1722) and Manuel Joao d'Oliveira (1792 - "Olivier"). Of these two, the number of Ferreiras are far and away in the majority because Ignácio Ferreira was shipwrecked about 70 years before d'Oliveira. Ferreira also had many more sons than d'Oliveira - six of the ten Ferreira children were boys.

Many Afrikaners who are proud of their Germanic or Huguenot surnames will find through genealogical research that they, thanks to the Ferreiras, also have a sprinkling of Portuguese blood coursing through their veins.

Ignácio Ferreira was born in 1695 in Lisbon, Portugal. Nothing further about him can be substantiated except that the registration of his baptism could be confirmed reasonably accurately from the records of the Arquivo Nacional da Torre do Tombo of Lisbon. According to the records, Ignácio Ferreira was baptised on 1 November 1695 in the parochial church Nossa Senhora da Ajuda.
by father Luis Alurz' do Soutto. His parents, Manuel Ferreira and Antónia Francisca, were from Alcântara, a suburb of Lisbon near the harbour from where Vasco da Gama left in 1497. During this time 99% of all Portuguese were Roman Catholics.
On 16-17 June 1722 a powerful north westerly wind hit the Cape. During the night, pieces of wreckage were found on the beaches. Nothing could be done except to light a big fire on the beach. On the morning of the 17th it was ascertained that all the ships of the V.O.C, namely Standvastigheid, Rotterdam, Zoetigheid, Schotse Lotterdraayer, Lakeman and Gouda, as well as a Cape ship D'Amely and three English East India Company ships, namely Chandos, Nightinglae and Addison had all been wrecked and stranded. Ten ships were lost and more than 600 sailors perished. Today the Chandos is buried under reclaimed land near the Castle.
27 year old Ignácio Ferreira was a surviving sailor on the Chandos, a ship of 440 tons. The Chandos was on its return voyage from Bengal to England. Only 2 sailors of the Chandos drowned.
On 6 November 1735 Ignácio Ferreira, aged 40, married Martha Terblanche, a Protestant girl aged 18 years, at Stellenbosch. Two children, Maria Magdalena and Jan Leopold - who died young - were born out of wedlock before the above date. Eight more children completed the Ferreira family. Interestingly, not a single child carried the name of either parent or family. All their children were given Dutch names. They lived on the farm Hartebeeskull in the present day Mossel Bay district, at the time part of the Stellenbosch district. The original homestead and a portion of the farm is today under the water of the dam supplying Mossel Bay.
From here the Ferreira family spread through the Langkloof, Karoo, to the Gamtoos Valley, throughout the eastern Cape, South Africa and neighbouring states. Ignácio Ferreira died on 24 May 1772 at the age of 77.

THE FERREIRA FAMILY OF THE GAMTOOS VALLEY
The first white people who visited the Gamtoos Valley were hunters. During the 18th Century (1700's), a certain van Zyl was trampled by an elephant on the farm which belonged to James Wait in Kleinrivier, Hankey. These people were just visitors. It was the pioneer farmers who settled here that tamed the dense valley for later generations to prosper.
As hunters and pioneer stock farmers moved ever deeper into the countryside, the borders of the Colony had to be moved eastwards continuously. To keep in contact with the farmers and to collect "recognition" monies, more landdrost offices had to be established. Thus Swellendam came into being in 1745.
It is recorded by Theal "...a commission, comprising Lucas Faber and Joachim Mentz, reported that farmers with big herds of cattle were observed in the vicinity of the Gamtoos Valley without paying any recognition monies."
The commission recommended that the Gamtoos River be proclaimed as the border of the Colony and that all farmers east of the river must come back. In 1770 the Gamtoos River was proclaimed as the border and the Gamtoos Valley was part of the Swellendam district. In 1804, it became part of Uitenhage district.
From 1765 farmers were given permits to live on the farms. No title deeds were given. As long as the rental was paid, improvements could be made which could be sold again or be inherited by children, but there was no ownership. After 1806, under English rule, property rights were issued although farmers had been living on their "properties" for quite a long time.
Of these pioneer farmers, descendants with surnames such as Vermaak, Kok, Ferreira, Muller, Rautenbach, Wait, vander Watt, Scheepers and Rens are still today farming in the Gamtoos Valley.
1820 Settler families also had a great influence in the Gamtoos Valley. Surnames such as Bean, Colling, Melville, Williams, Jones, Seal, Smith, Young, Henry and Whitehead are still found in the Valley area. Not all of these families were 1820 Settlers. Some settled both before and after 1820.
At one stage about 20% of all inhabitants in the Gamtoos Valley were of the Ferreira family. Many had the same names so that nicknames had to identify the families. Thus there were the Eerlikes (honest ones), Langsalmons, Matabelies, Giele, Wittes (white ones), Stompies (short ones), Salies, Vales (grey ones), Swartes (black ones),
Sk eles (squint-eyed ones), Konings (kings), Fisante (pheasants), Atties, Jape, van der Poel, Bloubakkies, Geelbekke etc.
Today the number of Ferreiras has decreased, but there are still enough to field at least two senior rugby and two netball teams, consisting solely of Ferreira family members, to play against the rest during the annual Ferreira Sports Day in November.
2006 commemorated the day 40 years before when the first rugby team of Patensie, representing the Gamtoos Valley, consisted of Ferreiras only, the manager of the team included!
The town Patensie was established on 4 morgen of land donated by Edward Dawson Ferreira, born 13 December 1866. Patensie has four streets named after the Ferreira family, namely Fred Ferreira Road, Johnny Ferreira Road, Paul Ferreira Street and Teddy Ferreira Street.

Stepping out of line
While many slave owners did not seem to mind socialising with Free Blacks or using female slaves to satisfy their lusts and produce more slaves for them, there were plenty of others who drew the line with their own slaves.

For quite a few slave owners, consort ing with a slave, outside of giving them orders, was a horrifying concept.

Anne Marais was of French Huguenot descent and came from a very traditional Cape Huguenot family. Her grandfather, Charles Marais, was murdered by a Khoikhoi man who had bludgeoned him to death with a stone when Marais attempted to stop him from stealing his unripe water-melons. Her grandmother, Catherine, carried on farming with her four children, and the farm Le Plaisir Merle remained in the Marais family for generations. Married at nineteen to another Huguenot descendant, Francois Retief, Anne was the mother of two small children by the time she was twenty-two. The couple owned the Olifantskop farm, and with the ownership of a farm in those days came slave labour. The group of slaves, consisting of three males named Claas, Januarie and Augustus, 18 and one female slave, Aurora, continually gave the Retiefs problems. Most of these issues stemmed from the rivalry between Claas and Augustus for Aurora's affections.

One evening in October 1744, Retief ordered the slaves to stop the farm dogs barking. But instead of yelling at the dogs, Claas muttered a few words in their direction, which obviously had no effect whatsoever. Anne, a young mother, probably frustrated while trying to get her children to sleep, shouted out sarcastically, 'Can't the handsome ape do better than that?' In the still country air, her voice carried, and Claas, all ears, heard every word. Fixating on the word 'handsome', Claas seems to have gained the impression that his mistress secretly desired him as a lover. The next morning while working on the fields, Claas informed Januarie and Augustus that the 'handsome ape' would soon be sleeping with their mistress. He evidently had women on his mind constantly, because, only an hour later, when the labourers were called into the farm kitchen to have their breakfast, he began fighting with Augustus. As usual, Aurora was at the centre of the conflict, which came to a brief halt when Augustus was ordered to saddle Retief's horse so he could attend a commando exercise in Stellenbosch. When the slaves returned to the fields, the argument resumed, with Claas swearing to turn vampire and suck Augustus' blood if he did not leave Aurora alone. The threat was repeated to Augustus and the men started to brawl, during which time Claas, true to his threat, bit Augustus, who subsequently punched Claas on the head and on his back. Hobbling, the two made their way to the farmhouse to complain to their mistress. Anne was busy entertaining a breakfast guest, her neighbour and a Free Black named Sinopaij, and the two were tucking into their meals when they heard the uproar coming from the two slaves, still hurling insults at each other at the tops of their voices.

Anne ran to the kitchen door and yelled at them that she was sick and tired of their continual fighting over Aurora, and that she wished to goodness she had never bought the female slave. Seeing the opportunity of having Aurora to himself, and getting rid of Claas at the same time, Augustus informed Anne of Claas's boast that he would easily be able to seduce her in spite of being a black slave. Claas was not black but an Indian from Bengal, which made little difference to Anne. Realising the trouble he was in, Claas took to his heels and found Januarie in the fields planting rows of peas, who he implored to run away with him. Januarie, who knew where his bread was buttered, continued stoically to plant peas. Anne's initial response to the entire revelation was to sink into a chair and cry her heart out in anger and shock. Fortunately, Sinopaij was able to keep a clear head, and she packed Anne and her children into a wagon to head to her uncle's farm. On the way there, they passed three male neighbours who they asked to take Claas to the Landdrost Court in Stellenbosch after telling them the story. Claas's punishment for daring to consider himself an equal to his mistress was a lashing, branding with a hot iron, and to be chained. He was probably sold to another farmer since he would no longer have been welcome on the Retief property. Augustus, on the other hand, was a slave valued by his owners. He was still alive when his master died, who declared in his will that his heirs were not allowed to sell their loyal slave. With Claas's exit, he also had Aurora all to himself One of Anne and Francois's descendants was Pier Retief, the Voortrekker leader who was murdered by the Zulu chief Dingaan.

While the outcome of the entire Claas saga had a relatively positive conclusion for the Retiefs, there were incidents in which dealings with slaves could turn out rather badly - both for the slaves and their white superiors. Driekoppen, the name of one of the University of Cape Town's student residences in Mowbray, derives from a drunken murderous spree by three slaves in 1724. They came from the Ecklenberg estate in Rondebosch, where they were parrying one evening with slaves from Rustenberg. The booze flowed and the dice rolled, but when the drinks ran out, the party marched over to the nearby Varietas farm which had an inn on the premises. Hammering on the door of the inn, they woke the manager up, demanding that he sell them alcohol. He refused, as it was 1 a.m., which angered the slaves and resulted in them murdering the innkeeper and his employees with an axe. Thereafter, the slaves looted the inn and made off with their booty to their respective slave quarters. They never thought of hiding their ill-gotten swag however, which was used as incriminating evidence against them when the murder was investigated. The slaves were promptly executed, and their three heads were hoisted onto poles outside the inn as a warning to other slaves with murderous thoughts. The inn was later named Driekoppen Inn after this event.

Anna married her cousin, once removed, Francois Retief[2069].

  Prof. Hermann Giliomee skryf in Historia 2001 oor hom:
  Die eerste rekord wat ons het van 'n blanke wat homself 'n Afrikaner noem, is 'n dokument van 1707. Soos omtrent alle dinge wat die Afrikaners raak, is die hele episode in groot dubbelsinnigheid en omstredeheid gehul. Sekere historici vermeld net die feit dat 'n jong man Hendrik Biebouw van Duits-Hollands afkoms (aanvanklik het hulle sy van verkeerdelik verfrans) op 'n dag op Stellenbosch uitgeroep het: 'Ek is 'n Afrikaner!' Die konteks wat hulle beklemtoon, is die stryd wat die vryburgers gevoer het teen Willem Adriaan van der Stel en ander vooraanstaande amptenare wie se onwettige privaat boerdery gedreig het om die vryburgers finansieel te knak. Biebouw se kreet word deur hulle geïnterpreteer as dié van 'n man wat van sy nasieskap bewus geword het. Ander meld die feit dat Biebouw op die betrokkie Sondag op Stellenbosch dronk en baie rumoerig was. Die landdros, Johannes Starrenburg, 'n geleerde Duitser wat die groot regstudies van sy tyd gelees het, het hulle gemaan om stil te bly en 'n paar houte met 'n karwats na Biebouw gemik. Hierop het die jong man uitgeroep: 'k wil niet loopen, 'k ben een Africaander al slaat die landrost myn dood, of al setten hij mijn in den tronk. Hy wil, nog wil niet swygen. Die arme Hendrik Biebouw, as die sogenaamde eerste Afrikaner, het 'n treurige einde gehad. Die regering wou die opstandige jong blanke leeglopers – want dit is wat Biebouw was – 'n deeglike les leer. Hy is in die tronk gegoed, afgeransel en verbann. Sy skipt het naby die huidige Australië gesign. Hy het waarskynlik die land gehaal en daar is 'n teorie dat hy die siekte porfirie aan die inboorlinge oorgedra het. Daar is geen Biebouw afstammelinge in Suid-Afrika nie. Die eerste Afrikaner was ook die eerste immigrant na
There have been many arguments as to who were the first Europeans to visit Australia. However a not well known story is that of what were possibly the first Europeans to actually live here. Long before Cook the Dutch had been using Australia as a navigational aid en-route to Batavia. Now in 1712 the vessel Zuytdorp was wrecked off the coast of W.A. Although little is known of the fate of those on board, over the years it has been noted that a handful of the mid west Aborigines do have some physical similarities to Europeans and that artefacts dating back several hundred years have used bindings tied using Dutch seamen's knots. Although this would seem to give some remote suggestion that some of those Dutch could have survived and actually bred with Aborigines, it is not very convincing.

Genetics though gives us another avenue to follow. Porphyria variegata is a rare disease that would seem to have been prevalent in Holland in the 1600s/1700s and most cases were traceable to only two families. It spread from Holland to the Amish community in America and to the Dutch communities in South Africa. Now interestingly at the time that the Zuytdorp made it's fateful voyage it stopped in South Africa. One of Capetowns residents, a young man called Hendrick Bivault was descended from one of those two families, Bivault was in some sort of trouble with the Capetown authorities and was deported aboard the Zuytdorp, therefore sharing the same fate as everyone else aboard.

This now brings us to the most convincing evidence that he probably survived and the possibility that his ancestors are this day living inn the mid west of W.A. It has been found that there is an incidence among mid west aborigines of porphyria variegata that exists nowhere ele in Australia.

Dietlof is in 1695 oorlede, hulle het toe gewoon op die suidwestelike hoek van vandag se Burg en Houtstraat in Kaapstad. Hierdie eindem is toe verkoop aan die vrywantes Jan DE SOUZA en Mariejte PIETERSZ VAN DE KAPA. Sy trou toe 'n maand later met Jacob PLEUNIS.

Die seun Hendrik het beroemdheid gekry toe hy op 6 Maart 1707 vir landdros Starrenburg van Stellenbosch gesê het "Ik ben een Africander". Hendrik was maar 17 jaar oud toe hy en sy drie maats (Jan Cloete, Hans Beijer en Matthys Greef) dronk was en daar 'n botsing met die landdros was. Hendrik word beskou as die eerste persoon wat homself geïdentifiseer het as 'n "Africander". Hy het ook die landdros met 'n melksak geslaan.

Aan die bo-eent van die geskiedenisryke Dorpstraat op Stellenbosch, voor die tehuis Utopia, onder 'n groot eikeboom, is daar 'n gedenksteen ter ere van Hendrik B. Op die plaat bo-op die groot klip staan: "Ik ben een Afrikaner"

So het die 17-jarige Hendrik Bivault op 6 Maart 1707 in die watermaal wat in hierdie omgewing gestaan het, tydens 'n woordeviseling met landdros Starrenburg, gesê. Sover bekend was dit die eerste keer dat iemand homself 'n Afrikaner genoem het. (F.A.K. Skakelkomitee en die Universiteit van Stellenbosch 7-11-1979) Schoeman p 500, meld dat op 8 Maart in die Dagregister word die volgende Engelse vertaling van Leibbrandt geege: "two unmarried agriculturists, apprehended for violence and wantonness committed in the corn mill of Stellenbosch also for opposition against his person", en op 22 Maart word daar melding gemaak, "the three unmarried men who had committed the offences at the Stellenbosch mill were condemned to be thrashed by the soldiers before the gate of the Fort, and to pay each Rds 12 for the benefit of the plaintiff. Starrenburgh het blykbaar versoek dat hulle uit die kolonie moet verban word, volgens 'n resolusie van die vorige jaar, "eenopende gezelzen en lediggangers ... vooral de sulcke die van geen goed gedrag zijn ... soo nu en dan van die hand te setten, en deselve tot suiveringe deser residentie als soldaten met f9 ter maand naar India te versenden".

Starrenburgh het hierdie versoek op 28 Maart weer gemaak. Ons hoor nie weer van Hendrik Biebouw nie, en hy was sekerlik dan na die Ooste gestuur. In 1708 is sy naam uitgekrap in die Stellenbosse monsterrol met die woord "weg" langs sy naam geskryf.

Hendrik het geen nageslag by die Kaap nagelaat nie. Daar is 'n teorie dat hy dalk 'n genealogiese konneksie tussen Afrikaner-Aboriginal kan wees. Philip Playford dink dat Hendrik dalk die Kaap verlaat het op 22 April 1712 met die skip Zuytdorp. Hierdie skip het vergaan aan die Wes-Australiëseus. Daar is baie goeie redes om te glo dat 'n aantal van die skeepsvolk oorleef het en dalk deel geword het met die plaaslike Aborigines, dit is op grond van die volgende feite:

1. Both have a common genetic disease Porphyria Variegata. Dr Geoffrey Dean from Dublin an expert in this disease looked at this common connection. One of the theories is that both Hendrik Biebouw's mother and his mother's half sister Willemynitje Ariens de Witt (married to Gert Jansz van Deventer) were the carriers of this disease. However more recent research indicate that they are two different strands of the disease.

2. Many of the Aborigines suffer from the Ellis-van-Crevell syndrome. This is where one has an extra toe or finger, this phenomenon also occurs amongst the Amish in America who are from Dutch background.

3. Playford suggest from archeological excavations that 30 persons may have survived the shipwreck. They located campfires, huts, coins, glass and a belt buckle.

4. Philip Pendal chairman of the Western Australian government's "Select Committee on Ancient Shipwrecks" states - "growing body of opinion that some survivors of the Zuytdorp lived in the area between Kalbarri and Shark Bay" "The evidence is not conclusive, but it had far more substance than previously thought."

5. A number of Aborigines from that area have square jaws and have blond hair. As noted Hendrik left no progeny at the Cape. His half sister Susanna did leave descendants.
Onlangse inligting da daarop dat die porphyria siekte onder die Aborigines nie identies is, as onder die Afrikaners nie.

Hendrik left no descendants at the Cape. ... Philip Playford thinks that Hendrik may have left the Cape on 22 April 1712 on the ship Zuytdorp. This ship foundered on the west coast of Australia.

One of the theories is that both Hendrik Biebouw's mother and his mother's half sister Willemijntjie Ariens de Witt (married to Gert Jansz van Deventer) were the carriers of this disease. However more recent research indicate that they are two different strands of the disease.

In March 1707, the landdrost of the small town Stellenbosch, Johannes Starrenburg, reported that on the preceding Sunday he found four young men racing on horseback 'like madmen'. After causing havoc, the four proceeded in a drunken state to the Company mill and, with 'many curses', they tossed the scales around. The miller's attempts to restrain them were to no avail. When Starrenburg, a German, came upon the scene he rebuked them, hitting a seventeen-year-old youth with his cane and ordering him to leave. Hendrik Biebouw shouted: 'I shall not leave, I am an Afrikaner, even if the landdrost beats me to death or puts me in jail. I shall not, nor will I be silent.' (‘. . . ik wil niet loopen, ‘k ben een Afrikaander al slaat die landdrost mij mijn in den tronk. Ik sal, nog wil niet stil swijgen’). The landdrost did put him and the others in jail, and, in a letter to the government in Cape Town, urged that the four be banished. Soldiers publicly thrashed three of the young men a month later.

For Biebouw to use the name for himself was strange. At the beginning of the eighteenth century the term Afrikaner was applied to locally born slaves and free blacks and the Khoikhoi. Biebouw’s public protest in Stellenbosch was the first occasion on which a European was recorded as using Afrikaner as a name for himself. But was the term more than merely descriptive? Did he only want to indicate that he was a native of Africa (in contrast with immigrants from Europe), or did he imply that Afrikaners of European descent had rights and enjoyed a status that Landdrost Starrenburg, an immigrant, ought not to ignore? It may be significant that the landdrost, the miller and the writer of the report were all European immigrants, while the four young men were all born locally.

Biebouw’s father could not sign his own name and was very poor. Before marrying Hendrik’s mother, a Dutch orphan, he lived with a slave woman who bore him a daughter. It is significant that Hendrik Biebouw, with his tangled roots, did not use any of the existing identifications. He did not say – as one would expect – that he was a German, a Christian or a white. He said: I am from this continent, I am an African.

Dietlof had four children with Willemijntjie before he died in 1695. One of these was a son Hendrik. Dietlof’s wife remarried, sold the Hout street property to a Free Black couple and moved to Stellenbosch. This was the world in which 17 year old Hendrik had grown up. This young man’s world was sans identity boundaries and disconnected from the establishment world. He saw himself as one of those local Afrikaners, like his sister born of a slave mother and other mates of mixed roots. He certainly would have been aware that at the time the word Afrikaner was not generally used by members of polite white society to describe themselves no matter what gripes they had with the VOC.

At the age of 17, in March 1707, young Hendrik and his mates were apprehended for being drunk and disorderly. When beaten, chased and chastised by the Landdrost of Stellenbosch, a German by the name of Starrenburg, Hendrik wanted to know who Starrenburg, an immigrant, thought he was to be ordering about a local lad and emphasised that he was an African. He shouted Ik wil niet loopen. Ik ben een Afrikaander al slaat die landdrost mijn dood, of al setten hij mijn in den tronk. Ik sal nog wil niet swygen. (I shall not leave. I am an Afrikaner, even if the landdrost beats me to death or puts me in jail, I shall not, nor will I be silent.) Starrenburg called for the Governor to banish Hendrik Biebouw but this did not happen. He and his three mates were publicly thrashed by soldiers as a punishment. Some years later as an employee of the VOC he did end up on a ship and left the Cape colony. Various conflicting accounts exist as to what may have happened to Hendrik after he left the Cape. He had no known offspring.

The story further illustrates that the Afrikaner identity first emerged as an identity within the coloured and mixed working class community outside of the powerful colonial establishment and respectable classes.

1638. MARIA CATHARINA BIEBOUW (Howard Charles's cousin, eight times removed[1909]) was born on 2 March 1692, in Cape Town, South Africa, to Dietlof Biebouw[1880] and Willemijntjie Adriaanse Ariens de Witt[1879]. Jacoba Wilhelmina Botma born in 1753

1659. JOHANNA CONTERMAN (Howard Charles's cousin, eight times removed[1953]) was born in 1701 to Hans Jacob Conterman[1894] and Anna Catherine Cleef[1893]. She died in 1750, aged about 49.

1660. ANDRIES GAUCHE (Howard Charles's cousin's husband, eight times removed[2312]) was born in 1698 to Andre Gauche and Jeanne de Clerq. He died in 1759, aged about 61.

Andries Gauche married Johanna Conterman[1659]. They had three daughters:
Johanna Gouws[2309] born in 1725 in Cape of Good Hope; died in 1785 in Cape of Good Hope
Helena Gauche[1673] born in 1732
Hester Gous[1075] born on 8 July 1732; died in 1771

1661. PIETER BAREND BOTHA (Howard Charles's cousin, eight times removed[1970]) was born on 24 December 1741, in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa, to Christoffel Botha[1895] and Catharina Blom[1896]. He died on 25 August 1782, aged 40.

1662. ANNA SUSANNA DU TOIT (Howard Charles's cousin's wife, eight times removed[2346]) was born in 1745 to Francois du Toit[1737] and Petronella Margaretha van der Merwe[2306]. She died in 1794, aged about 49.
Anna Susanna married twice. She was married to Pieter Barend Botha[1661] and Izak Marais[1725] (her indirect relation).

Pieter Barend Botha[1661], aged 23, married Anna Susanna du Toit, aged about 20, on 3 October 1765 in Tulbagh, Breede River DC, Western Cape, South Africa. They had one son:
Pieter Barend Botha born in 1770

1663. THEUNIS CHRISTOFFEL BOTHA (Howard Charles's cousin, eight times removed[1971]) was born in 1750, in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa, to Christoffel Botha[1895] and Catharina Blom[1896]. He died in 1814, aged about 64, in Buffelsfontein, Port Elizabeth, Cape, South Africa.
Theunis Christoffel married three times. He was married to Cornelia Margaretha Lombard[1664], Anna Margaretha Potgieter[1665] and Dorothea Magdalena Goosen[1666].
1664. CORNELIA MARGARETHA LOMBARD (Howard Charles's cousin's wife, eight times removed[2345]) was born on 30 September 1749, in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa, to Anthonie Lombard[2043] and Isabella Potgieter[1992]. She died on 1 December 1788, aged 39, in Tulbagh, Breede River DC, Western Cape, South Africa. Theunis Christoffel Botha[1663], aged about 19, married Cornelia Margaretha Lombard, aged 20, on 20 May 1770. They had three children:
- Christoffel Jacobus Botha born in 1773
- Catharina Maria Botha born in 1774; died in 1834
- Johanna Ettresia Botha[1539] born on 19 April 1783; died in 1809

1665. ANNA MARGARETHA POTGIETER (Howard Charles's cousin's wife, eight times removed[2348]) was born on 1 November 1753, in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa, to Hermanus Phillipus Potgieter[1988] and Elsje Botha[2038]. She is no longer living. Anna Margaretha married twice. She was married to Theunis Christoffel Botha[1663] and Theunis Botha[816] (her indirect relation).

Theunis Christoffel Botha[1663], aged about 20, married Anna Margaretha Potgieter, aged 17, on 12 May 1771 in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa. They had five children:
- Jacobus Theodorus Botha[669] born in 1776
- Amerentia Botha[866] born in 1778
- Cornelia Jacoba Botha[1046] born in 1780; died in 1848 in "Doornkloof" Alexandria, Eastern Cape, South Africa
- Jacoba Johanna Botha born on 29 January 1787 in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa
- Hermanus Botha[1059] born in 1789; died in 1836

Theunis Botha[816], aged 20, married Anna Margaretha Potgieter, aged 17, on 12 May 1771.

1666. DOROTHEA MAGDALENA GOOSEN (Howard Charles's cousin's wife, eight times removed[2344]) was born in 1774 to Willem Goosen[1600] and Sara Solomina Gouws[1599]. She is no longer living. Theunis Christoffel Botha[1663], aged about 50, married Dorothea Magdalena Goosen, aged about 26, on 2 November 1800. They had two daughters:
- Cornelia Margaretha Botha born in 1804
- Anna Johanna Botha born in 1809; died in 1845

1667. THEUNS CHRISTOFFEL BOTHA (Howard Charles's cousin, eight times removed[1968]) was born in 1751 to Christoffel Botha[1895] and Catharina Blom[1896]. He died in 1814, aged about 63.

1668. CATHARINA MARIA POTGIETER (Howard Charles's cousin's wife, eight times removed[2347]) was born on 26 May 1758, in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa, to Hans Jurgens Potgieter[1995] and Elsie van Staden[1996]. She died in 1840, aged about 82, in Houtkoppies, Piet Retief, Transvaal, South Africa. Catharina Maria married twice. She was married to Douw Gerbrand Steyn and Theuns Christoffel Botha[1667]. Douw Gerbrand Steyn, aged 28, married Catharina Maria Potgieter, aged 17, on 7 January 1776. They had two daughters:
- Elizabeth Steyn[1270] born in 1774; died in 1815

He entered the service of the VOC (Vereenigde Oostindische Kompagnie, the Dutch trading conglomerate that opened a refreshment station at the Cape of Good Hope under Jan van Riebeeck in 1652). He served the company as a professional soldier. His name appears in the archival documents: Dutch Asiatic Shipping. In one publication of the Serie Rijks Geschiedkundige Publicatiën (RGP part 166) his name appears in the Scheepsoldyboek (quartermaster’s log) of one of the 18 ships, the "Oudenaarde", that regularly sailed between the Netherlands, Cape Town and Batavia (Indonesia, the East Indies). The "Oudenaarde" was built in 1708 in Amsterdam. Her maiden voyage started on 27 October 1709. She sailed from Texel, Holland, to Cape Town. She arrived on 7 April 1710. Christian Emmery captained the voyage. Die ship was sold to a British company in 1734 in Indonesia. She remained in service until 5 February 1787, when she was scuttled.

In the quartermaster’s log, the spelling of the founding father of the Schutte family in South Africa was called Christian (one a) Ernst Schüt (Dutch pronunciation: Sgut). He boarded the "Oudenaarde" on 7 November 1726, at Texel. He was 23 years old. Captain Isaak Hage was at the helm of the 858-ton ship. Aboard were 133 seamen, 58 soldiers (including CE Schutte) en 7 labourers. Die ship landed at Cape Town on 9 March 1727, after a journey of four months. It sailed again on 28 March for Batavia, arriving there on 22 June 1727. On board then were only 18 seamen, 13 soldiers and 3 labourers. Did the other jump ship, die, or what?

Christiaan Ernst Schutte served with the VOC for 9 years. Aged 32, he became a Vryburger, a free burgher of the Cape Colony, in 1734. He went to work for his uncle Andreas Schutte on his farm as a builder. Later he lived on the farm Rustenburg (today Rustenberg) just north of Stellenbosch. He sold the farm to Bernhardus van Biljon. He was married to Susanna Fourie on 6 Dec 1742 in Stellenbosch, when he was 49 years old, and she was 48. Was it a marriage of love or convenience, I wonder? Records show that Christiaan Ernst received a soldiers pension from the VOC until 1766, and that is likely to be when he died. Emmerentia van Rensburg Register. De Villiers Pama p 864. Christiaan kom aan die Kaap aan in 1727 as soldaat en later boukneu op die plaas van sy oom Andreas Schutte. Hy word ’n burger in 1734 en woon dan op die plaas Rustenburg, distrik Stellenbosch.

Willem Landman was born Abt. 1715 in the Netherlands and arrived from Amsterdam at the Cape of Good Hope as a soldier in the service of the Dutch East India Company (VOC) aboard the ship "Paddenburg" in 1735. He became a "vryburger" (literally, free citizen) of the Cape in 1744, discharged from the service of the VOC and given land to farm. As part of his release agreement with the VOC, the produce from this land was to be sold to the VOC. Willem married (1) Catharina Hoffman on March 10, 1747 in Paarl (Drakenstein), Cape, South Africa. Catharina was the daughter of Johannes Hoffman and Louisa van die Kaap (it is likely that Louisa, with "van die Kaap" as her designated surname, was the child of a slave). Catharina was born Abt. 1707 in Cape, South Africa, and died in 1767 in Cape, South Africa. Willem married (2) Johanna Jonker on May 29, 1768 in Paarl (Drakenstein), Cape, South Africa, daughter of Adolph Jonker and Maria Langeveld. Johanna was born Abt. 1747 in Cape, South Africa, and died in the Cape, South Africa. Willem died in April 1778 in Drakenstein, Cape, South Africa.

Johan Christoffel Rog[1780], aged about 23, married Martha Maria de Jager, aged about 19, on 9 December 1753 in Stellenbosch, Western Cape, South Africa.

1783. FREDERIK JOHANNES SCHEEPERS (Howard Charles's seven-times-great-grandfather[924], see Maternal Ancestry(7)) was born on 19 May 1715, in Cape Town, South Africa, to Coenraad Jacobz Scheepers[1821] and Maria Botha[1822]. He died in 1791, aged about 76.

1784. CATHARINA HOFFMAN (Howard Charles's seven-times-great-grandmother[925], see Maternal Ancestry(7), Maternal Ancestry(7) and Maternal Ancestry(7)) was born on 1 May 1707, in Paarl, Cape Colony, South Africa, to Johannes Hoffman[2102] and Maria Louisa van de Kaap[2103]. She died (Probably died of smallpox) in 1767, aged about 60, in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa.

Catharina married four times. She was married to Lourens Pietersz Erasmus[1785], Fredrich Hubner[1985] (her indirect relation), Frederik Johannes Scheepers[1783] and Willem Adriaan Landman[1778].

Frederik Johannes Scheepers[1783], aged 21, married Catharina Hoffman, aged 29, on 7 January 1737 in Stellenbosch, Western Cape, South Africa. They had one son:

Frederik Scheepers[1383] born in 1739 in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa; died in 1791 in Paarl, Breede River DC, Western Cape, South Africa

Willem Adriaan Landman[1778], aged about 31, married Catharina Hoffman, aged 39, on 10 March 1747 in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa. They had two children:

Magdalena Maria Landman[1424] born in June 1748 in Cape Town, South Africa; died in 1835 in Doornkloof, George, South Africa

Johannes Abraham Landman[1381] born on 1 February 1750 in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa; died in 1817 in Slagtersnek, Cape, South Africa

1785. LOURENS PIETERSZ ERASMUS (Howard Charles's seven-times-great-grandmother's previous husband[1356]) was born in 1704, in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa, to Pieter Erasmus and Maria Elizabeth Joosten. He died on 22 October 1760, aged about 56, in Agter Bokkeveld, Drakenstein, South Africa.

Lourens Pietersz married twice. He was married to Catharina Hoffman[1784] and Martha Pienaar[1708] (his indirect relation).

Lourens Pieters Erasmus, aged about 23, married Catharina Hoffman[1784], aged 20, on 7 February 1728 in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa. They had one son:

Lourens Erasmus[1430] born in 1729; died on 12 December 1794 in Land Van Waveren (Tulbagh), Cape of Good Hope, Sou

Lourens Pieters Erasmus, aged about 27, married Martha Pienaar[1708], aged about 14, on 9 December 1731. They had one son:

Pieter Erasmus born in 1731; died in 1757

1786. GERHARDUS OOSTHUIZEN (Howard Charles's seven-times-great-grandfather[928], see Maternal Ancestry(7)) was born on 27 April 1703, in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa, to Johannes Oosthuizen and Maria Elizabeth Joosten. He died in 1757, aged about 54.

Gerhardus married twice. He was married to Magdalena Neef[1787] and Dorothea Maria Bekker[1788].

Gerhardus Oosthuizen[1786], aged 38, married Magdalena Neef, aged about 20, on 21 January 1742. They had six children:

Johanna Magdalena Oosthuizen[1384] born in 1742 in Paarl, Breede River DC, Western Cape, South Africa

Elsje Oosthuizen[1433] born in 1744 in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa; died in 1788 in Cape, South Africa

Johannes Hendrik Oosthuizen[1434] born in 1746

Marthinus Gerhardus Oosthuizen[1436] born in 1748 in Cape Town, South Africa; died on 6 February 1838 in kwaMathiwanle, Hlomo Amabutho, Natal, South Africa

Petronella Oosthuizen[1438] born in 1750

Nicolaas Jacobus Oosthuizen[1440] born on 21 July 1754

1787. MAGDALENA NEEF (Howard Charles's seven-times-great-grandmother[929], see Maternal Ancestry(7)) was born in 1721 to Heinrich Neef[2106] and Dirkje Helm[2107]. She died in 1757, aged about 36.

Gerhardus Oosthuizen[1786], aged 38, married Magdalena Neef, aged about 20, on 21 January 1742. They had six children:

Johanna Magdalena Oosthuizen[1384] born in 1742 in Paarl, Breede River DC, Western Cape, South Africa

Elsje Oosthuizen[1433] born in 1744 in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa; died in 1788 in Cape, South Africa

Johannes Hendrik Oosthuizen[1434] born in 1746

Marthinus Gerhardus Oosthuizen[1436] born in 1748 in Cape Town, South Africa; died on 6 February 1838 in kwaMathiwanle, Hlomo Amabutho, Natal, South Africa

Petronella Oosthuizen[1438] born in 1750

Nicolaas Jacobus Oosthuizen[1440] born on 21 July 1754

1788. DOROTHEA MARIA BEKKER (Howard Charles's seven-times-great-grandfather's wife[1366]) was born in 1708, in Paarl, Breede River DC, Western Cape, South Africa, to Pieter Bekker and Jeanne de Klerk. She died in 1770, aged about 62.

Dorothea Maria married four times. She was married to Dirk Marx, Hercules du Preez[2278] (her indirect relation), Jan Theodorus Marx and Gerhardus Oosthuizen[1786].

Dirk Marx, aged about 37, married Dorothea Maria Bekker, aged about 32, in 1740 in Cape, South Africa.

They had three children:

Maria Dorothea Susanna Marx[1087] born on 3 April 1746 in Cape, South Africa
Johannes Petrus Marx born on 31 March 1748 in Mossel Bay, Western Cape, South Africa; died in 1779 in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa
Hester Marx[1248] born on 28 October 1753 in Knysna, Cape, South Africa; died on 26 September 1827 in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa

Jan Theodorus Marx married Dorothea Maria Bekker. They had two children:

Johanna Isabella Marx born in 1740; died in 1793
Johannes Petrus Marx[620] born in 1748 in Mossel Bay, Western Cape, South Africa; died in 1781 in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa

Gerhardus Oosthuizen[1786] married Dorothea Maria Bekker. They had one daughter:

Sara Solomina Oosthuizen[1442] born on 23 December 1725 in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa

1789. CORNELIS GERRITSZ VAN NIEKERK (Howard Charles's seven-times-great-grandfather[947], see Maternal Ancestry(8), Maternal Ancestry(12) and Maternal Ancestry(13)) was born in 1667, in Nijkerk, Gelderland, Netherlands, to Gerrits van Nieuwkerk[2108] and Cornelia Slecht[2109]. Cornelis Gerritz was a Farmer. He owned farms: Bloemendal and Stellenberg, which he left to his widow. In 1671, aged about 4, he immigrated to Nijkerk, Gelderland, Netherlands. He died on 15 August 1710, aged about 43, in Tulbagh, Breede River DC, Western Cape, South Africa.

He owned the farms: Bloemendal and Stellenberg which he left to his widow.

According to the inventory of 1710, they also owned an uninhabited farm on the Old Kuils Rivier. They had 60 cattle, 700 sheep, 8 horses and 3 pigs. They owned, too, five male slaves, one female slave and three slave children.

Although sentenced on 9th August 1706 by the corrupt government of Willem Adriaan van der Stel (CJ 782, 10) to banishment on Mauritius, this sentence would seem to have been passed in his absence, since the Landrost Starrenburg, in a letter to the Council dated 2 October 1706 describes Cornelis Nieuwkerk as not to be apprehended. Also the Council at the Cape received notification in March 1707 that the settlement at Mauritius was to be abandoned and no evidence seems to survive that any of these rebels were, in fact, deported.

The decision of the Council of the Seventeen Gentlemen, governing body of the Dutch East India Company, to recall the Governor W.A. van der Stel, received around May 1707, also declared that any of the protesters who had been imprisoned or sent away should be released or allowed to return. Certainly the yearly records of the Cape burgers, known as the Monsterollen (VC 49) so carefully transcribed by GM Theal in the 1890s, record that Cornelis and his wife Maria were present at the Cape in all the years 1706 to 1709.

1790. MARIA VAN DER WESTHUIZEN (Howard Charles's seven-times-great-grandmother[948], see Maternal Ancestry(8), Maternal Ancestry(12) and Maternal Ancestry(13)) was born in 1675, in Stellenbosch, Western Cape, South Africa, to Pieter Jansz van der Westhuizen[2110] and Maria Hendricks Winkelhausen[2111]. She died in 1734, aged about 59, in Malmesbury, Western Cape, South Africa.

Her Deceased Estate Accounts seem to suggest that she carried on with her father's business of money lending. Her sons each inherited 8,643 guilders from her and the Walters boys each had in addition 5000 guilders from their father's estate paid out at the same time.

Her will dated 1726 was made on the farm Droogevallei which was still listed as part of her property in the inventory drawn up in 1734 after her death, but the farm named 'De Tijgerbergen' seems by then to have been her main residence. At that date she also had another farm in the Paardeberg, named 'Hoornbos' and a loan farm on the Olfants River called 'Zeekeevallie'. She signed her will of 1726 with a cross for her mark.

Gerrit Jansz van DEVENTER het van Veldcamp in Nederlands na die Kaap gekom. Op 29 Oktober 1688 het hy getrou in Kaapstad met Ariaentje JACOBS, sy was "n weesmeisie van Rotterdam. Sy was gedoop op 25 December 1670 en was die dogter van Jacob Abrahamse en Heiltjie Ariens.

Ariaentje Jacobs was een van 8 weesmeisies wat op die Skip Berg China na die Kaap gekom het. Sy was gedoop in die Gereformeerde Kerk in Rotterdam op 25 Desember 1670. Haar vader was Jacob die seun van Abraham en haar moeder was Heiltjie die dogter van Arie. Sy was 18 jaar oud toe sy van die Gereformeerde Burgerweeshuis in Rotterdam na die Kaap gekom het.

Johan van Deventer se navorsing meld dat, "Adriana Jacobs, dogter van Jacob Abrahamse en Heiltje Ariens, is gedoop te Rotterdam in Nederland op 25 Mei 1673. Haar ouer suster Ariaentjie wat vroeger algemeen aangegee is as ons stammoeder, sterf op 2-jarige ouderdom en word op 16 November 1762 te Rotterdam begrave. Op die ouderdom van 5 maande sterf Adriana se vader en op 8-jarige ouderdom sterf haar moeder. Sy word wees gelaat, met die adres Geertruidenberg wat sommer net "den Berg" genoem is. Sy beland in die Gereformeerde Burgerweeshuis in die Goudse Wagenstraat in Rotterdam, Nederland, en word die verkleinwoord Ariantgen genoem. In 1687 besluit die Here Sewentien om weesmeisies van die Rotterdamse weeshuis na die Kaap te stuur as vrouens vir die vryburgers. Saam met sewe ander weesmeisies vertrek sy op Saterdag 20 Maart 1688 vanuit Goere in Holland met die skip "Berg China" en arriveer in die Kaap op Woensdag 4 Augustus 1688."

On 4 August 1688, Willemantje Ariens de Wit, Anna Elkop, Judith Verbeek, Engeljtie Cornelisse van der Bout and Catharina Jansz van der Zee arrived at the Cape as members of a group of eight orphan girls brought to the Cape following requests by Jan van Riebeeck (1659) and Simon van der Stel (1685) that the Heeren XVII send between 20 and 40 marriageable girls to the Cape. When they were finally sent in 1668 the Heeren XVII wrote that they had been selected because of their experience in farming and it was suggested they be encouraged to marry farmers. They had arrived from Rotterdam on board the China. The China had departed from Rotterdam on 20 March 1688 Ariaantje Jacobs van Rotterdam, (or Ariaantje Adriaansse or Ariaantje van den Berg) father died when she was 5 months and her mother, when she was eight.

*The spelling of Ariaantje varies in different documents.

She was admitted to the orphanage ‘Gereformeerde Burgerweeshuis’ in Rotterdam, in 1687. Two of the founders of the European population in South Africa were Gerrit Jansz and his wife Ariaantje Jacobs. Pedigrees have traced the start of porphyria in South Africa to these two individuals. They had eight children, four of whom suffered from porphyria. A critical question asks which of the parents suffered from porphyria? Gerrit Jansz came from the Netherlands (the only other place in the world where porphyria is relatively common) and we know that Ariaantje's sister... had a son with porphyria increasing the likelihood of Ariaantje having porphyria. It could even have been possible for both to have had it (What a coincidence!!!!) Draw a pedigree of Gerrit and Ariaantje's family. Assume for simplicity that only Gerrit suffered from porphyria and that he was heterozygous (Aa). Determine the genotypes for their eight children. Imagine that all of their children married non-affected individuals, and they each had four children. Determine the probability of Gerrit and Ariaantje's grandchildren having porphyria and assume that the probability expectations were met in reality. How many of Gerrit and Ariaantje's grandchildren suffer from porphyria? (Eight) If all the grandchildren married and had four children, how many of Gerrit and Ariaantje's great grandchildren would suffer from porphyria? (Sixteen).

The History of Porphyria

After the British doctor Geoffrey Dean was settled in South-Africa in 1947 he saw, over a short period of time, many patients with a striking disease. They suffer from stomach-ache, vomiting, constipation, muscular-weakness and restlessness. Some patients suffer attacks of insanity which caused high blood-pressure and a rapid heartbeat. Most of the patients also had skin defects like blisters and strong pigmentation as a result of sun exposure. Recent infectious disease, alcohol abuse or a period of fasting, could provoke the symptoms. But even more often he noticed that medicine and especially barbiturates, anti-epileptics and narcotics used during operations, exhorting the symptoms. Because the disease was unknown, Dean couldn't give the patients proper treatment. Mostly the patients turned became so sick that treatment was no longer possible. Eventually they died a horrible death. RESTLESS patients were given barbiturates, unfortunately this caused in many cases an even quicker death. The patients with severe belly ache were hospitalized and underwent an operation. The necessary narcotics during the operation often caused a premature death. It was most likely that the new drugs brought to South Africa reveal the sleeping genetic disease, which was present in South Africa long before Dean discovered it. It didn't take Dean very long to suspect that the disease he saw, was the metabolism disorder porphyria, a rare type not known in Europe. He named this disease Variegata Porphyria (VP). The research took Dean all over the world including the Netherlands. Dean found out that this disease was common among the white farmer families, but less common among the black population. He found out that he was dealing with a fast growing genetic disease. The connection among the farmers and their traditions concerning name giving to their children, was very helpful to Dean with his research. The first son was named after father's father, the second was named after mother's father and the third son was named after his own father. If the women gave birth to a daughter she was named after the mother's mother, the second after the father's mother and the third daughter after her own mother. It wasn't after child no. 7 where the parents were free to choose a name for their child. In those days it was common to give birth to 7 or more children. It was Dean who identified the "Founder" of porphyria in South Africa. He found out that it was most likely - and DNA research for the last couple of years is making this even more likely - Ariaantje Adriaansse (Jacobs). With seven other females (incl. her half-sister Willemijntje) she arrived in Kaapstad with the VOC-ship "China" in 1688. Ariaantje married Gerrit Janz van Deventer in Stellenbosch. Who exactly passed on the disease to 4 of their 8 children is not quite clear. In Deventer (Netherlands) where Gerrit Janz came from, lived and live many people with "Variegata Porphyria" (VP). This makes it likely that Gerrit Janz was the carrier of the genetic defect. But after more research Dean found out that the son of Ariaantje's half-sister Willemijntje also had VP. So this makes Ariaantje to be the prime suspect of carrying the defect. Dean wrote a book called "The Porphyrias" in 1963. In this book he came to the conclusion that the cause of VP was due to an defect of a dominant gene that was not based on gender (autosomal dominant). If one of the parents carry the disease, 50% of their children will inherit this disease. With genetic research still going on at Erasmus University (Rotterdam, Netherlands) they proved that the South African VP came from the Netherlands (Ariaantje Adriaansse) and has spread out from one single source. Willemijntje's son Hendrik had VP also, just like his mother and his aunt Ariaantje. When Hendrik was caught by the police, because he had a fight with one of the locals, due to alcohol abuse, they deported him to the East. Hendrik the cousin of the "Founder" of all the African people with VP, was deported to Batavia. But he never arrived there, because his ship was stranded on the west-coast of Australia. Hendrik stayed in Australia and most likely brought the disease there.

The Dutch Weesmeisies (girls from an orphanage) have become part of the mythology of early Cape ancestry. As J.A.Heese writes[1]: 'Colenbrander and many other researchers into the composition of the Afrikaners attach much value to the fact that during Simon van der Stel's time at the Cape, quantities of Dutch orphan girls were sent to South Africa, in order to provide wives for the unmarried free settlers'. This article covers how many such orphan girls there in fact were, and who their descendants are.

As a result, it seems, any woman of unidentified origins has often been labelled a 'weesmeisje'. If you do a Google search for 'weesmeisje', for instance, the largest number of entries will refer to Maria Kickers. As you will see if you read on, she was not one of the Weesmeisies (as defined above). It is not known how or when she arrived at the Cape. It seems because of this someone in the past decided to include her in the Weesmeisie category and that this epithet has stuck and been endlessly copied without further investigation. Other such examples are also to be found.

It seems, in fact, that there were only eight of these girls imported from an orphanage in Rotterdam who arrived...

C.G.de Wet writes[2] :

'Jan van Riebeeck had already in 1659 requested that the Council of Seventeen (of the Dutch East India Company) send out at least 20 marriageable girls from Europe to the Cape settlement. In 1685 Simon van der Stel made a similar request, differing in that he asked for between 30 and 40 girls. The Council of Seventeen reacted favourably to this request and decided to send 40 farm girls to the Cape. Suitable girls were apparently no so readily obtainable and in the event only 8 orphan girls from Rotterdam, departed in December 1687 on the ship 'China' for the Cape. By October 1688 six of them had already married and the last of the eight was married on 8 May 1689. The orphan girls were in fact so few that they resulted in no noticeable improvement in the shortage of marriageable women in the Cape settlement'.

Ariaantje Jansz van Son, Willemijnjet Ariens de Wit, Ariaantje Jacobsz van den Berg, Judith Jansz Verbeek, Petronella Cornelis van de Capelle, Intjen Cornelis van der Bout, Catharina Jansz van der Zee and Anna Eltrop

J.A.Heese in his article[1](based on an article in the Zuid-Afrikaansche Tijdschrift of 1882) gives a list of 10 young women:

Willemijnjet Ariens de Wit; Adriaantjie Jacobs; Catharina van der Zee; Anna Eltrop van Kleef; Engelte Cornelissen; Adriaante Janse; Adriana van Zon; Petronella van Capelle; Judith van der Bout and Judith Verbeek but since his Engelte Cornelissen and Judith van der Bout are probably two readings of the same name, i.e. Engeljet Cornelisse van der Bout, and the same is the case for his Adriaante Janse and Adriana van Zon, whose name was, in fact, Adriaantjie Jansz van Zon, we seem to have the same list in both accounts.

Geoffrey Dean [3] supplies a translation of an extract from the letter listing the young women:

"we now therefore have favoured eight young women with a passage to the Cape of Good Hope on the ship China (which is a large vessel) ... and they are to remain at the Cape for the above purpose under a five-year contract ... The names are:

Ariaenjet Jansz van Son van Rotterdam; Willemjet Ariens de Wit d[it]o.; Ariaenjet Jacobs van den Berg d[it]o.; Judith Jansz verbeecq d[it]o.; Petronelle Cornelis van Capelle d[it]o.; Jongetgen Cornelis van den bout d[it]o.; Catharina Jans van der Zee d[it]o. and Anna Eltrop van Kleef d[it]o.

conversant with (farm work and) the cultivation of the soil. And it is the intention of the Lords 17 to employ these and other young women as agriculturists. We therefore request and earnestly recommend to you that you see that they are suitably placed, or if they marry, see that they do so with honest, capable and industrious men engaged in farming or of definite intention to undertake such work, and with whom these young women may be able to make a living, while (at the same time) as far as possible dissuading them from marriage with military men, as this is not within the intentions of the Lords Seventeen.

In the meantime, and until the marriage of these young women, it is incumbent upon you to provide them with the necessary sustenance and housing, maintaining such discipline you may deem suitable, and providing them appropriate handiwork or honest employment, so that their occupations and deportment may further their own advancement; and the management and conducting of this recommendation we entrust to your 'Honours' discretion. [4]

De Wet supplies source references for his list.[5] I have not been able to examine the originals but I have found him on the whole punctilious and accurate as to his sources. Heese provides no other source than the Zuid-Afrikaansche Tijdschrift of 1882.

De Wet gives us no further information on these young women, but Heese gives a short statement on each of them. I shall preface each of his statements with the label 'Heese states' and follow it with comments based on my own research.

Heese states: Willemijntjie Ariens de Wit was married to Detlev Biebow. Their daughter Maria was the stammoeder of the De Vos family.

This statement is incorrect.

Wilhelmina Adriaanse de Wit, born Rotterdam, died circa June 1727 [6]
moved (1) 24 December 1688 at Cape Town [7]

Dideloff Bibouw, surgeon, of The Corner of Tweede Berg Dwars Straat, Table Valley, died circa 1695[8]
moved (2) 2 October 1695 at Cape Town

Jacob Pleunis

The children of Wilhelmina Adriaanse de Wit and Dideloff Bibouw:

Hendrik Bibouw, baptized 28 May 1690, Cape Town

Maria Bibouw, baptized 2 March 1692, Cape Town, died circa 1713 [9] moved 25 March 1708 Cape Town

Philip Morkel, constable on the returning ship 'Oosterstein'

Cornelis Bibouw, baptized 7 March 1694, Cape Town, died before September 1695

Anna Bibouw, baptized 21 August 1695, Cape Town

The child of Wilhelmina Adriaanse de Wit and Jacob Pleunis: Johannes Pleunis, boekhouder (1727) [10]
He left a number of daughters who married. I do not know if there are living descendants or not.

It was, in fact, the only surviving child of her daughter Maria Bibouw, namely her granddaughter Elisabeth Morkel, who married Wouter de Vos on 5 September 1728 at Stellenbosch as his second wife. Elisabeth Morkel is, therefore, joint stammoeder of the De Vos family, sharing this honour with Maria Sophia van der Bijl, his first wife. Elizabeth Morkel herself married a second time to Johannes Louw Jacobsz: circa 1732 and also has a very large number of descendants from that marriage.

Heese states: Adriaantjie Jacobs (later known as the carrier of porfuria) was the stammoeder of the Van Deventer family. She was indeed the stammoeder of this family and has many descendants. For a good deal more information about her, see the article 'Die Stammoeder Ariaentjie Jacobs of te wel Ariaentjie Ariens' by N.A. Coetzee in Familia XV 1978 no 1. Some of the author's conclusions, particularly as to names and patronyms seem to me, on the face of it, dubious, but there are no sources stated and I have done no research into this area, so merely note this here.

As to being the carrier of porphyria, although Geoffrey Dean traced the origin of porphyria variegata in the South African population back to she and her husband, Gerrit Jansz van Deventer, he states that there is no evidence as to which of this pair was the actual carrier of the gene. [3].

  Dietlof BIEBOUW was van Meckelenberg en hy trou 24 Desember 1688 met Willemijntjie ANDRIJANSE, sy was een van afg weesmeisies van Rotterdam wat op 4 Augustus op die Berg China met die Franse vlugtelinge in die Kaap aangекom het. Haar suster was Ariaenje Jacobs wat getroud was met die stamvader Gerrit Jansz van Deventer.

  Dietlof het die rang Korporaal beklee van 1683 - 1685. Later word hy beskryf as "vrij chirugijn". Op 12 Mei 1691 word 'n 25/26 jarige Diana van Madagascar deur Joris van Straaten en Christaan Freser verkoop vir 65 Riksdaalers, sy word dan op 28 Desember 1693 verkoop vir 90 riksdaalers aan Dietlof Biebouw. Dietlof het 'n voorkind gehad met die slavin van Cornelis Linnes, Diana VAN DE KAAP, ook bekend as Diana VAN MADAGASCAR:

  Die seun Hendrik het beroemtheid gekry toe hy op 6 Maart 1707 vir landdros Starrenburg van Stellenbosch gesê "Ik ben een Africander". Hendrik was maar 17 jaar oud toe hy en sy drie maats (Jan Cloete, Hans Beijer en Matthys Greef) dronk was en daar 'n botsing met die landdros was.

  Hendrik word beskou as die eerste persoon wat homself geïdentifiseer het as 'n "Africander". Hy het ook die landdros met 'n meelsak geslaan.

  Aan die bo-ent van die geskiedenisryke Dorpstraat op Stellenbosch, voor die tehuis Utopia, onder 'n groot eikeboom, is daar 'n gedenksteen ter ere van Hendrik B. Op die plaat bo-op die groot klip staan: "Ik ben een Afrikaner" - So het die 17-jarige Hendrik Bibault op 6 Maart 1707 in die watermeul wat in hierdie omgewing gestaan het, tydens 'n woordewisseling met landdros Starrenburg gesê. Sover bekend was dit die eerste keer dat iemand homself "Afrikaner" genoem het.

  Hendrik het geen nageslag by die Kaap nagelaat nie. Daar is 'n teorie dat hy dalk 'n genealogiese konnексie tussen Afrikaner-Aboriginal kan wees. Philip Playford dink dat Hendrik dalk die Kaap verlaat het op 22 April 1712 met die skip Zuytdorp. Hierdie skip het vergaan aan die Wes-Australiësekus. Daar is baie goeie redes om te glo dat 'n aantal van die skeepsvolk oorleef het en dalk deel geword het met die plaaslike Aborigines, dit is op grond van die volgende feite:

  1. Both have a common genetic diseased Porphyria Variegata. Dr Geoffrey Dean from Dublin an expert in this disease looked at this common connection. One of the theories is that both Hendrik Biebouw's mother and his mother's half sister Willemyntje Ariens de Witt (married to Gert Jansz van Deventer) were the carriers of this disease. However more recent research indicate that they are two different strands of the disease

  2. Many of the Aborigines suffer from the Ellis-van-Crevell syndrome. This is where one has an extra toe or finger, this phenomenon also occurs amongst the Amish in America who are from Dutch background.

  3. Playford suggest from archeological excavations that 30 persons may have survived the shipwreck. They located campfires, nuts, coins, glass and a belt buckle

  4. Philip Pendal chairman of the Western Australian government's "Select Committee on Ancient Shipwrecks" states - "growing body of opinion that some survivors of the Zuytdorp lived in the area between Kalbarri and Shark Bay" "The evidence is not conclusive, but it had far more substance than previously thought."

  5. A number of Aborigines from that area have square jaws and have blond hair. As noted Hendrik left no progeny at the Cape. His half sister Susanna did leave descendants.

  Die Nederlandse historikus, Ad Biewenga, skrywe die feite op soos volg in sy boek De Kaap de Goede Hoop - een Nederlandse vestigingskolonie, 1680-1730 (1999) op bl. 270:

  "Naast rijkdom en juridische (on)vrijheid speelde in het onderscheid dat men aan de Kaap tussen

I recently needed to revisit the Bibault story and the Afrikaner dynasty story to crossreference some information. In the case of the Bibault story, I found that Hendrik Bibault’s father was Dietlof Biebouw a German, rather than a Frenchman and I ascertain more details of the story. In the case of Ouwe Ram Afrikaner and his sons Afrikaner Afrikaner and Klaas Afrikaner I also discovered some new information relating to their being sentenced to imprisonment on Robben Island. Thus I have produced this new posting below:

The early emergence of the term Afrikaner and Afrikaans as a language is rooted in the emergence of a coloured Cape Creole people. In the early 1700s the term Afrikaner was generally used to refer to mulatto Cape born slaves and Free Blacks. It was only in the mid 1800s that the term found favour with the forebears of present day white Afrikanners. Two figures stand out in history as reference points around the origins of the term, noting that at this point in history d‘Africans’ and d‘Afrikaners’ were not yet terms used by indigenes. The two figures are Ouwe Ram Afrikaner, progenitor of the Afrikaner dynasty, and Hendrik Biebow.

Ouwe Ram Afrikaner and his sons Klaas Afrikaner and Afrikaner Afrikaner lived at the Roode Zand groot vlakte of Tulbach and were a family of mixed Garigriqua and slave roots. The term Afrikaner (van Afrika) had become synonymous with the official terminology for Creole (locally born) slaves recorded as d‘Africans’ and d‘Afrikaners’ were not yet terms used by indigenes. After also naming his son d‘Afrikaner he became Afrikaner the elder or d‘Oude Ram’. He and his sons started the first dynasty and proto national group to consciously call themselves and to be called Afrikaners, later to be known as the Orlams (Clever) Afrikaners or II Khauxa’nas.

As a result of their resistance to the Dutch, Ouwe Ram, Afrikaner and Klaas Afrikaner were sentenced to life imprisonment on Robben Island. In the case of Klaas Afrikaner the charges were later dropped, while Ouwe Ram Afrikaner died before imprisonment. Afrikaner Afrikaner (officially recorded as Hotnot Afrikaner) was sent to Robben Island on 12 September 1761 where he died in June 1777. In the case of Klaas Afrikaner (1734-1799) he and his sons Jager d‘Homo I aramb’ Afrikaner (1760-1823), Titus and David hendrik, drew a following. Klaas became the clan leader and adopted the title Kaptein as the clan turned into a polity. The title of Kaptein passed from Klaas to Jager (the fighter), and then to Jonker d‘Hara-mub’ Afrikaner (1785-1861), then to Christan d‘Hara-hagab’ Afrikaner (809-1863) and on to Jan Jonker d‘Nau-bu-xugye’ (1920-1889) when the Orlams Afrikaner polity ended.

The second story on the origins of the term Afrikaner goes back to a mixed working class colonist-slave family from Hout street in Cape Town the Biebouw family. Dietlof Biebouw was a poor illiterate German corporal who couldn’t even sign his name. In 1687 he cohabited with a 20 year old slave by the name of Diana of Madagascar owned by Cornelis Linnes. She bore him a daugther, Susanna, whom he recognised and had baptised in his name and brought into his home. It seems too that Dietlof purchased the slave, Diana of Madagascar, for 90 Rixdollars seven years later. Biebouw in 1688 formally married a Dutch orphan girl Willemijntjie Aadriaanse who was one of six orphans sent to the Cape with French refugees. Dietlof had four children with Willemijntjie before he died in 1695. One of these was a son Hendrik. Dietlof’s wife remarried, sold the Hout street property and moved to Stellenbosch. This was the world in which 17 year old Hendrik had grown up. This young man’s world was sans identity boundaries and disconnected from the establishment world. He saw himself as one of those local Afrikanners, like his sister born of a slave mother and other mates of mixed roots. He certainly would have been aware that at the time the word Afrikaner was not generally used by members of polite white society to describe themselves no matter what gripes they had with the VOC.

At the age of 17, in March 1707, young Hendrik and his mates were apprehended for being drunk and disorderly. When beaten, chased and chastised by the Landdrost of Stellenbosch, a German by the name of Starrenburg, Hendrik wanted to know who Starrenburg, an immigrant, thought he was to be ordering about a local lad and emphasised that he was an African. He shouted Ik wil niet lopen. Ik ben een Afrikaner al slaat die landdrost mijn dood, of al setten hij mijn in den trunk, Ik sal nog wil niet swijgen. I shall not leave. I am an Afrikaner, even if the landdrost beats me to death or puts me in jail. I shall not, nor will I be silent. Starrenburg called for the Governor to banish Hendrik Biebouw but this did not happen. He and his three mates were publicly thrashed by soldiers as a punishment. Some years later as an employee of the VOC he did end up on a ship and left the Cape colony. Various conflicting accounts exist as to what may have happened to Hendrik after he left the Cape. He had no known offspring.

The story further illustrates that the Afrikaner identity first emerged as an identity within the coloured and mixed working class community outside of the powerful colonial establishment and respectable classes.

Dietlof Biebouw, aged about 28, married Willemijntjie Adriaanse Ariens de Witt[1879], aged about 23, on 24 December 1688 in Nederduitsch Gereformeerde Kerk, Cape Town, South Africa. They had four children:
- Hendrik Biebouw[1637] born on 28 May 1690 in Cape Town, South Africa; died on 20 March 1719 in Batavia, Malaysia
- Maria Catharina Biebouw[1638] born on 2 March 1692 in Cape Town, South Africa; died in September 1695
- Cornelius Biebouw[1641] born on 7 March 1694 in Cape Town, South Africa; died in 1713 in South Africa
- Anna Biebouw[1642] born on 21 August 1695 in Cape Town, South Africa

Dietlof Biebouw was not married to Diana van de Kaap. They had one daughter:
- Susanna Biebouw born on 23 February 1687 in Cape, South Africa; died on 2 December 1713 in Cape Province, South Africa

See Theal p 22. In May 1736, Hubner travelled to the Easter Cape to hunt elephants with ten others. They visited the residence of Phalo. They pressed on to what may have been Natal. Here they met three Englishmen, Thomas William, Henry Clerk and William Bilvert, who had been shipwrecked many years before. They were living with the Pondos and had numerous wives and children.

Shortly afterwards, Hubner was murdered, along with others by the Xhosa. Theal does not give a reason, but it may have been plunder.

The second confrontation with the Xhosa occurred in 1736, 34 years after the first. Over the years, much of the interior had been explored, mainly by parties of elephant hunters who had discovered much about the land above the Cape on their travels in search of ivory. It was one of these parties that clashed with the Xhosa while travelling east from the Cape in May 1736 under their leader, Hermanus Hubner. The group passed through the land occupied by the Hottentot Gonaqua, through the territory under Xhosa ruler Chief Phalo and into that of the Thembu.

On the return journey, they stopped to rest at Chief Phalo's kraal. From there, nine men decided to continue homewards with seven wagons heavily loaded with ivory, while six remained behind with four laden wagons and intended to follow them a few days later. Those returning home were delayed for a number of days on the banks of a flooded river.

On the eighth day after leaving Phalo's kraal, two Hottentots who had been with their companions burst out of the bushes and breathlessly blurted out the news to the men on the riverbank that the Xhosa had murdered those who had remained at the kraal, including Hermanus Hubner. According to these Hottentots, Hubner had suddenly been fatally stabbed while he talked with several Xhosa. The tribe members then murdered and mutilated the bodies of the other white men before removing everything from the wagons, including three barrels with over 60 kilograms of gunpowder. They had then smashed open the barrels, piled the gunpowder into a heap and set the wagons on fire so they could get at the iron parts. A spark flew onto the stockpiled gunpowder and ignited it, causing a massive explosion to shake the earth. When the smoke cleared, the ground was littered with the bodies of dead and injured Xhosa.

The party of men by the river were terrified by the news and feared for their lives. Fortunately, the level of the river had dropped and they were able to cross the river with their wagons. However, a short distance from the river, the fleeing men realized that the Xhosa were following them. Unsure what to do, they halted the wagons to wait for the horde of Xhosa to approach them. When the Xhosa were in range, the burghers opened fire on them and killed a good number of them, which they were particularly pleased about as they were running out of ammunition. The burghers abandoned their wagons soon after this skirmish and fled on foot to the Cape, where they safely arrived on 10 July 1737. It had been over a year since they had departed.

Between May 1733 and 23 September 1733 Landdrost Pieter Lorenz became aware of allegations that in the preceding eight months Gerrit Jacobsz: Coetzee had engaged in sodomy (today the act would be termed as bestiality) on two separate occasions with two different mares - a grey belonging to Leendert Barendsz: van Saxen; and a chestnut (red-brown) belonging to Claes van Malabar.
By late in July 1733 Gerrit Jacobsz: Coetzee had been arrested by Pieter Lorenz and interrogated twice in the presence of the commissioned members of the Council of Justice. Pieter Lorenz has also taken statements from Johannes Lodewyk Pretorius, Abraham le Roux and Domine. Domine, a Khoe woman also known as Caatje, was a seasonal vineyard worker. She made the most detailed statement and testified to observing penetration with a chestnut mare, while Pretorius and Le Roux said they observed Coetse on the rump of a grey mare, moving as if he was engaged in a sexual act with the horse. But Lourensz would tell the CoJ that even though Domine's statement was detailed, that because she was a single eye witness, and an unbaptised 'Hottentot' testifying against a Christian, she could not take the oath and her account did not therefor have the same authority as the two

Crime On 10 September 1733 Gerrit Jacobsz: Coetzee was brought before the Council of Justice to hear the charges against him presented by Landdrost Pieter Lorenz. who asked that he be condemned to torture. During the hearing, Gerrit twice denied the charges and the Council ordered that he be brought "ad actum proximum" that is, to the torture chamber.

Between 11 September 1733 and 12 September 1733 Gerrit Jacobsz: Coetzee was brought to the torture chamber in the Castle where he was warned he would be tied up "aan de pleije", that is hung by the arms from a beam with weights attached to his feet. Faced with this extremely painful method of torture used to extract confessions he confessed to one instance of sodomy and attempting it a second time. The next day he signed his admission with a cross and he was found guilty.

On 17 September 1733 Gerrit Jacobsz: Coetzee was sentenced to death by drowning. The two mares were also condemned to die.

On 18 September 1733 Gerrit Jacobsz: Coetzee asked to make another confession in which he implicated Alexander van Ternate both as an instigator and co-perpetrator. The Council decided to investigate the allegations but on 22 September ordered Gerrit's execution to be carried out the next day. Subsequent investigations cleared Alexander van Ternate.

On 23 September 1733 Gerrit Jacobsz: Coetzee executed by drowning.

Jacobus Coetzee's eldest son, Gerrit, Jacoba's brother, was in 1733 at the age of twenty sentenced to be drowned in Table Bay for what at the time was termed 'sodomy', but was in fact bestiality committed with a horse, and Susan Newton-King has used the evidence assembled in this connection to analyse the nature of the farming society at Dal Josafat. What is relevant here is more especially the interaction of ex-slaves, free coloureds and young men of uncertain 'white' status like young Coetzee living in the area, raising the question whether his ultimate lot was not partly at least influenced by that very uncertainty and the insecurity attendant on it. The second son of the elder Coezees, Gerrit, seems to have replaced his elder brother to all intents and purposes and to have enjoyed greater favour with his parents, for in 1722, when they moved to the Cape, he was permit—ted to lease Coetzenburg, supplying them with half the harvest of grain and crops raised on the farm in lieu of rent. In the same year he married Susanna Loefke, who was the daughter of a coloured mother and with whom he already had a child, baptised in 1719. Having taken over the farm, he seems to have settled down satisfactorily, though it must be added that in 1751, when he was a widower of sixty-eight, he was again to marry a coloured woman, the widow of a free coloured man, a marriage that by this time was most becoming less acceptable in his circle, whatever may have been the situation earlier.

Arrived in S.Africa with his wife in 1686; They lived on "Fleurbaai" below Stellenbosch. They had 4 children.

Pierre LE FEBRE was born around 1654. It is the occasion that some Huguenot families who arrived at the Cape later than early Huguenots emigrated from France and emigrated to Holland, eg Francois Villion (Viljoen), Guillaume du Toit and Pierre Lefebre.

Pierre le Febre arrives at the Cape in 1683. He received no help from the Company in 1689 - 1690, as he arrived in Cape Town in 1683. He and his wife Maria de Graaf came to the Cape in 1683 (their names appear in the roles of 14 February 1684). He lived at Fleurbaux.

The French refugees who came to Cape Town before 1688, therefore, usually settled near Stellenbosch. They were Francois Villion (Idas Valley), Pierre le Febre and Family (Fleur Bay) and Guillaume du Toit (Aan't Pad).

Fleurbaai was already assigned to Pierre in 1684, but his letter was not received until 28 July 1695. He was married to Maria DE GRAVES about 1677.

My name is Martin and I am a user of Geni (owned by MyHeritage) and of MyHeritage. I would like to get in touch with you regarding a Smart Match between my tree on Geni and your tree on MyHeritage, on the profile of Theunis Botha.

DNA tests on descendants of Theunis Botha shows that he actually were the son of Ferdinandus Appel. Maria Kickers had an affair with him before he married his wife.

The things are a bit mixed up for the Bothas and all of us connected to to them

Please contact me via email using my email address: kotiepot@iway.na.

It is Quite a long but interesting discussion. a Professor of Stellenbosch took DNA Samples of Theunis`s descendants and of his other brothers descendants as well as those of descendants of Ferdinandus Appel. The Y chromosome of Theunis`s and those of the Appels were the same. There was an article in the Burger about it.

If you provide me with your Private E-mail address I will scan all that was said about the matter to you. General Louis Botha and PW Botha actually were Appels while Puk Botha remains a Botha. My wife is also a Appel. The Y chromosome is only carried through the mail line. With my own Potgieter line some of my grandmothers are Appels and some are Bothas. It is really interesting. Regards Dries Potgieter.

Theunis Botha, aged 48, married Maria Catharina van Eeden[2099], aged 42, on 13 June 1734 in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa.

Maria Kickers arrived at the Cape in 1688, on board the ship Berg China, as part of a group of orphans brought out from Amsterdam as brides for marriageable bachelors. (She shared the journey with Ariaantje Jacobs).
Maria married Jan Cornelise, and settled in to become a farmer's wife in the district of Stellenbosch. Children, and the more the merrier, came of the marriage, and Jan must have been delighted with his fertile wife, who produced a veritable horde of babies. Most farmers at the time employed European foremen, and Jan had a very industrious and hard-working foreman, Frederick Botha, of German descent, working for him.
In 1702, Jan realised just how productive his foreman had been when he discovered that Botha had been conducting an affair with Maria for years, and that six of the children she had borne were in fact fathered by Botha.
Jan promptly divorced Maria and reported her to the authorities. The love-birds were banished in disgrace to Mauritius where they were sentenced to live on different parts of the island, and to have no contact with each other.
When they returned to the Cape, they reunited and married on 21 June 1717, raising their family together on the farm Zandberg, later called Scholtzenhof.
in what is now Somerset West. One of the first things they did after getting married was to have their children baptised in a church with the surname Botha.

Recently somebody introduced us to GENCIRCLES web page. There I found CONFLICTING INFORMATION regarding Maria Kickers and Friedrich Botha(a), and their MARRIAGE DATE. The first says 1717, and Gencircles says 1685. Also, the 3rd husband listed as that of Maria Kickers differ web site to site. The Botha Website also states that the children are shown as the offspring of Cornelisz, [the first husband] in the Church

Genealogy
It is interesting to note that Maria's children take on the name of Friedrich Botha rather than Cornelisz, their family name. The court proceedings record the following, and here my full understanding of the meaning is lost... "De gedaagdese antwoordende, segt en bekendt alle hare kinderen, staande huwelijk niet bij den eijr haren man (vermits desselvs onbequaamheid) maar bij een ander; te weeten den voorn. fred. Boot, te hebben geprocrëeert; en dat haren man haar daar toe selfs aanleijding soude hebben gegeeven". The courts further state red. Botha en Maria Kickers word vir oorspel, aanhouding en verberging van vee, geweld aan persoon van Claas Das, tien jaar verban na Mauritius. Hul moet "separatelier" gebanne bly en restitusie van aangehoue goedere (Crim. en Civ. 1701-'08, 16 Nov. 1706. f.47). It seems highly improbable that they stayed seperately as it would appear from the marriage date (1717) given the birth date of Anna Botha (1702). The Botha Web site also states the following: QUOTE In 1706 FB stayed at the farm "Moddergat" with Maria Kickers who was working at Matthys Greef in Stellenbosch". So did they go to Mauritius and if so, for how long, and did her/their children go to Mauritius as well? Perhaps one or two older siblings of Maria could be direct descendents of Cornelisz, and the rest true descendents of Botha.

A great opportunity to test this theory on the descendents with the new DNA available. Is there anybody out there who can help me with this one or has any thoughts on this? Or Henny Nel, if you could translate my question and put it to GENFORUM for comment?:

It is a difficult matter to realise what a voyage must have been two hundred years ago when we think of our large modern liners plying between Europe and South Africa. Today the distance is covered within seventeen days, then it took anywhere from four to six months; today the food is kept in ice chambers, then the meat had to be salted and cured. The ships then were small, and living and sleeping space was limited; some of the vessels were no longer than one hundred and fifteen feet. Not only were the people faced by the danger of tempestuous seas, stranding or fire, but they also ran the risk of capture by pirates or a foreign enemy.

French Refugees

Death was of frequent occurrence during the voyage, and the means for combating it limited. The want of fresh food, vegetables and a limited allowance of water caused scurvy. This played havoc with a great number, and it often ended fatally. Water was a precious thing on board, and every precaution was taken to preserve it. To eke out the fresh water as long as possible, the meat and salt pork were cooked in the salt water and thus consumed by those on board. Water was given out on short allowance, but one or two glasses of wine were distributed to make up for it.

Poor people, what agonies they must have suffered sometimes, especially when passing through the tropics! Such, however, were the risks and discomforts which the French Refugees who ventured to leave their country had to run before they found an asylum in the southern hemisphere.

The ships of the Dutch East India Company that brought out the first batches of Refugees were the Voorschooten, Borssenburg, Oosterlandt, Berg China, Schelde, Zuid Beveland, and 't Wapen van Alkmaar. The Voorschooten was the first ship to leave Holland, and sailed on the 31st December, 1687. On the 13th April following she was obliged to drop her anchors in Saldanha Bay on account of a strong south-east wind, although her destination was Table Bay. Her officers considered it necessary to remain in the bay to effect some repairs. When the Commander at the Castle was informed of her arrival, he despatched the cutter Jupiter from Table Bay with fresh provisions. On her return she brought the Refugees safely to the Cape.

The Voorschooten was a flute of one hundred and thirty feet (Dutch) long. Twenty-two French emigrants were on board. Amongst them were Charles Marais of Plessis, his wife and four children, Philippe Fouché with wife and three children, also eight young bachelors, amongst whom were the brothers Jean and Gabriel le Roux of Blois, and Gideon Malherbe. Jacques Pinard and his wife Esther Fouché had been married previous to the sailing of the Voorschooten from Holland.

The Oosterlandt left Middelburg on the 29th January, 1688, and reached Table Bay on the 26th April, 1688, after a most successful voyage of two months and ten days. She was a much larger built ship than the Voorschooten, measuring one hundred and sixty feet. She brought out twenty-four Refugees. One of them was Jacques de Savoye of Aeth, a wealthy merchant. Jean PRIER du Plessis of Poitiers, who had practised as a surgeon, and Isaac Taillefert of Chateau Thierry, a hat-maker, were also on board; they all brought out their wives and children.

Another of the boats to have a most successful voyage was the flute Borssenburg, which left Texel on the 6th January, 1688. She was the smallest of the ships, as she was only one hundred and fifteen feet in length. She cast anchor in the Bay on May 12th, having suffered no deaths amongst the passengers or crew during the voyage, and landed all those on board in a healthy condition at the Cape. Among her passengers was a party of “French Piedmontese fugitives.” The list of names is wanting. I have been unable to trace any particular individual who came out in her.

A most exciting voyage was experienced by the Schelde, a boat of one hundred and forty feet long. She brought out twenty-three French Refugees, men, women and children. Seven or eight days out at sea a terrible storm sprang up, and the skipper was compelled to put into St. Jago. On her arrival at Porto Pravo, he was told that on the previous day an English pirate ship had captured three ships belonging to the English, Portuguese and Dutch respectively. She sailed away almost immediately, and when five days from the Cape ran into another storm. On board were several members of the des Pres family.

On the 4th August, 1688, there arrived in Table Bay the Berg China, which had left Rotterdam on the 20th March previously. The Berg China was of the same dimensions as the Oosterlandt. There were thirty-four French fugitives on board when she set sail, but the greater portion of the thirty who died on the voyage were Refugees.

When the Zuid Beveland, a vessel as big as the Voorschooten, sailed from Holland on the 22nd April, 1688, she had on board twenty-five Refugees, eleven men, four women and ten children. Amongst them was an important person whose arrival had been eagerly looked forward to by those who had come earlier to the Cape shores. This person was the Revd. Pierre Simond of Embrun in Dauphine, lately minister at Zirkzee. He was to play an active part in the early history of the French community at Drakenstein. Reverend Simond, whose name has been perpetuated today in the Drakenstein Valley by the place Simondium, was accompanied by his wife, Anne de Berauld. Amongst the soldiers on board belonging to the Dutch East India Company was Sergeant Louis de Berauld, brother of the minister’s wife. In October, 1688, Sergeant de Berauld accompanied an expedition to Rio de la Gou to search for some wrecked seamen of the ship Stavinisse. He afterwards settled down as a burgher.

After a run of nearly four months the Zuid Beveland dropped anchor in Table Bay on the 19th August, but it was too late that day for anyone to come ashore. Between eight and nine o’clock morning the first boat shoved off for land, but a squall of wind suddenly sprang up and upset the boat. Soon everyone was floundering in the sea. Several of the occupants were drowned, including Mr. Cornelis Moerkerke, who was on his way to Malacca to take up his appointment as Fiscal. Both the Schelde and Zuid Beveland lost a number of the French Refugees by death during the voyage. The lists of Refugees who came out in these two vessels are not to be found in the Archives at the Cape nor in Holland. From other documents, however, the names of some are found mentioned as having arrived with her. For instance, the Schelde brought out Charles Prévot, wife and three children, Hercules des Pres with wife and four children, and Abraham Bleuset, which makes a total of twelve out of the twenty-three who embarked.

In the Zuid Beveland came Rev. Simond and his wife, Jean le Long, wife and two children, Estienne Viret, Salomon de Gournay and David Senecal, eight souls out of the number of twenty-five known to have embarked. From the number of Refugees who had sailed by the 1st April, 1688, it is seen that more men than women came out. After the Zuid Beveland had left, sixty-seven men, thirty-three women and fifty-one children had embarked in the various boats, but, as we find upon comparing the lists of those we know set sail and those who landed here, several of them died on the voyage or shortly after their arrival.

About forty Refugees set sail from Texel on the 27th July, 1688, on board ’t Wapen van Alkmaar, commanded by Captain Carel Goske, and arrived six months after, i.e., the 27th January, 1689. They lost thirty-seven persons by death and brought one hundred and four sick ones, the latter being placed immediately in the Company’s hospital at Cape Town. The French emigrants were sent into the country to their new homes on the 1st February, after they had been given all the necessaries to carry on their agricultural pursuits. The only name I have been able to trace of those who sailed in the Alkmaar is that of Antonie Martin.

About one thousand souls represented by two hundred families, Piedmontese and Vaudois refugees, had taken refuge in Nuremberg. Their number included agriculturists, experienced tradesmen, and four ministers; they all expressed a wish to go to any of the Colonies of the Dutch East or Dutch West India Companies, but on condition that they be allowed to settle close to each other and exercise their own religion. Commissioners, appointed by the Chamber of Seventeen, enquired into the matter, and meanwhile the French and Vaudois fugitives presented a petition asking that certain other conditions be allowed. The petitioners had deputed Jean Pastre Marchand as their spokesmen, who stated that he had been requested by the Refugees at Erlagh and the Vaudois near Nuremberg to plead their cause.

A kindly and compassionate view was taken of the matter by the Seventeen, who decided to settle these people at the Cape of Good Hope, and provide them with free passages and money, and to supply them with building materials on credit. They were to be given provisions and treated on the same footing as the Dutch emigrants. It was thought that after the aged, lame and sick persons had been deducted, there would be between six and seven hundred souls who would be prepared to emigrate.

Arrangements were made for sending out two or three hundred Waldenses or Vaudois in the Company’s ship the Schielandt, but afterwards in ’t Wapen van Alkmaar. Everything was in readiness, but the emigrants declined to go, and the Seventeen wrote to the Cape that “these people, being averse to the sea and long voyage, had changed their minds and settled in Germany, and that forty French Refugees bred to agriculture were being sent out in ’t Wapen van Alkmaar.”

The above ships brought out the greater portion of the French emigrés to the Cape between 1688 and 1700, and after the former date we find them arriving in small batches. The other ships which brought some of them out were the Zion, Vosmaar, Westhoven, Donkervliet and Driebergen. In the Zion, which left Holland on the 8th January, 1689, and arrived on the 6th May following, came three brothers, Pierre, Abraham and Jacob de Villiers. Writing to the Cape on the 16th December, 1688, the Chamber at Delft said of them: “With this ship (the Zion) we have again permitted the following French Refugees to sail to the Cape and earn their living as freemen, Pierre de Villiers, Abraham de Villiers and Jacob de Villiers, all three brothers born near la Rochelle. We are informed that these persons have a good knowledge of laying out vineyards and managing the same, and thus we hope that the Company will acquire their good service. You are recommended to give them a helping hand.”

Today the name of de Villiers is to be found throughout the sub-continent, and descendants of Pierre de Villiers have given us some of the cleverest men in the legal profession, one of whom was the late Baron de Villiers of Wynberg, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the Union of South Africa.

A sad fate overtook the ten men and women Refugees who sailed from Holland in April, 1616, in the Vosmaar. The voyage had been most disastrous. When she arrived in October she had lost ninety-three persons by death, five of whom were of the French emigrants. Of the remainder of two hundred and thirty-six persons who were mostly sick and in a weak condition, only four were left in a good state of health. The Middelburg Chamber wrote to van der Stel that at the request of these French Refugees they had been given permission to proceed to the Cape, and that the Company in granting this did so with the object of populating the Colony. The Directors expressed the hope that they would not be a trouble to the Colony, but that each one would be able to maintain himself honestly by his trade or handicraft. To enable them to do so they were to be given as much help as the orders of the Seventeen required.

Of the five survivors who arrived in the Vosmaar the only name to be found is that of Jacques Bisseux of Picardy, who became a baker.

The Donkervliet and Westhoven both came out in 1699 and arrived on the 20th July and 16th June respectively.

On the 25th May 1698, the Driebergen, in command of Captain Martin de Jeugd, destined for Batavia, left Holland. On board were five French refugees who, upon their arrival at the Cape on the 3rd September, 1698, settled at Drakenstein as agriculturists. When north of the Canary Islands the Driebergen encountered a pirate vessel, which she took to be Turkish although the boat flew an English flag, and after Captain de Jeugd had warned her to keep off he fired a broadside and shattered her sails. She left the pirate without Damage. A despatch, dated 7th May, 1698, from the Chamber at Delft mentioned the names of the five fugitives sent out with the Driebergen:

Louwys de Ryck alias Louis le Riche, Pieter Cronier alias Pierre Crosnier, Stephen Cronier alias Estienne Cronier, Jean van het tichelje alias Jean du Tuillet, Philip van Renan alias Philippe Drouin.

When the newcomers landed everything had been arranged to receive and convey them to their new homes along the Berg River in the Drakenstein Valley. In 1687 this beautiful and fertile valley had been named by Commander Simon van der Stel after one of the family seats in Holland of the High Commissioner, Hendrik Adriaan van Reede, Lord of Mydracht, who had come out to the Cape in 1685 to inspect the Company’s affairs. In the same year twenty-three farms along the Berg River were marked out, each measuring 60 morgen in extent, and given to a like number of agriculturists. ‘Six wagons were supplied by the Burgher Councillors of the Cape and six by the Heemraden of Stellenbosch, to transfer the new arrivals and their baggage to Drakenstein. The Company supplied provisions which would last them for a few months, and planks to build temporary shelters.

When the farms were allotted care was taken to scatter the French among the Dutch farmers already settled there and those arriving at the same time. Some were given ground in the Stellenbosch district, but the greater number were at Drakenstein and French Hoek. This intermingling of the Dutch and French caused dissatisfaction among the latter. The Landdrost and Heemraden of Stellenbosch were requested to receive the Reverend Simond with the respect and reverence which his office and position demanded, and to assist him, as much as lay in their power, in erecting a house for himself. Upon his arrival he was conveyed to his destination in comfort and ease.

The majority of the Refugees to the Cape possessed little or nothing when they landed. Many had escaped with only their lives. They erected shelters which could be put up rapidly, and did not waste time upon buildings of an elaborate nature. It is reasonable to suppose that the first structures which they built were of a primitive nature, and none would have been of the class so general during the eighteenth century.

What pioneer in a strange land has ever built his first house with all the comforts and architectural beauty in which he indulges when he has made headway and reaped the good results of his work? We must look back upon the time, two centuries ago, and imagine these Refugees arriving in a beautiful, extensive and wooded valley, where wild animals such as lions and tigers made their lair, where Hottentots in their wild state roamed about ready to plunder the homestead. Under such conditions and with little money or material, only simple and small dwellings would have been erected. Later on, however, when the Colony expanded and the emigrants saw the good fruits of their labours, they built themselves better houses with many lofty and spacious rooms.

Not long after their coming a subscription list was sent round on their behalf among the older settlers of the Colony and Company’s servants. This was readily responded to by contributions of money, cattle and grain.
The fund was given to Reverend Simond and the deacons of the Stellenbosch church for distribution. The records in referring to this collection say that it did the older colonists credit and was most acceptable to the Refugees.

Two years later pecuniary assistance from quite a different source was given to the Huguenots. On the 22nd April, 1689, Commander van der Stel wrote to the Batavian Government and complained of the extreme poverty of the French Refugees, who, he said, would not be able to enjoy the fruits of their work for three or four years to come; they were being supported by the Company and from such means as were available from the poor fund. The settlers had no easy task in preparing their land for cultivation. The ground, which had never been tilled since the world began, was overgrown with bush and roots, and it would take several years to produce some return. Their life at first was full of trials; tools and implements had to be obtained from the Company, to whom they became debtors. He asked that a collection might be made for these poor people; this would relieve the Company of supporting them. The petition was not in vain. Although a collection was not made, a bill of exchange for 6,000 rixdollars, or £1,250, was immediately sent over. This bill was drawn on the Cape Government in favour of the Reverend Pierre Simond, the pastor of the French congregation at Drakenstein.

The money had been in the Batavian Treasury for many years, and represented the poor fund of a church at Formosa, one of the Dutch possessions which had been seized by the Chinese pirate Coxinga, who had compelled the Dutch to evacuate it. This money was taken away and placed in the treasury at Batavia. On the 18th and 19th April, 1690, the Cape Government distributed the amount amongst the French community, who were greatly pleased with a present so welcome in their dire distress. Another surprise was in store for them the next day; they received from the Commander, through the Landdrost of Stellenbosch, a present of oxen. They returned to their homes highly pleased, after having thanked the Commander for his kindly feeling and thought for them.

  The eldest son Jacobus had a longstanding liaison with the ex-slave Lijsbeth or Elisabeth Louis, daughter of the free coloured man and former slave Louis van Bengalen, who was also known as Elisabeth Glim or Glam, and was married to a European. This relationship seems to have caused Coetzee's parents some distress, for in 1707, when he was twenty-seven, they requested the Council of Policy to enlist him forcibly and ship him to the East, which the VOC was perfectly entitled to do, as its authority over its subjects re-mained absolute even though they had nominally been granted their free-dom. 'Forced enlistment' of this type was not unusual as a disciplinary measure and form of deportation conveniently obviating the need for a formal charge, trial or sentence, and a precedent had been set very recently when WA. van der Stel had used it against a number of his opponents. The authorities appear to have granted the request without much hesitation, describing Jacobus as 'a person universally notorious for his dishonourable and most offensive way of life' and 'a vile person and a great drunkard'; but on arrival at Batavia he and a fellow deportee protested so vigorously at these proceedings that he was returned to the Cape, where the Council of Policy had no alternative but to let him remain conditionally.
  Jacobus Coetzee was granted a grazing licence, and subsequently became the owner of the adjacent freehold farms Goede Rust and Non Pareille at Dal Josafat in the Drakenstein valley; he continued his liaison with Elisabeth Louis, and they were married in 1724, shortly after the death of her hus-band, by which time they were both in their forties and had several chil-dren. On Coetzee's death in 1738 the house in which the family were living consisted of two rooms and a kitchen only, the contents of which were not considered worth enumerating but valued at fifty guilders (some seventeen rixdollars) together, with the kitchenware estimated at an additional eight¬een guilders. There was an ox wagon, sixty head of cattle and five leaguers of wine, and after deduction of the outstanding debts, the estate was worth a thousand guilders in all.

  Jacobus Coetzee's daughter Jacoba married the German Jan Martinus Coors or Coertze of Vlakkeland, which adjoined her father's farms, and emerged briefly from obscurity on her husband's death in 1758, about the time when her young cousin Jacobus undertook his trip into the interior. Like her parents', their house consisted of two rooms and a kitchen, which were very simply furnished, while on the farm, apart from seven leaguers of wine, there was not a good deal worth enumerating either: a horse and saddle, eight draught oxen, an 'old, unusable wagon', 'some old iron parts of a plough' and two yellowwood beams; their slave holdings consisted of two 'old, ailing male slaves'. The estate owed a hundred rixdollars to the Church, pre¬sumably money borrowed by Coors, with a further thirty-six rixdollars out¬standing for eighteen months' interest, and there were a number of other debts typical of the time: teethe ferryman on the Berg River whose services they would have needed to get to the church or the mill at Drakenstein when the river came down, and to the miller and a shoemaker. After these had been deducted, the estate was worth little more than sixty rixdollars.

Jacobus Coetzee, aged 44, married Elizabeth Louisz van Bengale[2214], aged 44, on 27 November 1724 in Stellenbosch, Cape Of Good Hope, South Africa. They had two children:

Citation: Source 25. Unreliable or estimated. Jacob Cloete arrived at the Cape on 7 August 1657 shortly before he is granted a vrijbrief in which he is said to be a cadet from Cologne. He does not appear in the ofgraaf- nor monsterrollen for 1656 or 1657. The 1657 monsterol was taken on 31 May 1657, viz. den laesten Maij 1657 — clearly placing his arrival at the Cape between 31 May 1657 and 10 August 1657. In this period, two vessels arrived ex-Patria at the Cape, the Maria from Vlie on 13 July, and the Verenigde Provincien on 7 August. The records reveal that one person left the Maria at the Cape. This was Cornelis Claasz, viz. Cornelis Claassen van Utrecht voor Bosscheiter anno 1657 pr. ’t Jacht De Maria voor de Camer Amsterdam aangelant en primo October desselven jaars vrij geworden. Harry Booyens’ conclusion Cloete arrived on the Maria therefore cannot be correct. Twelve left the Verenigde Provincien, and one of them was Cloete whose vrijbrief was granted three days later. The next month, on 16 August, Jacob Cloete’s son Gerrit Cloete arrives on the Hasselt, viz. Gerrit Cloeten voor Jongen ende Camer Amsterdam anno 1657 met ’t Jacht Hasselt aangelant ... the boy was just 6 years old.
On 25 March 1661 de Caep de Goede Hoop Isabella van Angola and Cornelis Claasz were alleged to have been in a relationship, when Kees de Boer was accused of fathering a child by Ysebelle. This was not proven and is unlikely.
He married Catharina van Malabar on 15 March 1676 Nederduitsch Gereformeerde Kerk, (Cape Town), de Caep de Goede Hoop. He died circa 1688.

Jean died in 1725, aged about 54, in Knolle Vallei, Palmietrivier, Cape, South Africa.
Jean was the "Stamvader" (progenitor) of the DE BUYS/BUYS surname in South Africa. Jean, who had been living in Calais, France in 1686, arrived in the Cape as a refugee on The Oosterlandt, which left Middelburg, Zeeland, Netherlands on the 29th January 1688, and reached Table Bay on the 26th April, 1688, after a most successful voyage of two months and ten days. The ship was a Dutch VOC ship and was a much larger built ship than the Voorschooten, measuring one hundred and sixty feet. She brought out twenty-four refugees. One of then was Jacques de Savoye of Aeth, a wealthy merchant. Jean Prier du Plessis of Poitiers, who had practised as a surgeon, and Isaac Taillefert of Chateau Thierry, a hat-maker, were also on board; they all brought out their wives and children. Jean, however, seems to have travelled alone, without his mother, siblings, a wife or children. The Oosterlandt sunk off Cape Town, South Africa in 1697. The wreck was discovered in 1988. Several years after landing in the Cape Jean was awarded a farm "Palmiet Valleij" in 1694. The farm still exists today and is in the Paarl area. In 1712 he was given the farm "Knolle Vallet" in the Drakenstein district.

2345. JEAN MESNARD (Howard Charles's nine-times-great-grandfather[1711], see Maternal Ancestry(17)) was born in 1659, in Saint-Martin-de-la-Brasque, Vaucluse, Provence-Alpes-Côte d'Azur, France, to Georges Mesnard[2489] and Madeleine Gauthier[2490]. He died in 1692, aged about 33, in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa.
On 23 December 1687, in a letter to the Heeren Zeventienen, the Rotterdam Chamber advised that the following individuals had expressed an intention to sail to the Cape on the ship China. They were: Jean Mesnard, Louise Courbonne, Marie Anthonarde, Jeanne Mesnard, George Mesnard, Jacques Mesnard, Jean Mesnard, Philippe Meïnard, André Mesnard, Jehane Marque, Jean Jourdan, Pierre Jourdan, Marie Jourdan, Jeanne Rousse, Marie Rousse, Marguerite Rousse, Pierre Malan, Elisabeth Richarde, Hercules Verdeau, Pierre la Grange, Pierre Jourdan de Cabriere, Paul Jourdan, André Pellanchon and Matthieu Fracassé.

On 20 March 1688 the China departed Goeree en route to de Caep de Goede Hoop where it docked on 4 August 1688. Among those on board were a group of eight orphan girls sent to the Cape following requests by Jan van Riebeeck (1659) and Simon van der Stel (1685) that the Heeren XVII send between 20 and 40 marriageable girls to the Cape. When they were finally sent in 1688 the Heeren XVII wrote that they had been selected because of their experience in farming and it was suggested they be encouraged to marry farmers. They were: Ariaante Jansse, Willemyntje Ariens de Wit, Ariaantje Jacobs, Judith Verbeek, Engelje Cornéliss van der Bout, Catharina Jansz van der Zee, Petronella Cornelisz and Anna Elkop. Also, on board were 28 Huguenot refugees from Provence, of whom 8, mostly women, died enroute. The refugees who commenced this 19 week voyage were Matthieu Fracassé, Pierre Jaubert, Susanne Reyne, Pierre Jourdan, Marie Jourdan, Jeanne Rousse, Marguerite Rousse, André Pellanchon, Paul Jourdan, Pierre la Grange, Jehane Marque, Jean Jourdan, Pierre Jourdan, Jean Mesnard, Louise Courbonne, Marie Anthonarde, Pierre Malan, Elisabeth Richarde, Jacques Malan and Paul Roux.

2346. LOUISE CORBONNE (Howard Charles's nine-times-great-grandmother[1712], see Maternal Ancestry(17)) was born in 1657, in Cabrieres Aigues Provence France, to Louis Corbonne[2491] and Marie Anthouarde[2492]. She died in 1690, aged about 33, in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa.

Jean Mesnard[2345] married Louise Corbonne. They had one son:
Phillipe Mesnard[2090] born in 1682 in Provence, France; died in 1751

2347. PAUL ROUX (Howard Charles's nine-times-great-grandfather[1713], see Maternal Ancestry(18)) was born on 7 February 1665, in Orange, Provence-Alpes-Côte d’Azur, France, to Jerémie Jean Roux[2493] and Marie Jourdanne[2494]. He died on 7 February 1723, aged 58, in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa.

Clara Herfst has widely been assumed to be the biological daughter of Jan Herfst but the events in the life of her mother Lijsbeth Sanders and in her own life make this highly unlikely. It is far more likely that her biological father was Willem Teerling and that Herfst was her step- or de facto adoptive father.

Starting with the most recent key event in the timeline is the birth of Clara's daughter Johanna Potgieter before 3 May 1707 - the date on which she is baptised. Even given the very early age of motherhood for some women at the time (for example 14 years), Clara must have been born at least as early as May 1693, but probably even earlier.

On 6 April 1689 Lijsbeth confessed that she was four months pregnant with Teerling's child. She said she had become sexually involved with Teerling after he left the employ of Louis van Bengale. Two and a half months earlier she refused in court to marry Louis because of his abusive treatment including hitting her and threatening to kill her.

Teerling's child was due in September 1689, and this date fits a logical birth date for Clara who then would have been 17 when her daughter Johanna was born - a not unusual age for the birth of first children in that period.

I am of the view that Lijsbeth Sanders and Jan Herfst only became romantically involved around 1699/1700 after she was released from a three year term in a chain gang. Her only biological child with Herfst would then be Gerbragt with Clara becoming his de facto adopted or step-daughter.

Clara married her indirect relation, Johannes Harmensz Potgieter[2098].

Johannes Harmensz Potgieter[2098] married Clara Harst. They had two daughters:

* Elizabeth Potgieter[2199] born on 31 March 1709 in Paarl, Breede River DC, Western Cape, South Africa; died in 1739

* Isabella Potgieter[2097] born in 1711 in Stellenbosch, Western Cape, South Africa; died in 1789

2354. HARMAN JANSZ POTGIETER (Howard Charles's nine-times-great-grandfather[1759], see Maternal Ancestry(22)) was born in 1635, in Nordhorn, Grafschaft Bentheim, Niedersachsen, Germany, to Jan Hermann Potgieter[2507] and Schwere Lodden[2508]. In 1670, aged about 35, he was a Soldier for the VOC, and later labourer in the building trade. In 1679, aged about 44, he was a blacksmith as one of the first occupants in Eerste river, Stellenbosch, South Africa.

  She and Louis van Bengale were engaged on 17 March 1687 Stellenbosch, Cabo de Boa Esperanca, They appeared before the Magistrate and executed a pledge to marry. According to Hattingh some researchers interpreted this pledge as a marriage; and Louis' later application to be released from it, as divorce. Hattingh argues that instead, it was merely an agreement or promise.

  As regards the life of another early free black, Louis van Bengalen, there is more information and greater certainty.
  He presumably also accompanied Wagenaer to the Cape in 1662, when according to later evidence he must have been about ten years old, and was sold on Wagenaer's departure in 1666 to the Secunde Hendrick Lacus for 80 rixdollars.57 After Lacus had been accused of fraud and dismissed, Louis was allowed by Isbrand Goske, in his capacity as visiting Commissioner, to buy his freedom, but as he did not have the required amount, he appears to have been appropriated temporarily by the Company. It was not until 1672, after five years of 'faithful service', that he was manumitted on the payment of 50 rixdollars, with which Lacus's account was duly credited. Louis himself stated that he was unable to read, but Hattingh remarks that he was one of the few free blacks who had some fixed form of signature. The signature took the form of a vertical line for the L, while the V and B were linked together in the shape of a fan.' He was baptised in the Cape church in 1675, his age being given as 23, and further distinguished himself by becoming a professed member in 1697, a long delay of this nature being quite common at the time.

Louis received a garden plot on the outskirts of the Table Valley in 1676, adjoining those of Anthonij van Bengal and the mandoor Sij mon de Arabiee and in 1685 he was to pay 760 guilders in four instalments for a house and plot in the settlement. He is known to have been in possession of the slave Anthonij van Coromandel1,62 while in 1687 he bought Matthijs van Bengal for 35 rixdollars, and two years later sold Matthijs van Malabar, who may well have been the same individual, for 30 rixdollars. On the latter occasion he was described as a ‘black agriculturist’. In 1700 he sold Titus van Macassar for 55 rixdollars.

During the 1680s Louis had various business dealings with Andries Houwer involving wheat, fish and cash, and found himself increasingly in debt of which he was unable to free himself, although he promised on one occasion to repay Houwer before the visit of the return ships, a profitable time commonly used for settling accounts at the Cape. At one stage towards the end of the decade he is known to have been briefly among the free black farmers in the Stellenbosch district, and in 1687 he and his former slave Lijsbeth Jansz, who had been freed by him in 1683 with her two children, formally gave their promise of marriage before the local authorities there. No marriage took place, however, and in 1694 he married Rebecca van Macassar, who had arrived at the Cape the previous year as a professing Christian. It was after this that he himself was confirmed as a member of the church.

Whatever Louis’s sources of income may have been, and irrespective of the amounts he may have been owing his creditors, when his possessions were sold by order of the court in 1705 to pay his debts, the furniture included a round table, six high-backed chairs, two mirrors and feather beds and pillows, and his own share of the proceeds amounted to about 2200 guilders. He and his wife had by that time returned to the Table Valley. In 1711 a further compulsory sale took place which produced just over 1000 guilders. In 1715 Louis was still alive, 43 years after his arrival at the Cape as a child with the Wagenaers, but by 1717 his wife was listed in the census returns as a widow!*

Slave born in present day Bangladesh c1651, servant to high-ranking Dutch East India Company officials. Brought to the Cape c1670. Ambitious and entrepreneurial man who bought his freedom when aged about 21. His name appears as a ‘Free Black’ on the list of residents virtually every year from 1673 till 1716. In 1675 he was granted a piece of land in the Table Valley (Gardens Shopping Centre) and next year a town erf in Hout Street, corner of St George’s Mall. On this he built a house with a thatched attic in which his own slaves lived. By 1683 he was living in Stellenbosch, where he was granted a 29 morgen piece of land in the Jonkershoek Valley which he called Leef-op-Hoop. In 1688 he lived there with his wife, a knecht and three slaves. No crops are recorded but since he had a knecht this may be an omission — typically he would have had a vineyard, wheat fields and many sheep. He had a very unhappy marriage to Lysbeth Saunders of the Cape*. She was a slave he met (1678), bought (1680), freed (1683), had two children with (1680 and 1686), and married in 1687. That Louis had a knecht to run the farm suggests he may have been absent for extended periods at his other properties in Cape Town (where he had had a child by another woman in 1685).

Soon after marriage, Lysbeth Saunders started a torrid affair with the knecht, a 56-year-old Englishman called William Teerling. Louis fired him and Lysbeth left.

The couple were divorced in 1688, a scandal at the time in which Louis pressed for Lysbeth’s re-slavement (which he would continue to do for the next 27 years). Louis seems to have got custody of the children.

In 1690 he left the Stellenbosch district and returned to the Table Valley. His Leef-op-Hoop grant was confirmed in 1692 but the Stellenbosch census does not record him as present. He may have put the farm on the market from about this time, but could not find a buyer for in 1696 it was sold to the Orphan Chamber for f400, distinctly under-priced. By 1697 he was in financial difficulties and in 1705 he was forced to sell his Hout Street property to repay a debt. In 1712 he sold the last of his properties.

Despite his acrimonious divorce, and though he was financially stretched, Louis was widely respected in the community.

All Free Blacks at the time were received into the Dutch Reformed Church but Louis was the only one to be confirmed.

Friends frequently asked him to be Godfather at their children’s christenings. He married Rebecca of Macassar in 1694 and died about 1716. Amongst his household goods were a round table, two mirrors, six high-backed chairs made of ebony, an ordinary bed and a four-poster. His three daughters were absorbed into the white community and were among the ancestors of notable Afrikaans families such as Du Plessis, Pretorius, Myburgh, Coetzee, etc.

*Boeseken and Hattingh disagree on several points, including how legal the marriage was. Boeseken also mentions that while Louis was a slave, his huifsrouw was d’Hottentoinne Zara -- the only Khoi woman to have married a slave.

Howard Charles Thomas

Direct Relations

Louis van Bengale married Regina Christina van Ahrendtsdorf[2362].

2364. LIJSBETH SANDERS (Howard Charles's nine-times-great-grandmother[1810], see Maternal Ancestry(21), Maternal Ancestry(24), Maternal Ancestry(26) and Maternal Ancestry(29)) was born in 1659, in Guinea, to Gerrit Sandersz[2513] and Lijsbeth Arabus[2514]. Lijsbeth was a Slave. She died in 1743, aged about 84, in Cape, South Africa.

Lijsbeth married three times. She was married to Louis van Bengale[2363], William Tarling[2365] and Jan Herfst[2505] (her indirect relation).

  On 27 July 1683 Cabo de Boa Esperança Lijsbeth Sanders was emancipated by Louis van Bengale her owner and lover, who described her in his application as “mijn meijt genaemt Lijsbeth van Cabo”. Lijsbeth's children, Elizabeth Louisz and Anna Louisz were freed along with her. In return, Lijsbeth was required to loyally serve Louis for a further year.
  Between 28 April 1678 and 30 April 1678 de Caep de Goede Hoop Lijsbeth Sanders confessed that she had broken into the home of Louis van Bengale and stolen a gold ring and 3 silver buttons - een guide ringh en 3 paar silvered cnoopjes - she was ceded to Louis in compensation for his loss and her accomplices - two sailors - were banished to Robben Island.
  On 15 March 1688 Stellenbosch Lijsbeth Sanders was sued by Louis van Bengale for being "absent". He demanded before the court that she must marry him. Lijsbeth claimed that she was not denying her pledge to marry, but that it had actually been conditional as the Magistrate had cautioned Louis to desist from tyrannically treating her "met smijten, slaan en dreijgementen van dooden" (by throwing things at her, hitting her and threatening her with death). The court attempted to bring them to agreement, i.e.: “met allerhande saachte middelen p(ar)tijen eerst soekende te bevredighen, hebbe door haar interpositie niets kome obtineeren (bewerkstellig), alsoo de Gh(edaag)de absoluijt verklaerende, noch te kome noch te willen met dito Lovijs om reeden vooren gemelt trouwen, noch huijsjouden dus hebben p(ar)ti met wedersijs bevelligingh ijandelijk geaccordeert, dat Lijsbeth soude gaen, waer het haer belofde, doch niet te mogen in huwelijk met een ander treeden, soos langh Lovijs ongetrou was; ende dat de Vader aangebeegden kinderen bij ditte Lijsbeth in onecht geprockeert, soude te huijshouden in alle deucht en Christelijke plicht op te trekken, en doen opvoeden, soo met school te senden als anders: en sij p(ar)tijen voor den Achtharen Raad met dit accoort vergenoegt geweest”.
  An agreement was reached before the court, but it did not hold for long, because later that year, Louis sued Lijsbeth and her lover, William Teerling, and demanded that the court reinstate her in slavery.
  It is unclear when the relationship between Lijsbeth and William Teerling began. He was born in England and worked for the company (VOC) for several years before becoming a vryburger and was for a while a servant and sheep herder for Louis van Bengale. Louis fired Teerling because of his relationship with Lijsbeth and sued them both, demanding custody of the youngest child (presumably Maria); release from the promise to marry her, "haer t'enemael ten opsigte van trouwbeloften en anders ontslagen te sijn”, adding that he had failed to comply with the promise to marry because she was not a Christian, “sy niet in de Chr(istelijke) religie onderwesen, off gedaan”. He also demanded that the court reinstate her in slavery, “wederom in swavernij bij den eijs(e)r gestelt”. Hattingh writes that the court determined that he could get the child once he had paid Lijsbeth the full “kostegeld” - perhaps the expenses related to the child's upbringing.
  On 6 January 1696 de Caep de Goede Hoop Lijsbeth Sanders was convicted of housebreaking and theft. She was sentenced to be flogged and to 3 years hard labour in chains.

  Free Blacks' - the name given freed slaves or people who were not born slaves, and who were of Mrican (but not Khoikhoi), Asian, Chinese or coloured descent - often married each other or co-habited.1 ' However, freedom from their past shared oppression was no guarantee of a happy life together.
  After Louis of Bengal was freed, aged forty-five, he became a slave master and bought the freedom of his female slave, Lijsbeth van die Kaap. The surname Van die Kaap indicates that the person in question was of mixed parentage, one parent being white and the other 'non-white'.
  Lijsbeth was Louis's common-law wife, and they had two children, whose freedom Louis also bought. Louis had promised to marry Lijsberh on 27 March 1687, but when he failed to do so, Lijsberh ran away to her mother for shelter. After Louis issued a summons ordering her return, Lijsbeth told the magistrate that he had often hit her and threatened to kill her. Typical of the times, the law favoured Louis for being a husband and father, and especially after he testified that Lijsbeth had had an affair with Louis's foreman and shepherd, an Englishman.
named William Teerling. For his part in the affair, Teerling was sacked. The magistrate granted Louis's request that he be given sole custody of Lijsberth's youngest child, but ordered Louis to refund Lijsbeth the cost of having reared the child until then.

Betrothals were taken seriously, and Louis had the cheek to ask the magistrate to make Lijsbeth release him from his promise of marriage, which was granted - presumably to the relief of Lijsbeth, who had already made it clear she did not want to marry him. Louis, seeking his revenge, then asked that Lijsbeth be enslaved once more on the grounds that she had not yet been baptised and conversion to Christianity was imperative to being freed. He also claimed the sum of 475 pounds from Teerling, alleging it was compensation for sheep that Teerling had stolen. While it is not recorded whether Teerling had to pay such a considerable amount on a shepherd's wages, Lijsberth was spared any punishment. The magistrate, seeing through Louis's tactics, refused to enslave Lijsbeth and absolved her of any punishment!

Lijsbeth Sanders was born before 2 March 1659 de Caep de Goede Hoop most likely in the household of Hendrick Hendricksz Boom and Anna Joris given that her putative mother had been re-allocated to them by the time of the 1657 muster.

Lijsbeth Sanders and Louis van Bengale were in a de facto relationship circa 1678 Cabo de Boa Esperança.
Circa 1684 Lijsbeth Sanders and Willem Teerling were lovers de Caep de Goede Hoop.

Lijsbeth Sanders and Jan Herfst were in a de facto relationship circa 1690 Drakenstein.
Engagement She and Louis van Bengale were engaged on 17 March 1687 Stellenbosch, Cabo de Boa Esperança. They appeared before the Magistrate and executed a pledge to marry. According to Hattingh some researchers interpreted this pledge as as a marriage; and Louis' later application to be released from it, as divorce. Hattingh argues that instead, it was merely an agreement or promise.

Lijsbeth Sanders died circa 1743 de Caep de Goede Hoop.

SlaveTransaction When, on 6 January 1665, Hendrick Hendricksz Boom , sold his entire household, including the adult slaves Anna van Guinea and Claes Kelder van Angola to Matthijs Coeijmans, Lijsbeth Sanders was likely one of two child slaves sold with them.

Lijsbeth Sanders was sold by Matthijs Coeijmans, to Adriaan Willensz van Brakel on 2 March 1671 de Caep de Goede Hoop.

"This was based on the confession [CA: CJ 291, no. 251 (Confession of Elisabeth van de Caep, 6 April 1689)] by Lijsbeth Sanders herself where she admits being pregnant with Teerling's child (4 months pregnant on 6 April 1689). No baptism for Clara can be found - maybe, just maybe (but wrong area) at Drakenstein (or maybe as an adult before marriage) and these records were destroyed in a fire. At some point after Teerling was convicted, Lijsbeth Sanders shackled up with Herbst - as did Anna van Guinea or he with Anna (1688 muster roll confirms this) and Teerling disappears until his recorded death in 1714 at Stellenbosch. I have considered Clara as a possible biological daughter of Herbst given the fact that there is a gap (1690-1702) between the birth of Teerling's child (if no miscarriage) and that of Gerbregt who is on record as daughter to Herbst and baptized but discounted this on the basis of the clear age difference between Clara and Gerbregt if you look at the years in which they both married and had children. Clara is clearly a lot older than Gerbregt. I get the impression that Teerling was totally disgraced and probably prohibited from having anything further to do with Lijsbeth Sanders. Lijsbeth Sanders lost custody of her three daughters by Louis to the biological father and then started a new life with Herbst in company with Maria Everts, Hoena and Paaij Claes which was also badly disrupted by her 1696 3-years hard labour conviction and punishment. With Teerling effectively removed from their lives, Clara probably grew up as adopted daughter of Herbst."

Louis van Bengale[2363], aged about 25, married Lijsbeth Sanders, aged about 19, in 1678. They had three daughters:

Elizabeth Louisz van Bengale[2214] born on 6 October 1680 in Cape Town, South Africa
Anna Louisz van Bengale[2217] born on 27 July 1683 in Cape Town, South Africa
Maria Louisa van de Kaap[2103] born in 1686 in Cape, South Africa; died in 1710 in Cape, South Africa

In March 1708, the first grant of land was made where the town of Caledon now stands. A burgher, Ferdinand Appel, had 12 morgen of land given to him in freehold there, "in order that he might plant a garden and build a house of accommodation for persons making use of the hot springs."

Ménage à trois: DNA tests on descendants of Theunis Botha shows that he actually was the son of Ferdinandus Appel. Maria Kickers had an affair with him before he married his wife.

Slave transaction: On 25 June 1697 Anthonij van Cochin was sold by Marten de Jeught to Ferdinandús Appel, for Rds. 50.

Ferdinandus Appel was not married to Maria Kickers[2166]. They had two children:

Theunis Botha[2153] born on 1 February 1686 in Swellendam, Western Cape, South Africa; died on 7 March 1765 in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa
Sophia Appel[2228] born in 1692; died in 1777

Christoffel Snyman farmed in partnership with Ernst Friedrich Walter, on the farm Sandvliet in Greet Frakenstein. After Christoffel died in 1706, his wife Marguerite de Savoye married Henning Viljoen (Villion).

2404. MARGUERITE THERESA DE SAVOYE (Howard Charles's nine-times-great-grandmother[1960], see Maternal Ancestry(62)) was born on 4 September 1672, in Ghent, Belgium, to Jacques de Savoie[2538] and Christine Marie Madeleine du Pont[2539]. She died on 20 March 1742, aged 69, in Cape, South Africa.

Marguerite Theresa married twice. She was married to Christoffel Snyman[2403] and Henning Viljoen[2257] (her indirect relation).
On 26 April 1688, Marguerite-Thérèse de Savoye arrived at the Cape of Good Hope from The Netherlands on board the Oosterland, together with her father, step-mother and siblings Jacque and Barbe-Thérèse.

Adolph of Madagascar, a slave, was another Cape resident whose passion soon got him into a lot of trouble. He lived on the Zandvliet farm, which was owned by Marguerite de Savoye, a widow at the time. The farm is now called Solms-Delta, and houses an interesting array of Khoikhoi artefacts dug up on the farm, an invaluable record of research into slave and Khoikhoi history and the history of the farm's ownership, as well as a variety of very drinkable wines. Marguerite married Christoffel Snyman, the son of Groot Catrijn, the mother of the Snyman family. Adolph's lover Eva was a slave on Zandvliet as well, and when she jilted him for someone else, Adolph set the thatch of the farmhouse alight in a fit of rage. This was not an uncommon crime among slaves who wanted revenge on either their owners or fellow slaves. And so, to allay suspicions that he might be the arsonist, Adolph shouted: 'Fire, fire,' and stormed into the kitchen where, still extremely angry, he laid into the unsuspecting Eva, hitting her repeatedly.

There were no fire trucks in the countryside at the Cape in 1720, and to put fires out one just grabbed whatever one could, be it a bucket, basin or jug. Adolph made a great show of fetching buckets of water to throw onto the burning farmhouse - an act which did not fool his fellow slaves, who accused him of starting the fire. Adolph vehemently denied the charge, knowing full well the consequences of committing arson. However, determined that no innocent slave should be blamed for Adolph's crime, his former compatriots tied him to a ladder and forced him to confess. Now thoroughly frightened, Adolph wriggled out of his bonds like Houdini and ran away, a trick he performed once more when he was caught on the farm of Jan Potgieter, who also tied him up so he could be taken to the landdrost.

Third time proved unlucky for Adolph when he was caught on the Malan farm in Franschhoek and sent back to his owner. Dutch law believed in fitting the punishment to the crime, and Adolph, like the Inquisition victims, was burnt at the stake.

Christoffel Snyman[2403], aged 21, married Marguerite Theresa de Savoye, aged 18, on 10 December 1690 in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa. They had six children:

- Catharina Snyman[2235] born in 1692; died in 1742

Scheepers was the son of a sailmaker from Haarlem. His real career was not as naval officer but as a merchant (from 1641) and shipowner in Rotterdam. With the seizure of power by the orangists in 1672 Scheepers belonged to the group who took control of the town council of that place over. He served there between 1678 and 1698 as mayor. The new regime of William III of Orange replaced many senior officers. After the Battle of Kijkduin on October 6 1673 Scheepers was appointed lieutenant-admiral of the Admiralty of the Northern Quarter. On 28 March 1692 he was appointed successor to Lieutenant-Admiral Aert van Nes Jansse the Admiralty of the Maze. He was buried in the chapel of the Lords of Kralingen in the Saint Lawrence Church in Rotterdam. The chapel was destroyed in the 1940 bombardment.

He died in 1689, aged about 43, in Stellenbosch, Western Cape, South Africa. Francois married twice, including Cornelia Campenaar[2433]. Citation: Source 25. Unreliable or estimated. Francois described himself as from Clermont and was perhaps born there circa 1646. The date has been estimated. There has been a widespread assumption in genealogical circles and historical societies that he was a French Huguenot who most likely hailed from Clermont on the N31, about 60 kilometres north of Paris. However in the 1681 list of vrijluiden or free individuals at the Cape, it is stated that he was from Mazeijck which is a small town in the then-Spanish Netherlands (now Belgium) known today as Maaseik. There are several different Clermonts in the general region of Maaseik. As to him being a Huguenot, there is nothing in the record which specifically identifies him as such and given his early arrival, he was more likely a Walloon or even, remotely, a Catholic.

Sometime in 1654 the French ship St. Georges had left Nantes enroute to the French settlement Fort Dauphin at Tolanhaer, Madagascar near St Lucy's Bay. The French had frequently made war on the people of the island, and had killed a king, a prince and many men. They had captured four 'royal' children who were kept on the St Georges with a view toward eventually taking them to France. The vessel remained at Fort Dauphin for eight months assembling a three-masted vessel intended for deployment in the Red Sea. The St. Georges and the other vessel proceeded to Monanboela for two months and then sailed for the Red Sea to "rob the Moors". They attempted to capture an English vessel believing it to be a "Moor" ship, but were beaten off, losing 60 men. They returned to Socatra where they acquired musk, civet and nine casks of aloes before returning to the Mascarenhas [Réunion] for tobacco and then sailing on via St Maria to Tolanhaer with supplies, including rice, for the garrison. The St. Georges then sailed on to Saldanha Bay with a cargo of hides, wax, gum, minerals, the "four royal children" and a small box of great value where they awaited the arrival of Admiral Gilles de La Roche-Saint-André at the helm of La Duchesse and two other vessels, La Maréschale and La Érman. The French fleet sailed into Table Bay on 31 March 1656. Despite the concern of the Cape hierarchy of possible evil intent on the part of the French, there was some back-and-forth socialising, culminating with the gifting of the two 'Abysinnian princesses', Lijsbeth Arabus and Cornelia Arabus, who had been captured on Madagascar to Maria de la Queillerie. A third, unnamed male slave was presented to Jan van Riebeeck. This unnamed "slave" may have been the third of the four 'royal' children, but in any event he died on 14 June 1656. It is tempting to think the royal children were full or half-siblings, however, this has not been revealed in the record and they may have been from different branches of the royal family who had been attacked. The account of the Malagasy origins of the girls was told to Jan Woutersz: by Boudewyn van den Abele, a sailor from Bruges who had arrived with the St. Georges at Saldanha. Much of this information is summarised from Mansell Upham's Made or Marred by time - the Other Armozijn & two enslaved Arabian 'princesses' at the Cape of Good Hope (1656) which is essential reading for descendants of these individuals.

She first lived in Courtrai. On 31 May 1658 Mayken Hendriks van den Berg, Lysbeth Jansz, Jannetje Ferdinandus, Jannetje Gerrits, Petronella Does, Neeltjen Arensz, Cornelia Theunisz and Hendrick Jacobs sailed on the Harpe from Wielingen to de Caep de Goede Hoop where it docked on 17 11 1658.

On 23 February 1673 Henrick Barentze van der Zee and Jannetje Ferdinandus, both ill and confined to bed, executed a will in which they each designated their surviving spouse as beneficiary in their estate. If Hendrick died first, Jannetje would send f 600 Hollandse waarde to his father Barent Hendricksz., the mayor of the island Ommeland ([Ameland]. If Jannetje predeceased Hendrick, he would give each of her underage sons from her first marriage, Joannes Appel and Ferdinandus Appel, half of f 1 000 Hollandse waarde as their mother's portion. It was also their supreme will and wish that if either died first or returned to Patria Hendrick's slave, Simon van Angola, was to be emancipated, however this would only come into effect after three further years of slaving for his surviving owner. The record does not reflect whether or not this ever happened.6.

permission to marry the free black Anthonij Jansz van Bengale. With this, she became the first company owned slave to be manumitted at the Cape.

Catharina van Bengale (Opklim) was owned by the freeburgher Wouter Cornelisz Mostert (Mostaert) and sold (in 1677) after his decease (in 1676) by his widow Hester Weijers who was also variously recorded as Hester Weijers Klim; Hester Jans and Hester van Lier.

Slave names often carried a sinister subtext (see Robert Shell; Children of Bondage, pp 240-246) but sometimes they indicated a fairly simple connection or reference. So in the case of this woman when referred to as Catharina Opklim, I think one might consider a logical connection to her owner's wife . . . i.e. Hester Weijers Klim.

I am not familiar with the ancestry of Pieter Dirk-Uys, but as Keith mentioned F.W. de Klerk's ancestry also includes Catharina van Paliacatta, popularly known as Groote Catrijn; but who also variously appears in the record as Catharina Wassermakers, Catharina van Bengale, Catharina van Malabar, and Catharina van Batavia. She was mother of Christoffel Snyman through her relationship with Hans Christoffel Snijder alias Snyman and as such, was the progenetrix of the Snyman family.

She is a fascinating ancestor of many South Africans - being the first recorded female convict as well as the first freed VOC slave at the Cape. Some may perhaps describe her as a harlot. I would not. While she had several succeeding relationships, each seems to have been monogamous. She certainly was never a prostitute.

Hans Christoffel Schnijder van Heidelberg in die Rynse-Palts kom in die Kaap aan voor 1665. Hy het ‘n verhouding gehad met die slavin Catharina van Bengale, wat ook bekend was as Groote Catrijn. Hy was ‘n soldaat in die Kaapse garnisoen. Op 30 Julie 1667 is hy verban na Robbeniland omdat hy nie wag gestaan het nie, maar in plaas daarvan gereeld by Groote Catrijn (Catharina van Paliacatta of van Bengale) geslaap het.

Daarna verdwyn hy van die toneel.

Catharina van Paliacatta of Bengale, ook bekend as Groote Catrijn, (c. 1631 – c. 1683) was ‘n slavin afkomstig van Paliacatta in Bengale en was werkzaam in Batavie. In 1656 is sy seksueel aangeraand in ’n stal deur haar metgesel, Claes van Malabar. Om haar te verdedig slaan sy Claes met ‘n leer, sy blaas bars en hy sterv en later. Sy word ter dood veroordeel, maar begenadig en verban as ‘n slaaf na die Kaap waar sy in Februarie 1657 aankom. Sy was die wasvrou van agtereenvolgende Goewerneurs van die Kaap. Sy het twee voorkinders gehad, een by Pieter Everaerts en een by die bogenoemde Schnijder. Sy was voor 1672 vrygestel as slavin. Catharina het daarna op 20 Desember 1671 getrou met die vrywante Antonij (Jansz) (de Later) van Bengale. Antonij van Bengale, Groote Catrijn, haar dogter en kleindogter het almal omgekom tussen Desember 1682 en Februarie 1683 in een van ander tragedie. Christoffel Snyman het die tragedie oorleef en die groot boedel van Antonij het bygedra tot sy opvoeding en erfposie.

Several well-known South African families are descended from such banned liaisons. The Snyman family owes its existence to Groot Catrijn, an Eastern slave, who led a chequered career of sex, gambling and minor theft at the Fort. Irrespective of these charges, she was promoted to the position of chief washerwoman for several commanders. She had numerous affairs with soldiers at the Fort, but it was her short-lived affair with Christoffel Snyman that produced one son, named after his father, who became the patriarch of the Snyman family. Snyman Senior, a soldier stationed at the Fort, was continually in trouble, and the last seen of him in the Company’s records is an entry confirming his imprisonment on Robben Island. There is no record of his death - he probably either managed to stowaway on a ship that took provisions from the island, or he drowned attempting to escape. Groot Catrijn eventually became a respectable member of society, converting to Christianity and subsequently freed. She married a freed slave, Anthonij of Bengal, and produced several children. The family enjoyed a colourful life, appearing in the record books several times. Anthonij was riddled with bad debts, and Catrijn brought a charge against her neighbour for stealing her poultry. The charge was hotly denied, but Catrijn’s son, Christoffel, was a star witness to the incident, having seen with his own eyes his mother’s duck running down the street with the neighbour’s knife stuck in its back.

Groot Catrijn and the Snyman family

In 1657, a slave called Groot Catrijn arrived at the Cape to serve a life sentence for the murder of her lover in Batavia. This unlikely woman played a key role in early Cape colonial society, and her story forms one of the foundation stones of what is now the Solms-Delta wine estate. Not only was she the Cape of Good Hope’s first recorded female convict (or ‘bandiet’), she was also the mother of the well-known Snyman family...

Groot Catrijn’s story begins long before her banishment to the Cape. She was born around 1631 into an indigenous slave-owning society in Paliacatta (present-day Pulicat, in India) - a VOC (Dutch East India Company) textile trading post situated on the Coromandel Coast. The VOC obtained textiles from there, such as indigo, cotton yarn and ‘Guinees lijnwaad’ (Guinea cloth), with which they traded in the Indian archipelago. The VOC was one of the most successful global trading companies in history, whose power stretched across many lands and oceans. It was probably due to Pullicat’s global trade connections that Groote Catrijn ended up in Batavia (now Jakarta, in modern-day Java), the VOC’s eastern trading and governmental headquarters, working as a slave in the household of Maria Magdalena - a ‘vrije vrou’ - who was probably a freed slave herself. In 1656 Groote Catrijn was condemned to death: to be tied to a stake and garrotted (strangled) until dead, for the murder of her former lover Clae van Mallebaerse – also a slave, from the Coast of Malabar. But she was never to suffer execution. She was pardoned by the Governor-General of Batavia himself, who commuted her sentence to life banishment to the Cabo de Bona Esperança (The Cape of Good Hope). He decided that her killing of Clae was committed in self-defence. The two lovers had become involved in a physical struggle during which Clae assaulted Catrijn sexually. After being thrown to the ground, and fearing for her life, Catrijn grabbed a hay ladder and hit Clae violently in his lower stomach, causing his bladder to burst. He died four days later as a result of this injury. Catrijn was then banished to the Cape, to serve her life sentence as a Company slave of the VOC.

On 21 February 1657 she arrived at the Cape, after nearly three month’s journey from Batavia on board the ship Prins Willem. This was the average time it took to cross the 5,900 nautical miles to the Cape. Following her arrival, Groote Catrijn worked as a washerwoman at the fort - the precursor of the present castle (which was completed in 1674). If Catrijn was a washerwoman for the Commanders of the early Cape fort, then she certainly worked for Jan van Riebeeck during his ten year period of rule from 1652 until 1662. After van Riebeeck’s departure a pattern of short-term commanders at the Cape started, lasting for the next 20 years. It was probably partly due to this disrupted rule that Groote Catrijn’s status as a convict and slave for life became blurred in official memory.

On her arrival in 1657 there were only 14 other women (whether freed or enslaved) living at the small Cape settlement. It is no wonder that Catrijn became involved in relationships with freed slave men, and European VOC sailors and soldiers, by whom she reportedly mothered 4 children.

One relationship that had interesting consequences for the genealogical line of many South Africans today was with the Company soldier Hans Christoffel Snijder (or Snieman) from Heidelberg, Germany. In 1667 Snieman was convicted for leaving his post as sentry at the fort “te slapen sijn ten woonplaets an sekere bekende zwarte meijt” (to sleep at the living place of a certain well known black servant girl). He was sentenced to live on Robben Island for two years, and to forfeit two months salary, as well as receiving physical punishment. Groote Catrijn’s illegitimate son born of this relationship was baptised Christoffel on the 9 March 1669. Throughout his life he was identified by his father’s surname, as were his own children. This Christoffel, who was the progenitor of the South African Snyman family, was the second owner of what is now Delta farm (then called Zandvliet).

In 1671 Catrijn married Anthonij Jansz van Bengale, the first known ‘free black’ to purchase land and be a registered landowner at the Cape of Good Hope. Catrijn became a free woman when she was pardoned by the authorities so that she could marry this pioneering spirit.

By 1690 her son Christoffel was married to Marguerite Therese de Savoye, the daughter of the eminent French Huguenot, Jacques de Savoye. Jacques arrived at the Cape on the 25 April 1688 on board the Oosterland with his second wife, his mother-in-law, two daughters (one of them Marguerite) and his son. Jacques was one of the wealthiest Huguenots that sought sanctuary at the Cape, as he did not require financial assistance from the government and even bought his servants with him. So how did the illegitimate son of a convict come to marry the daughter of one of the wealthiest, most prominent Huguenots at the Cape?

At the tender age of 13, Christoffel’s entire family suffered a tragedy (presumably due to smallpox) from which he was the only survivor. He might have gone into the care of his godmother - Mooij Ansela - and her husband Arnoldus Willemz Basson (whose family owned the neighbouring properties called Eensaamheid and Meerewrup, across the river from Delta).

By 1701, Ansela’s family were the wealthiest property owners in the Drakenstein valley, owning over 300 morgen (or 625 acres) of property. Had Snyman been in the care of his godmother’s family until he married, it would have been a favourable match for Marguerite.

Through excavations at Solms-Delta, archaeologists have uncovered the ruins of a 17th century colonial dwelling - almost certainly the very structure that was inhabited by Snyman and Marguerite as they started a family together. It was most likely built by the farm’s first owners, their immediate predecessors: Hans Silverbag and Callus Laut. This was an extraordinary find, as very few such ruins have been excavated; it is the oldest intact floor plan ever found at the Cape.

The most unique element of this archaeological find lies in its connection to a prehistoric site lying alongside it. Thousands of late Stone-Age artefacts dating to between 4,000 and 6,000 years old were found less than one metre away from the 17th century ruin. Both indigenous hunter-gatherers and colonists chose to settle on this same site, a tranquil plateau overlooking the Dwars and Berg Rivers. From past to present, the history of Solms-Delta is connected to the ordinary people who inhabited the land; from its stone age beginnings to modern South Africa, the farm embodies our shared origins.

Hans Christoffel Snijman[2533] was not married to Catharina van Paliacatta. They had one son:

An exceptional case is that of the military man Pieter Everaert, who as Ensign formed one of the small group of senior officials in the Fort, and who on his death in 1664 left 150 guilders to the slave Catharina van Bengalen for the support and upbringing of her unborn child. The child would seem obviously to have been his own.

The birth of children to the slave women can be traced only insofar as they were baptised, which seems in the early years to have been done mainly on the initiative of the owners of the respective mothers. As slaves could contract no legal marriage, these children were inevitably illegitimate and described thus in the church records, and no indication was given of who the father was or whether he was a white man or a fellow slave. Later, when it was realised that this was of importance, the phrase 'the father being an unknown Christian' was added as appropriate.

Jacques de Savoie 1636 The story of Vrede & Lust starts in 1686. In Flanders, 50-year-old Jacques de Savoye is being persecuted by religious fanatics, he has just lost the wife who endured labour nine times to provide him with heirs, and his textile trading business in Ghent is ruined. De Savoye relocates to nearby Middelburg in Zeeland and when the widower meets and marries 26-year-old Marie-Madeleine le Clercq, life is looking up. The newlyweds decide to make a clean break when the opportunity arises to join the exodus to the Cape. Ever since the Jesuit assassination attempt in retaliation against De Savoye’s hosting of Reformed services in his home, he has felt as threatened as the French Huguenots. The latter, a carpenter, will be accompanied by his wife, Maria Vijtou. To smooth his way in the new country, De Savoye sets about obtaining letters of commendation, which refer to De Savoye as well as his servants as eminent people: “his [DeSavoye’s] life seemed a worthy example of purity and holiness, in an environment where idolatry reigned supreme and such a lifestyle was almost impossible”. The 160-foot Oosterland, captained by Carel van Marseveen, departs from Middelburg on January 29, 1688. Amongst the European passengers are the families of Jean Prieur du Plessis and Isaac Madeleine le Clercq[2540].

Amongst the European passengers are the families of Jean Prieur du Plessis and Isaac Madeleine le Clercq[2540].
Taillefer and the soldier Jacques Therond. After 70 days, the immigrants arrive in Table Bay on April 26, a fine day. Instead of having to divert to Saldanha, the Oosterland anchors and the passengers are ferried ashore by rowing boat. Their first impressions of the awesome mountain are counterbalanced by the diminutive size of the settlement. They have arrived on a new continent, to start a new life. Some will adapt and survive, others not. Madeleine du Plessis will last five years before returning to Europe. The Tailleferts will lose two children within the year. In De Savoye family records, there is mention of a second child, Jacquette, but because one does not read about her in later documents, she may have been born at sea and died during the southbound journey. Undeterred, the resolute Savoyes, as can be predicted from their colourful past, now embark on a most wondrous adventure. A farm in Africa. The scene shifts to Drakenstein, the furthest outpost of the Cape colony, still sparsely populated with only 23 Dutch freeburghers having settled there the year before. The valley is majestically beautiful, though quite rugged, with dense forests, game, notably lion and tiger, and nomadic Khoi (Hottentot). The pioneers live in simple clay and reed homes. Nothing in De Savoye’s earlier career suggests that agricultural pursuits such as ploughing, planting, building and raising livestock would attract the merchant, but he now becomes the owner of a magnificent piece of property against the foothills of the Napoleonberg (today known as Simonsberg). He calls his farm Vrede en Lust (Peace and Delight), nurturing visions of a rural paradise where he can spend his last days. Although the land becomes his full and free property with immediate effect, he only receives the title deed to the 120 morgen six years later, on 15 April 1694. It is then signed and issued by Simon van der Stel, Council Extraordinary of India and Governor of the United Netherlands Chartered East India Company at the Cape of Good Hope, on condition that De Savoye regularly replace trees felled on his farm with young oak trees or other afforestation, and supply the Honourable Company with one tenth of his annual wheat crop. As a novice farmer, De Savoye prospers, unlike most of the Huguenots, who complain so much about stony and marshy soil that they qualify for handouts from Batavia. Even though he runs up far more debt for initial supplies than any of the other newcomers, he makes a concerted effort to pay back his dues. In 1688 he owes 783 florins, the following year only 144 florins. De Savoye contributes greatly to the development of the Drakenstein valley. On 4 January 1689 he is elected Heemraad (Magistrate) because of his efficiency and knowledge of the Dutch and French languages, as well as his comprehension of the Portuguese spoken in the Indies. Van der Stel writes to the Delft Chamber, saying that De Savoye and family are an example for all the refugees and exiles. On 28 November 1689 De Savoye, together with the Reverend Pierre Simond and three other Huguenots, requests that the French farms be spaced closer together so that a church council can be nominated. Two thirds of the community are unable to follow a Dutch sermon, and living one, two or even three hours on horseback from each other, the new farmers struggle to learn the Dutch language. Despite Van der Stel’s indignation, the request is forwarded to the Netherlands and the Here XVII of the Dutch East India Company comply. Two years later De Savoye finally becomes a member of the first French church council comprising four elders and five deacons. By 1692 De Savoye is running a successful mixed farming enterprise. Bar one, he produces the most wheat and barley of all the burghers. He owns four horses, 30 cattle, 10 000 vines and slaves such as Jan from Madagascar and Maria of Bengal. Carpenter Barent Jansz is engaged to build a proper house and when the two men later become involved in a dispute regarding remuneration, the Magistrate determines that De Savoye actually paid too much! Meanwhile, the Nor-tier brothers are doing extremely well for themselves, considering that most young men who came to the Cape were soldiers and sailors and, if they were lucky, farmhands. Daniel, the carpenter, is making money in his spare time doing woodwork. Soon he is ready to claim independence for him and his young family. He and Marie lost their first-born, Jacques, born shortly after their arrival, but a mere two years after arriving in the Drakenstein valley, Nortier becomes the brand new owner of the neighbouring farm La Motte. His brother, Jean, acquires the deed of grant to the adjacent farm Fredericksburg. The De Savoyes find it easy to adjust to the predominantly Dutch society at the Cape. Jacques is soon known to all as Jacobus, and the lady of the house, Marie-Madeleine, becomes Maria Magdalena. For Maria one feels a fair amount of admiration. She seems to be adapting well to her new circumstances, so far removed from European culture in every conceivable way, but she is astute and no stranger to hard work. Maria is in fact so capable that she holds power of attorney for Jacobus when in the Cape. For all intents and purposes, she is an active business partner, a no-nonsense type of woman, blessed with a lot of common sense, like her mother, who was destitute but emancipated. In The Hague, Anthonette Carnoij was often at the mercy of charity from the Walloon Church, but in the Cape she confidently engages in dealings with her church in Holland. The well-known De Savoyes are held in high esteem. When little Aletta is born a year after their arrival in the colony, Simon van der Stel acts as witness to the christening in Cape Town on 17 July 1689. Not long afterwards Jacobus’ eldest daughter, Margo (in her will, she writes her name as Margarita Theresia de Savoy) who married Christoffel Snyman, also spelt Cristoffle Cnayman, Senayment, Sceniemen, Seniman or Snijman, not long after the family’s arrival in the Cape, gives birth to the infant Catharina. Christoffel is the son of a free black called Antony from Bengal and Catharina of Palicatte. Far from the scandal one would imagine, interracial marriages between whites and freed slaves were not uncommon at the Cape and... in the Stellenbosch and Drakenstein districts. For a man like Christoffel it was not unusual to integrate with the local community, both socially and economically. Nothing prevented him from owning a farm, as did Jonkershoek landholders Anthonie from Angola, Louis from Bengal and Jan from Ceylon. Church controversy De Savoye is a man of contrasts. He has a fiery temper and is quick to take offence, but is willing to share prosperity, as proven by his support of the Nortier brothers’ attempt at gaining their independence. Unfortunately, a number of incidents cloud De Savoye’s reputation in a small community that thrives on malicious gossip. Rumours that such a well-known and respected citizen as himself has been declared bankrupt in the Netherlands hurt him deeply, and although they are not unfounded, De Savoye feels that he has to clear his name. The Reverend Pierre Simond, for whom the hamlet Simondium was named, takes his position as shepherd very seriously and places De Savoye under censure. A bitter argument ensues and De Savoye is refused communion. Each of the two men has his supporters, thereby creating a rift in the tightly-knit community of Drakenstein. De Savoye approaches the Stellenbosch parish for membership and is accepted. In the interim, he writes to the Netherlands, accusing Simond of various wrongs, such as the intention of importing an oven which everyone else will be forced to use for baking bread, and the fact that Simond’s wife is selling all sorts of things! Moreover, he is upset that Simond demands one tenth of the parish income and opposes a church council so that he can rule like a pope or a bishop. Simond denies everything and in support of their minister, forty-eight of the French testify that they have nothing but praise for him and that the accusations are mere libel. The plot thickens when Christoffel Snyman, presents his baby for the christening with his father-in-law, De Savoye, as witness. Simond declares, in front of the entire congregation, that he will christen the child but cannot accept De Savoye. De Savoye, his wife and daughter then launch a vociferous attack in front of the pulpit. Not only do they insult Simond, they threaten to expel him into everlasting perdition. He is called a “tartuffe” (hypocrite), a priest, a Jesuit, a Judas, a “caffre” (infidel), a false shepherd, and they promise that their influential friends will teach “ce beau petit Monseigneur” (this pretty little chap) a lesson! Simond retaliates in the form of 37 written pages, in which he shows himself to be a master of rhetoric! The council nevertheless investigates Simond’s affairs and in retrospect, this was a spurious attack on officialdom. The combined church councils of the Cape, Stellenbosch and Drakenstein conclude that Simond should have accommodated De Savoye in his church and that the brothers should reconcile, expressing their dismay at the unforgiving nature of the French Calvinists who cannot control their disputes. In essence De Savoye remains a querulous character. He has a habit of becoming embroiled in court cases, often over mere trifles. On 26 February 1693 he takes Pieter Beuk to court over a handsaw. Shortly afterwards, it is Pieter Meyer’s turn to take his employer to court for not paying his wages in full. In 1694, Coert Helm and Daniel Bouvat sue him for the same reason. Several other court cases are noted, such as the maintenance of a drift, De Savoye being responsible for the upkeep of the road between his farm and Klapmuts. Governor Van der Stel even receives a letter from the Rotterdam Chamber concerning De Savoye’s crotchety temper. It reads: “[…] his nature can only be effectively altered and improved by time, kind intercourse, and treatment. This we readily entrust to your discretion.” Ironically, the first Huguenot church, little more than a barn, was probably located on land belonging to De Savoye, since the address of the church is “The French Huguenot Parish, Vrede en Lust, Simonsberg”. One of the most impassioned advocates for the erection of a church, De Savoye acquires an annex of 60 morgen to the south of his farm and north of the Grootrivier, on 22 December 1694. Of this, 48 morgen are allocated to the Drakenstein parish. This eastern part of the annex is now known as Rust-en-Vrede and forms part of Plaisir de Merle. In 1695, De Savoye is elected one of the first officers when Stellenbosch establishes its own burgher military force and, his status reaffirmed, he proudly leads the company of foot soldiers. As a captain in the Drakenstein Infantry, serving until 1700, De Savoye attends annual military manoeuvres which include drilling and shooting at targets with flint-lock muskets loaded with loose powder. These manoeuvres are a popular social event with the burghers. That same year, a signal canon is erected on Simonsberg to tie in with the signalling system at Cabo, defence having become an important matter to the far-off community. When rumours suggest that the French may attack the Cape, the burgher unit, consisting of 100 inhabitants of Stellenbosch and Drakenstein, perform active duty every 14 days, reinforcing the Cape garrison on a relay base. In future they would be called upon on a regular basis for duty at the Cape and in the interior, for example in 1715, when commando’s were mounted against the San who stole cattle. Family matters The family’s living conditions probably consist of a tiny, flat-roofed structure. In all likelihood, the church building is probably De Savoye’s first attempt at building a house, since it is described as the “hat of one of our Frenchmen who has moved” (loge d’un de nos français qui a changé de place”). The traveller Valentyn describes it as a small, low building with walls not higher than three or four feet, made of clay with a flat thatch roof. The first houses were all rudimentary, built with the most basic implements and dependent on the natural materials that are available - a mixture of clay and reeds, the bricks moulded roughly, dried in the sun and cemented with burnt limestone. Free burghers who did not find clay often built ‘hardbieshuise’, believed to be named after the hard reeds or ‘biesies’ used to build them. These huts were similar to the grass huts of the blacks further north, although larger and more commodious. Building homes took second place to establishing crops and... livestock herds that would enable the burghers to repay the company for their land. As early as 1658, fuel for the firing kilns had become so scarce at the Cape that the search for wood had extended to the settlements of the free burghers. The Company then prohibited the brick and lime makers from collecting the small bushes growing on the Cape flats, as the settlers used to for plaiting the walls of their huts. Meanwhile, Jacques and Maria are blessed with another child. Little Aletta is five when her brother is born. Philippe Rodolphe (spelt Rodolf in Dutch) is the first baby to be christened in the new Drakenstein church, according to the entry in the register, which dates from August 1694. With Jacques attending to judicial, religious and military matters, it is Maria who holds the fort, not only inside her little clay house, but also on the surrounding land, with the help of servants, mostly soldiers granted as contract workers. Two sons-in-law, Pieter Meyer and Christian Ehlers, are also occasional employees of the family. For the sake of his two sons, De Savoye acquires two more farms: in 1698, one at Simonsvlei, and soon thereafter the farm Kromme Rivier in Wagenmaker’s Valley, to the north of the current Wellington. In 1705, he purchases another farm in this vicinity. He applies for permission to hunt, like many farmers who thus provide for their families, and permission is granted to shoot eland and hartebees in the vicinity of Roodesand. The land is leased to other farmers, the first being Lanquetoc’s Jacques Therond, the soldier who was also on board the Oosterland when they first journeyed to the Cape, on condition that he build a house and kraal and plant 5,000 vines. De Savoye retains a third interest in the farm and never gains much profit from its operations. Although he appears to flourish, the opposite is true. His finances at the Cape have become just as precarious as they were in Europe. The turn of the century is not a very joyous occasion on Vrede en Lust. The inhabitants are no longer optimistic, merely stoic. The southernmost tip of Africa brought opportunity for De Savoye and his family, but life is difficult—in fact, it is one long struggle for survival. So much remains to be done, so much wilderness to be tamed. At heart De Savoye is a European gentleman, an entrepreneur, a businessman, not a farmer. It will take another century, and many more hardworking men, born to the land, before the farm is sufficiently developed to claim its rightful place amongst the thriving Cape wine estates. Barely a year into the new century, De Savoye gives up full scale farming. By 1701, the Company, to whom De Savoye is heavily indebted, insists on repayment of the loan. He raises some cash by selling Vrede en Lust to his son-in-law, Christian Ehlers, and accepts a mortgage bond for the balance of the sale price. This bond is immediately transferred to his old enemy Pierre Simond, possibly to cancel the debt for the house in Table Valley, on the corner of the present-day Burg and Castle Streets, which De Savoye buys when the 50-year-old Simond returns to Europe. At Cabo, De Savoye engages in a commercial venture dealing in agricultural produce, but fails to meet with great success. He buys skins and makes pants for sailors to earn extra pocket. Aged 70, having lost none of his fighting spirit, De Savoye also attempts to expose the corrupt government of Governor Willem Adriaen van der Stel and becomes a leading champion of the burgher cause. He is arrested in 1706, together with two of his sons-in-law, namely Pierre Meyer of Dauphine (Aletta’s husband) and Elias Kina (Barbe-Thérèse’s second husband). The dissidents are imprisoned in the infamous ‘Dark Hole’ in the Castle, which Adam Tas, the well-known diarist, describes as the most putrid prison in the world, where usually only prisoners condemned to death spent their last days. When Pieter Meyer becomes ill, he relents in a diplomatically worded statement, saying that he regrets all his wrongdoings, but De Savoye shows no fear and says he signed the petition because the Cape was going to the dogs. His only goal, he insists, is to prevent officials from owning property and allow the burghers free trade in cattle, grain and wine. On 12 February 1712 De Savoye applies for free passage back to the United Provinces for him, his wife and mother-in-law. This is not granted, but in view of their age and indigence, they pay half-fare as deck passengers on Cornelis de Geus’s ship the Samson. Why does De Savoye not ask for assistance from his three sons-in-law? Is he too proud, or are relations strained? The house in Table Valley is only sold in April 1713, the year of the small-pox epidemic, which means that those proceeds could not be used either. When De Savoye and his wife are admitted to membership of the Walloon Church in Amsterdam in 1714, with a Cape attestation, there is no mention of Anthonette Carnoij. She may have passed away in the course of the journey. Yet another major and unforeseen upheaval awaits the family. The next year, the couple’s son, Philippe Rodolphe, who had been sent to Europe as a young man for his education, returns to the Cape, taking passage on the Westerdijkstra as a soldier and subsequently joining the shore establishment, where he rises to the rank of junior merchant. With three daughters and numerous grandchildren also in the colony, the parents are induced to leave Holland once again and make the long journey back to the Cape, where they are admitted as members of the congregation on 16 March 1716. On 15 September of that year, Jacobus de Savoyen presents his son, then aged 22, for church membership. Philippe Rodolphe leads a respectable life as book-keeper and military paymaster, a member of the Orphan Board and the Marriage Board, a Cape deacon and cellar master of the East India Company in Cape Town. He is appointed to the latter position in 1721 and still occupies it at the time of his death in 1741, when the surname De Savoye dies out in South Africa. Jacques, the baby who accompanied his parents on their long south-bound voyage, never farms near Simonsvlei. The farm on the Kromme River was promised to his mother by Simon van der Stel in 1689 and held in trust for the minor, together with another property in the region, but his early death occurs some time before 1708. Margo becomes the founding mother of the Snyman family in South Africa. The couple have nine children before Christoffel passed away and in 1707, the 36-year-old widow marries Henning Viljoen. The following year, her eldest, Catharina, marries Johannes Viljoen, the brother of her stepfather. The descendants of both Henning Viljoen and Johannes Viljoen are therefore also descendants of Jacobus de Savoye. Aletta, the first of the De Savoye children to be born on African soil, marries Pierre (Pieter) Meyer, a Huguenot from Dauphine, one of the original immigrants in 1688. One of Aletta’s sons, Philippe Rudolph Meyer, becomes deputy-merchant and celler master of the Cape government. The Meyers have seven children and countless Meyers are also direct descendants of Jacques de Savoye. Two years after his return to Africa, in October 1717, Jacques de Savoye passes away – aged 81 and a pauper. His wife, Maria Magdalena, dies in May 1721. Vrede en Lust’s first owner was a man of great vision, a megalomaniac, whose great strength lay in his powerful religious life and voluntary efforts as a missionary for the Protestant cause.

2539. CHRISTINE MARIE MADELEINE DU PONT (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2325], see Maternal Ancestry(62)) was born on 4 August 1636, in Flanders, Belgium, to Denis du Pont[2617] and Anna Elizabeth de la Haye[2618]. She died in 1686, aged about 49, in Ghent, Belgium.

Jacques de Savoye[2538], aged 21, married Christine Marie Madeleine du Pont, aged 20, on 4 July 1657 in Aeth, Hainaut, Belgium. They had one daughter:

Marguerite Theresa de Savoye[2404] born on 4 September 1672 in Ghent, Belgium; died on 20 March 1742 in Cape, South Africa

2540. MARIE MADELEINE LE CLERCQ (Howard Charles's step-ten-times-great-grandmother[2552]) was born in 1670, in Tournai, Flanders, Belgium. She died in 1721, aged about 51, in Cape, South Africa.

Jacques de Savoye[2538], aged about 50, married Marie Madeleine le Clercq, aged about 16, in 1686 in Zeeland, Netherlands. They had one daughter:

Aletta de Savoye[2462] born on 17 July 1689

2541. BERNARD FOUCHE (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2351], see Maternal Ancestry(65)) was born in 1617, in la Bruslee, Seuvres, France. He died in 1674, aged about 57, in France.

2542. ANNE BRUERE (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2352], see Maternal Ancestry(65)) was born in 1620, in Blois, Loir-et-Cher, Centre, France. She died in 1699, aged about 79, in Cape Town, South Africa.

Bernard Fouché[2541] married Anne Bruere. They had two children:

Philippe Fouché[2406] born in 1645 in Suevres, Orleannais, France; died in 1708 in Paarl, Breede River DC, Western Cape, South Africa

Hester Fouché[2463] died in 1698

2543. BASTIAEN LUCASZ SCHEEPERS (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2356], see Maternal Ancestry(75)) was born on 10 February 1584 to Lucas Bastiaensz Scheepers[2619] and Susanna de Bije[2620]. Bastiaen Lucasz was a Sailmaker in Haarlem. He is no longer living.

Bastiaen Lucasz fathered one son:

Willem Bastiaensz Scheepers[2408] born on 8 October 1619 in Haarlem, Netherlands; died on 21 January 1704 in Rotterdam, Netherlands

2544. HANS BOTH (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2357], see Maternal Ancestry(76)) was born in 1595, in Wagenheim, Sachsen-Coburg-Gotha, Thüringen, German. He died in 1642, aged about 47, in Breitenfeld, Altmarkkreis, Salzwedel, Saxony-Anhalt, Germany.

2545. CATRIJN MATER (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2358], see Maternal Ancestry(76)) was born in 1599, in Wagenheim, Sachsen-Coburg-Gotha, Thüringen, Germany. She died in Breitfeld, Germany.

Hans Both[2544] married Catrijn Mater. They had one son:

Michael Botha[2410] born in 1625 in Wagenheim, Sachsen-Coburg-Gotha, Thüringen, Germany; died in 1680 in Wagenheim, Sachsen-Coburg-Gotha, Thüringen, Germany

2546. HUGUES MARTINET (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2378], see Maternal Ancestry(80)) was born in 1615, in France. He is no longer living.

2547. LOUYSE DESHOMIER CHAPTARD (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2379], see Maternal Ancestry(80)) was born in 1615, in Allier, Auvergne, France. She is no longer living.
Hugues Martinet[2546] married Louyse Deshouier Chapard. They had one son:
  Isaie Martinet[2418] born in 1630 in France; died in 1660 in France

2548. ABRAHAM PATOIRE (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2385], see Maternal Ancestry(81)) was born in 1617. He died in 1682, aged about 65.

2549. SUZANNE DU PONCHELLE (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2386], see Maternal Ancestry(81)) was born in 1630 in Loir-et-Cher, Centre, France. She died in 1692, aged about 62, in Loir-et-Cher, Centre, France.
  Abraham Patoire[2548] married Suzanne du Ponchelle. They had one daughter:
    Judith Patoire[2421] born in 1650 in Fayette, Parcoul, Dordogne, Aquitaine, France; died on 31 December 1677 in Mer, Orleanais, France

2550. JEAN MARAIS (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2388], see Maternal Ancestry(34), Maternal Ancestry(55) and Maternal Ancestry(86)) was born in 1610, in Hulepoix, lle de France, Paris, France, to Kehren Ottemus Marais[2621] and Anna Marisse[2622]. Jean was a Shoemaker. He died in 1689, aged about 79, in Hulepoix, lle de France, Paris, France.

2551. RACHEL MILLESEAU (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2389], see Maternal Ancestry(34), Maternal Ancestry(55) and Maternal Ancestry(86)) was born in 1615, in Hulepoix, lle de France, Paris, France. She died in 1650, aged about 35, in Hulepoix, lle de France, Paris, France.
  Jean Marais[2550] married Rachel Milleseau. They had one son:
    Charles Marais[2422] born in 1640 in Le Plessis Marle, France; died on 3 April 1689 in "Le Plessis Marle"", Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa

2552. CLAUDE TABOUREUX (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2390], see Maternal Ancestry(34), Maternal Ancestry(55) and Maternal Ancestry(86)) was born in 1607, in Longvilliers, Yvelines, Île-de-France, France. He died in 1686, aged about 79, in Rouillon, France.

2553. JEANNA CROSNIER (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2391], see Maternal Ancestry(34), Maternal Ancestry(55) and Maternal Ancestry(86)) was born in 1610, in Dourdan, Essonne, Île-de-France, France, to Catherin Crosnier[2623] and Thomaas Chantalou[2624]. She died in 1685, aged about 75, in Plessis, Seine-et-Marne, Île-de-France, France.
  Claude Taboureux[2552], aged about 25, married Jeanna Crosnier, aged about 22, on 19 September 1632 in Dourdan, Essonne, Île-de-France, France. They had one daughter:
    Catherine Taboureux[2423] born in 1642; died in 1729

2554. GILLES DE RUELLE (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2392], see Maternal Ancestry(56) and Maternal Ancestry(87)) was born in 1602, in Guînes, Nord-Pas-de-Calais, France. He is no longer living.

2555. ANTHOINETTE DE LA VAL (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2393], see Maternal Ancestry(56) and Maternal Ancestry(87)) was born in 1606, in Guînes, Nord-Pas-de-Calais, France. She died on 29 June 1680, aged about 73, in Guînes, Nord-Pas-de-Calais, France.
  Gilles de Ruelle[2554], aged about 30, married Anthoïnette de la Val, aged about 26, in 1632 in Guînes, Nord-Pas-de-Calais, France. They had one son:
    Daniel de Ruelle[2424] born in 1640 in Guînes, Nord-Pas-de-Calais, France; died on 3 October 1726 in Drakenstein, Cape Colony, South Africa

2556. JEAN GOUDALLE (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2394], see Maternal Ancestry(56) and Maternal Ancestry(87)) was born in 1618, in Richebourgh, Artois, France. He died on 7 June 1672, aged about 53, in Guînes, Nord-Pas-de-Calais, France.

2557. MARIE VITU (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2395], see Maternal Ancestry(56) and Maternal Ancestry(87)) was born in 1620. She died on 7 June 1672, aged about 51.
  Jean Goudalle[2556] married Marie Vitu. They had one daughter:
    Anna Goudalle[2425] born in 1653 in Guînes, Nord-Pas-de-Calais, France; died in 1688 in At sea en route to Cape, South Africa
2558. IZAK JOHANNES ROSSOUW (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2399], see Maternal Ancestry(57) and Maternal Ancestry(88)) was born in 1615, in France. He died in France.

2559. OLIVIA VAN EEDEN (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2400], see Maternal Ancestry(57) and Maternal Ancestry(88)) was born in 1618. She is no longer living.

   Izak Johannes Rossouw[2558], aged about 29, married Olivia van Eeden, aged about 26, in 1644. They had one son:

   Daniel Rossouw[2426] born in 1640 in Blois, Orleanais, France; died in 1731 in Cape, South Africa

2560. PAUL RETIF (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2401], see Maternal Ancestry(58), Maternal Ancestry(88) and Maternal Ancestry(89)) was born in 1602, in Aunay, Blois, Loir-et-Cher, Centre, France, to Paul Retif[2625] and Marie Lebretez[2626]. He died on 8 September 1677, aged about 75, in Aunay, Blois, Loir-et-Cher, Centre, France.

2561. FRANCOISE ROUSSOUW (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2402], see Maternal Ancestry(58), Maternal Ancestry(88) and Maternal Ancestry(89)) was born in 1615, in Aunay, Blois, Loir-et-Cher, Centre, France, to Honore Roussouw[2627] and Marie Boillerot[2628]. She died in 1700, aged about 85.

   Paul Retif[2560] married Francoise Roussouw. They had two children:

   Jacques Retie[2428] born in 1637 in Aunay, Blois, Loir-et-Cher, Centre, France; died in 1677 in Aunay, Blois, Loir-et-Cher, Centre, France

   Marie Retif[2427] born in 1644 in L'Arc de Orleans, Loiret, France; died in 1685 in Suévres, Orléanais, France

2562. PEITJER JOUBERT (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandfather[2403], see Maternal Ancestry(58) and Maternal Ancestry(89)) was born in 1621, in Blois, Loir-et-Cher, Centre, France. He died in 1702, aged about 81, in Cape Town, South Africa.

   Willem Schalks van der Merwe arrived at the Cape from Goeree, Nederland, on board the Dordrecht, perhaps on 26 April 1661. One of the original Vry Burghers. His first relationship was with the slave, Koddo van Guinea, born about 1640. On 10 September 1657 the Hasselt departed the Cape (after an earlier false start) for Angola and the coast of 'Guinea' with orders to acquire slaves for the Cape. They had been deterred from attempting to purchase slaves at the bay of Luanda de St. Paulo by the presence of four other ships anchored there, and sailed on. They went first to Cape Lopez on the Gabonese coast for water and wood, and then proceeded to Andra, a slave-trading centre on the coast of upper Guinea. The vessel arrives at the Cape with 226 or 228 [different figures recorded contemporaneously] remaining from 271 originally embarked. Forty three or 45 died enroute and some women were already pregnant according to a later account. Eighty of the best 'Guinea' slaves were sent on to Batavia, and at the Cape a few abscond and many succomb to illness — by 5 March 1659 only 41 remain. The slaves had been purchased at what is now Grand Popo in present day Benin and would have come from as far afield as Sudan. The Hasselt arrived back at the Cape on 6 May 1658 and its slave cargo was discharged the following day. Willem Schalk had one daughter with Koddo, Maria born in 1665. She married Paul Heyns (born 1655) on 23 September 1696. They are the original ancestors of the Heyns family. On 5 May 1661, Willem Schalks van der Merve was granted a vrijbrief or letter of freedom which released him from his contractual obligations to the VOC and accorded him the status of vrijburgher or free burgher. He was recorded as an arquebusier on the Dordrecht. Slave transactions: On 11 September 1676 Paulus van Gale was sold by Jan Jansz van Oldenburg to Willem Schalk. On 11 April 1677 Johan Casta was sold by Joan Bax van Herentals to Willem Schalch, for Rds. 60. Hector van Bengale and Scipio Afric anus van de Kust Malabar were sold by Johannes Ravensbergh, to Willem Schalk on 1 November 1677, for Rds. 50 each.

Schalk van fer Merve also had a child from the slave Koddo van Guinea:

Honourable Sirs, Whereas I have been charged by some of the men under me, who have falsely conspired against me, with some improprieties of which I am not guilty, and as I more and more find that these people are doing their best to play the master and do at the “Schuur” just as they like, I can no longer bear it, but have decided to report their conduct to you, and to give you the following facts:

Some time ago I proceeded to False Bay with H. Elberts and Ryk Evertsen to look for some clay for building the new redoubt, and I gave the key of the small kitchen to a female slave, so that she would be detained long, she might have enough to boil for the mess. Afterwards Willem Schalcq got the key from her, and as it was Saturday night he went to the fort or somewhere else. When I came home that evening no one could tell me where the key was, and I was obliged to go to bed without my supper. The next day I again asked everybody whether they knew who had the key, but all replied “No.” A little while afterwards Willem Schalcq came to ask my permission to go out; this I gave him and he went out towards Thielman, having before that given the key to Dirk Wesselsen. Shortly after his departure Dirk brought me the key, saying that he had just now received it from Schalk. This annoyed me, and I went to the kitchen and having opened it found that it looked more like a pig-stye (begging your pardon) than a kitchen. Dirty cans and some dirty stinking books were scattered about the floor, and there were some boxes also which I had at once carried out. I myself threw the cans outside, and some of them were broken. In the evening, Willem Schalcq returned, half drunk, and commenced to rave and bluster, asking me why I had broken the cans. I told him that his place was not there, and he had no right to bring his things there. After replying with some foul language he went to the barn and thence took the gun of Hendrik de Brechtsen, of Ossenbrugge. Jumping with it outside he took aim straight at me. I at once ran under the gun and asked him what he meant. Not knowing what to say, he replied that he intended to take the rounds, which he had not at all been ordered to do. After the gun had been taken from him, he went back to the kitchen and there conspired with his mates, who had together ordered some brandy from the “Uitwyk,” as if they wished to say “we have had honour enough, on the strength of that we ought to take a glass,” for one can understand how they assist each other.

When I was speaking to Willem, five or six persons were standing near, but when I called out that they would be required to testify to the truth, all suddenly disappeared. The brandy having arrived they commenced drinking and made a great noise; I then went to the kitchen and warned them not to do so. Willem replied that I had nothing to do there, but that I was to go to my room and myself scarce. He used uncommonly bad words. I was obliged to do so, for they were all drunk together. Willem followed me and thumped and beat at my door, saying: “Come out you rogue and thief, I’ll teach you to break my cans.” I did not known whether my life was safe. All this he did on account of a certain female slave by whom he has a child, and whom he had chambered in the kitchen at the time of her lying in. He likewise, every hour of the day, took care of her by preparing her food and fetching water and fuel. Yea! what is more, when she was being confined he knocked me up and begged me to give him his brandy for the reason stated. I gave him two glasses which he brought to her to revive her. From this you can gather what connection there is between the two. Jan Carseur also wished to play the master, and whenever he was check would at once seize another’s gun and running with it to a distance threaten a person. At the same time the Company’s troop of cattle was not to be found, and when any one ordered him he replied that he had no gun. This might create great loss to the Company, and when he is on sentry he dares to go from the top of the “Schuur” to the kitchen and smoke tobacco there. Being turned out and again found absent when the rounds were made, he continued to be stubborn and would not even lay hold of his gun, by remained sitting behind it. More might be added, but I believe the above to be sufficient, and leave the matter to your judgment. No date.

2565. ELSJE CLOETE (Howard Charles's ten-times-great-grandmother[2414], see Maternal Ancestry(59) and Maternal Ancestry(90)) was born on 28 February 1655, in Kurfürstentum Köln, Germany, to Jacobus Cloete (Klauten)[2631] and Sophia Feigen Radergoertgens[2632]. She died on 22 January 1702, aged 46, in Cape Town, South Africa. She was buried in Franschhoek.
She was baptised somewhere in the Atlantic Ocean, on the ship "Europa". She came out with her mother and brother.

Willem Schalk van der Merwe[2564], aged about 28, married Elsje Cloete, aged 13, on 9 September 1668 in Cape Town, South Africa. They had eight children:

- Schalk Willem van der Merwe[2464] born on 14 June 1673 in Drakenstein, Western Cape, South Africa; died on 21 March 1740 in Paarl, Breede River DC, Western Cape, South Africa
- Willem Schalk van der Merwe[2465] born in 1673; died in 1740
- Maria van der Merwe[2466] born in 1675; died in 1709
- Marritje van der Merwe[2431] born on 29 December 1675 in Cape, South Africa; died on 1 October 1709 in Cape, South Africa
- Petronella van der Merwe[2468] born in 1682 in Cape Town, South Africa; died in 1717 in Cape, South Africa
- Aletta van der Merwe[2469] born on 30 March 1684 in Cape Town, South Africa; died on 30 November 1729 in Bergrivier, Cape, South Africa
- Helena Schalk van der Merwe[2471] born on 4 July 1685 in Cape Town, South Africa; died on 11 February 1765 in Cape Town, South Africa
- Helena van der Merwe[2473] born in 1686 in Cape Town, South Africa; died in 1721 in Cape Town, South Africa

Koddo van Guinea may have been the individual recorded at the company barn, i.e. Groote Schuur in the complaint made between 26 September 1664 and 29 November 1664 by Pieter Cruythoff against Willem Schalks van der Merwe and Jan Carseur whom he said had conspired against him. The complaint is undated but appears between those of the dates mentioned, viz.: Complaint of Pieter Cruythoff against Willem Schalcq and Jan Carseur, of Denis—the men under him, at the ‘Schuur,’—presented to the Council of the Fort of Good Hope: —

On 10 September 1657 the Hasselt departed the Cape (after an earlier false start) for Angola and the coast of 'Guinea' with orders to acquire slaves for the Cape. They had been deterred from attempting to purchase slaves at the bay of Luanda de St. Paulo by the presence of four other ships anchored there, and sailed on. They went first to Cape Lopez on the Gabonese coast for water and wood, and then proceeded to Andra, a slave-trading centre on the coast of upper Guinea. The vessel arrives at the Cape with 226 or 228 [different figures recorded contemporaneously] remaining from 271 originally embarked. Forty three or 45 died enroute and some women were already pregnant according to a later account. Eighty of the best 'Guinea' slaves were sent on to Batavia, and at the Cape a few abscond and many succumb to illness — by 5 March 1659 only 41 remain. The slaves had been purchased at what is now Grand Popo in present day Benin and would have come from as far afield as Sudan. The Hasselt arrived back at the Cape on 6 May 1658 and its slave cargo was discharged the following day. The following slaves would most likely have been among those who survived at the Cape: Abraham van Guinea, Adouke van Guinea, Anna van Guinea, Claas van Guinea, Deuxsous van Guinea, Evert van Guinea, Koddo van Guinea, Louis van Guinea, Maria van Guinea, Oude Hans van Guinea, Pieter van Guinea, Regina van Rapenberg van Guinea and Gegeima van Guinea.

According to fellow researcher, Mansell Upham, who is currently working on female African slaves brought to the Cape, Regina was embarked at Benin for the Cape. However, given that slaves were brought to Benin from as far afield as Sudan, it will likely prove impossible to identify Regina's country of origin.

On 1 October 1658 Jan Bruijn van Madagascar, Judas de Wever, Sara de Waster, Pieter Pietersz and Regina van Rapenberg van Guinea were, along with any of their future offspring, put up as security in a skuldbrief by Leendert Cornelisz: in favour of the wife of the commander Maria de la Queillerie. This was for a loan of f 300 at ¾% per month. Cornelisz: as well as all his possessions, were included as security. The payment in the first month was excused, thereafter he was to make monthly payments until the original amount, plus interest, was repaid. Presumably he carried out the agreement, because the skuldbrief was cancelled on 12 November 1658.

On 10 April 1657 the Hasselt departed Vlie enroute to de Caep de Goede Hoop where it docked on 16 August 1657. Among the passengers were the 5 or 6 year old Gerritt Cloete, and Jacob Theunisz... Jacob Cloete arrived at the Cape on 7 August 1657 shortly before he is granted a vrijbrief in which he is said to be a cadet from Cologne. He does not appear in the ofgraaf- nor monsterrollen for 1656 or 1657. The 1657 monsterol was taken on 31 May 1657, viz. den laesten Maij 1657 — clearly placing his arrival at the Cape between 31 May 1657 and 10 August 1657. In this period, two vessels arrived ex-Patria at the Cape, the Maria from Vlie on 13 July, and the Verenigde Provincien on 7 August. The records reveal that one person left the Maria at the Cape. This was Cornelis Claasz, viz. Cornelis Claassen van Utrecht voor Bosscheieter anno 1657 pr. 't Jacht De Maria voor de Camer Amsterdam aangelant en primo October desselven jaars vrij geworden. Harry Booyens' conclusion Cloete arrived on the Maria therefor cannot be correct. Twelve left the Verenigde Provincien, and one of them was Cloete whose vrijbrief was granted three days later. The next month, on 16 August, Jacob Cloete's son Gerritt Cloete arrives on the Hasselt, viz. Gerrit Cloeten voor Jongen ende Camer Amsterdam anno 1657 met 't Jacht Hasselt aangelant ... the boy was just 6 years old.

THE name is of Welsh origin and was originally Ap Howell, being gradually contracted to POWELL, this was done by abbreviating AP HOWELL, leaving out the letters A and H.
The first family of Powells lived in Breconshire, South Wales, now known as Breconshire. The Powells are descendants of the Royal Family of Wales, coming from one of the sons of the old Kings of Wales, Castle Madoc Brecon, in the County of Brecon, Wales, was their home. Three of the family were Judges on the Kings Bench in England.
The year of our Lord (1087), is as far back as we have been able to trace the Powell Family. During the reign of William Rufus (1087); at which period "Lord Brecon" whose name was "Bleddyn Ap Maenyrch Ap Driffyf Ap Hwgan". It was in this year that his Lordship was invaded by Bernard Newmarch, (a Norman); who with his forces defeated Lord Brecon in battle at Caerbaunan. In this battle Lord Brecon was slain and his body was carried by his two sons to the Abbey of Strata Florida, Cardiganshire, and there buried.

Philippe de Mornay was born at Buhy, in the French Vexin on Nov. 5th 1549, two hours before the dawn, and was baptized the nth day of the same month. His father was Messire Jacques de Mornay, chevalier and lord of Buhy, and his mother was Dame Francoise de Bee Crespin, daughter of Messire Charles de Bee, I vice-admiral of France, and of Dame Madeleine de Beauvillier, daughter of the Count of Saint-Aignan and of Antoinette de la Trémoille. His godfathers were Messire Philippe de Roucherolles, baron of Huqueville, and his paternal uncle, Messire Bertin de Mornay, granddoyen of Beauvais and abbe" of Saumur au Boz near Boulogne. His god-mothers were his maternal great-aunt, Madame Jehanne de Beauvillier, Lady of Pesat and of du Plessis Marly, and Dame de la Neuville, Lady of Morvillier. His nurse, whom I should be loth to forget, was Marguerite Madon, a native of Buhy, a woman of a sweet nature. The late M. de Buhy, his father, lived a blameless life to the age of forty-eight, never once failing to play his part in the wars and to do his service to his King. But the wars once over he retired to his own house, indifferent alike to court life and ambition, although opportunities for both were not lacking. He loved horses, and in peace.

In the northeastern part of France was situated the beautiful Province of Alsace, with its magnificent city of Strasburg, founded by the Romans near the beginning of the Christian Era. The neighboring Province of Lorraine was formally ceded to France by the Treaty of Bonn in 921, and became a part of Alsace. It was subsequently held by many kings and dukes until 1477 when Charles of Burgundy, who then held it, lost his life at the battle of Nancy, Jan. 4, 1477. After this, Lorraine merged more and more into the stream of French history. At the death of Rene II (1508), his eldest son Anthony, who had been educated in the court of France, inherited Lorraine with its dependencies. He became known as the "Good Duke of Lorraine," and was the one who granted the Coat-of-Arms to Mengen LeFevre, of 1510. It was subsequently held by many kings and dukes until 1477 when Charles of Burgundy, who then held it, lost his life at the battle of Nancy, Jan. 4, 1477. After this, Lorraine merged more and more into the stream of French history. At the death of Rene II (1508), his eldest son Anthony, who had been educated in the court of France, inherited Lorraine with its dependencies. He became known as the "Good Duke of Lorraine," and was the one who granted the Coat-of-Arms to Mengen LeFevre, of 1510. In 1525 the country was invaded by German insurgents, and Lutheranism began to spread in the towns. At this time the LeFevres may have become Protestants.

The Coat-of-Arms of Mengen LeFevre of 1510, granted by the Royal Duke Antoine, the "Good Duke of Lorraine," was registered in 1543. The following is the official description, as translated from the French: Blue field, Three Crosses, re-crossed, of Gold, so constructed as to permit being driven, -- Stag head of Silver. (It was traced by R. G. LeFevre, of Cleveland, Ohio.)

In 1552, just after the LeFevre Coat-of-Arms was registered, war broke out by the Elector of Saxony and some German princes against the German Emperor Charles V, and Lorraine was overrun by the Emperor's troops. Then the LeFevres may have fled to the French province of Nivernois, southwest of Strasburg, and over one hundred miles from Lorraine. Here in the shelter of the Vosges mountains where they meet the ridge running southeast from Paris, in the valley of the river Yonne, near Chateau-Chinon, the LeFevres made their home until 1685.
About the middle of the sixteenth century the French Protestants were nicknamed Huguenots by the Roman Catholics. In 1562 a struggle began between the Huguenots and the government, for religious freedom. This was the beginning of the eight religious wars which covered more than thirty years.

It is possible that Mahieu, or his father or son, converted to Protestantism. This would have caused a rift in the Catholic de Savoie family, leading of course on the his becoming Hugenots. Of course, if Michel de Savoie was, as some speculate, the illegitimate son of Jacques de Savoie, this could have made matters worse. There can be no doubt that the Jacques de Savoie who fled to the Cape of Good Hope would have known that they were exiles from the Catholic de Savoie's, but certainly not have known of, or even cared, that the royal line went back through many people who were prominent in the formation of the Europe as it is today.

In 1574, Jean de Fay returned to Catholicism in an effort to appease and obtained a compromise with the Protestant city of Annecy and the Catholics at the castle of La Condamine, whose lord, one Protestant was entrusted with the command of the places held by Jean de Fay and disarmed from that date.

Michiel de Savoye formerly de Savoie. Born before 1480 in Ath, Hainaut, Walloon Region. Son of Jacques de Savoye and [mother unknown]. [spouse(s) unknown]. Father of Claude de Savoye. Died after 1505 [location unknown]. It is likely that Jacques de Savoye had a mistress, and thus there are no records. "Jacques de Savoye Comte de Romont et Vaud, was living & married in Ath. He was commander of the troops for the Duke of Burgundy, against the French King. It is thought, because of the location, that the Savoye family in Ath, is descended from him...possibly an extra marital liaison...No actual proof, but strong circumstantial evidence...regarding religion, it seems to be there was a later conversion, as the other branch remained Catholic." https://www.geni.com/discussions/122970?page=2.

He was the 7th son of Louis, Duke of Savoy and Anne de Lusignan.
The House of Savoy possessed the Lordship of Vaud since the 12th century, when it wrested control from the original owners, the House of Zähringen. Savoy extended its influence by supporting the city of Berne against the House of Habsburg. After the Battle of Laupen, Savoy and Berne became allies, but as the power of Berne increased, they became enemies at the beginning of the Burgundian Wars.

When Amadeus IX became head of the House of Savoy in 1465, he gave his brother Jacques as an appanage the region of Vaud with the title of Count of Romont, Lord of Vaud and the towns of Murten, Avenches, Payerne, Romont, Moudon, Rue and Yverdon.

Amadeus suffered from epilepsy and let his wife, Yolande of Valois, and his brother, the Count of Bresse govern for him. He died in 1472 and was succeeded by his son Philibert, who was only 6 years old. The young Duke's mother, Yolande, became his regent and tutor.
Several alliances were formed within the family. Peter, Prince-Bishop of Geneva and brother of Amadeus, became a counsellor at Yolande's court. The Count of Bresse sought the favor of Louis XI of France. Jacques of Savoy joined the army of the powerful Duke of Burgundy, Charles de Bold. Jacques took the opportunity of a conflict with his sister-in-law Yolande to grab several fortified places that Amadeus IX had retained, and an arbitration by Berne and Fribourg in 1471 awarded them to him. However, these different alliances and clever political manoeuvering by King Louis XI eventually led to the loss of all the territories belonging to the Count of Romont in Vaud.

Jacques de Savoie, aged about 33, married Marie de Luxembourg[2743], aged about 22, in 1484 in Vendome, Loir Et Cher, France.

2788. AMÉDÉE VIII DE SAVOIE (Howard Charles's eighteen-times-great-grandfather[2785], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born on 4 September 1383, in Chambery, Savoy, to Amédée VII de Savoie[2807] and Bonne de Valois du Berry[2808]. Amédée VIII was a Pope Felix V (antipope). He died on 7 January 1451, aged 67, in Thonon-les-Bains, Haute-Savoie, France.

Amadou VIII (4 September 1383 – 7 January 1451) was an Savoyard nobleman, the son of Amadou VII, Count of Savoy and Bonne de Berry. He was nicknamed the Peaceful. After the death of his father in 1391, his mother acted as a regent, because of his youth. Born at Chambery, he was the Count of Savoy from 1391 to 1416 and was elevated by Emperor Sigismund to Duke of Savoy in 1416.

In 1418 his distant cousin Louis of Savoy-Achaea, his brother-in-law, the last male of the elder branch of House of Savoy, died, leaving Amadeus as his heir-general, thus finally uniting the male-lines of the House of Savoy.

Amadeus increased his dominions and encouraged several attempts to negotiate an end to the Hundred Years’ War. After the death of his wife, he founded the Order of Saint Maurice with six other knights (1434). They lived alone in the castle of Ripaille, near Geneva, in a quasi-monastic state.

Amadeus was elected at Basel as pope Felix V in opposition to Pope Eugene IV, by the Council of Basel-Ferrara-Florence and reigned from November 1439 to April 1449. [1] He resigned as duke in favour of his son in 1440. He stepped down to accept a Cardinal's hat,[2][3] He is now regarded as an antipope. Amadeus' image in history is marred by the account of him as a pontiff concerned with money, to avoid disadvantaging his heirs, found in the Commentaries of Pius II. Nor is there evidence that he intrigued to obtain the papal office, sending the bishops of Savoy to Basel for this purpose.

(Note on numbering: When numbering of the Popes began to be used, Antipope Felix II was counted as one of the Popes of that name. The second true Pope Felix is thus known by the number III, and the third true Pope Felix was given the number IV. It also affected the name taken by Amadeus, who would have been the fourth Pope Felix.).

Janus was born in Genoa, where his father, James I of Cyprus, was a captive. His mother, Helvis of Brunswick-Grubenhagen, named him in honor of the god Janus, the founder of Genoa according to mythological tradition.

When his father was elected king, he negotiated an agreement with the Genoese to release him to go to Cyprus, which he signed on 2 February 1383. Under that agreement, the Genoese were given new commercial privileges. However, the Genoese demanded that his father leave his son Janus in their city as a hostage. James sent a noble to Genoa, John Babin, to act as stepfather to his son. As the Cypriot historian Leontios Makhairas writes, James ordered a special tax which required the Cypriots—both nobles and commoners—to purchase an amount of salt in order to collect the money needed to release his son from Genoese captivity; this was achieved on October 1392, when Janus was 18 years old.

After his father's death on 9 September 1398, Janus took over the throne of Cyprus. He was crowned in Nicosia's Saint Sophia Cathedral on 11 November 1398.

First son of Count Aymon of Savoy, he succeeded his father in 1343 when he was only nine. The regency was under the authority of his uncles: Louis de Vaud and Amadeus III of Geneva. On chivalry, he participated in tournaments, began a crusade. He created in 1362 the Order of the Collar of Savoy. His nickname comes from the color of his armor, range during a tournament in Chambery in 1348. Amadeus initiated a minor crusade (with 15 ships and 1,700 men) in 1366 against Murad I of... the Ottoman Empire to aid his cousin, John V Palaiologos, the Byzantine Emperor, son of the Dowager Empress, Anne of Savoy. On this campaign Amadeus joined forces with Francesco I of Lesbos, and Hungarian king Louis the Great, and they drove the Turks from Gallipoli. (This victory was short-live, though, for they lost Gallipoli to the Turkish Sultan Murad I a few years later.) At this time John V was held captive by the Bulgarians. Amadeus turned his forces against Bulgaria and captured the Black Sea ports of Mesembria and Sozopolis. He then laid siege to Varna and sent Tsar Ivan Alexander an ultimatum to release John V or suffer further defeat. Ivan Alexander released John V and Amadeus returned to spend the winter in Mesembria, arriving there with John V before Christmas.

2836. BONNE DE BOURBON (Howard Charles's twenty-times-great-grandmother[2828], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born in 1341 to Pierre I The Grand de Bourbon[2864] and Isabelle de Valois[2865]. Bonne was a Countess of Savoy. She died in 1403, aged about 62.

Amédée VI de Savoie[2835], aged about 21, married Bonne de Bourbon, aged about 14, in 1355.

They had one son:

Amédée VII de Savoie[2807] born on 24 February 1360; died on 1 November 1391 in Ripaille

2837. JEAN I DE VALOIS DU BERRY (Howard Charles's twenty-times-great-grandfather[2829], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born on 30 November 1340, in Vincennes, France, to Jean II de Valois[2839] and Judith de Luxembourg[2840]. Jean I became known as ‘le Magnifique’. Le Magnifique was a Duc de Berry et d'Auvergne. He died on 15 June 1416, aged 75, in Hôtel de Nesle in Paris. He was buried in Krypta der Kathedrale von Bourges.

John of Berry or John the Magnificent (French: Jean de Berry; 30 November 1340 – 15 June 1416) was Duke of Berry and Auvergne and Count of Poitiers and Montpensier. He was the third son of King John II of France and Bonne of Luxembourg; his brothers were King Charles V of France, Duke Louis I of Anjou and Duke Philip the Bold of Burgundy. He is primarily remembered as a collector of the important illuminated manuscripts and other works of art commissioned by him, such as the Très Riches Heures.

2838. JEANNE D'ARMAGNAC (Howard Charles's twenty-times-great-grandmother[2830], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born in 1346. She died on 30 March 1387, aged about 40, in Poitiers, France.

Joan of Armagnac (French: Jeanne d'Armagnac; 24 June 1346 – 1387) was a French noblewoman of the Armagnac family, being the eldest daughter of Count John I of Armagnac and his wife Beatrice of Clermont. She became Duchess of Berry by her marriage to John, Duke of Berry in 1360. Her daughter, Marie was the mother of Bonne of Artois, second wife to Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy. Joanna's daughter, also called Bonne, was the mother of Antipope Felix V.

Jean I de Valois du Berry[2837], aged 19, married Jeanne D'Armagnac, aged about 13, on 24 June 1360 in Rodez. They had two daughters:

Bonne de Valois du Berry[2808] born in 1362; died on 12 December 1435 in Carlat, Cantal, Auvergne, France

Marie de Valois[2821] born in 1367; died in 1434

2839. JEAN II DE VALOIS (Howard Charles's twenty-times-great-grandfather[2832], see Maternal Ancestry(113) and Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born on 26 April 1319, in Château de Gué-de-Mauny, Le Mans, Pays de la Loire, France, to Philippe VI de Valois[2866] and Johanna de Bourgogne[2867]. Jean II was a King of France. He died on 8 April 1364, aged 44, in Savoy Palace, London, Middlesex, United Kingdom. He was buried in Carmelite convent he had founded in Ploërmel, Seine-Saint-Denis, Île-de-France, France.

Bonne of Luxemburg or Jutta of Luxemburg (20 May 1315 – 11 September 1349), was born Jutta (Judith), the second daughter of John the Blind, king of Bohemia, and his first wife, Elisabeth of Bohemia. She was the first wife of King John II of France; however, as her death occurred a year prior to his coronation, she was never a French queen. Jutta was referred to in French historiography as Bonne de Luxembourg. She was a member of the House of Luxembourg. Among her children were Charles V of France, Philip II, Duke of Burgundy, and Joan, Queen of Navarre. In 1326, Jutta was originally betrothed to Henry of Bar; however this arrangement was broken and she stayed at the abbey of Saint-Esprit until her marriage to John, Duke of Normandy.

Jutta was married to John, Duke of Normandy on 28 July 1332 at the church of Notre-Dame in Melun. She was 17 years old, and the future king was 13. Her name Jutta (or Guta), translatable into English as Good (in the feminine case), was changed by the time of her marriage to Bonne (French) or Bona (Latin). Upon marriage, Bonne was the wife of the heir to the French throne, becoming Duchess of Normandy, and Countess of Anjou and of Maine. The wedding was celebrated in the presence of six thousand guests. The festivities were prolonged by a further two months when the young groom was finally knighted at the cathedral of Notre-Dame in Paris. John was solemnly granted the arms of a knight in front of a prestigious audience bringing together the kings of Bohemia and Navarre, and the dukes of Burgundy, Lorraine and the Brabant.

Bonne was a patron of the arts, the composer Guillaume de Machaut being one of her favorites.

She died on 11 September 1349 of the bubonic plague in Maubisson, France at the age of thirty-four. She was buried in the Abbey of Maubuisson.

Less than six months after Bonne's death, John married Joan I, Countess of Auvergne.

Jean II de Valois[2839] married Judith de Luxembourg. They had three sons:

Charles V of France[2822] born on 21 January 1338 in Château du Bois de Vincennes, Val-de-Marne, Île-de-France, France; died on 16 September 1380 in Château de Beauté-sur-Marne, Nogent-sur-Marne, Île-de-France, France

Jean I de Valois du Berry[2837] born on 30 November 1340 in Vincennes, France; died on 15 June 1416 in Hôtel de Nesle in Paris

Philippe II de Bourgogne[2809] born in 1342; died in 1404

LOUIS II OF FLANDERS (Howard Charles's twenty-times-great-grandfather[2835], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born on 25 October 1330 to Louis I of Flanders[2870] and Margaret I de Bourgogne[2871]. Louis II was a Count of Flanders. He died on 30 January 1384, aged 53.

The son of Louis I of Flanders and Margaret I of Burgundy, daughter of king Philip V of England in 1346, he inherited the French counties of Flanders, Nevers, and Rethel (as Louis III). In the Anglo-French conflict, the Flanders guilds, depending on the English wool trade, forced Louis to recognize King Edward III as his overlord and arranged an engagement to the daughter of the English king, Isabella. Louis managed to avoid this by fleeing to the court of King Philip VI of France. In 1347 he married Margaret of Brabant, which sparked a revolt in Ghent. Nevertheless, while the Black Death devastated the county and after Louis came to terms with the English king and in 1349 he could return to Flanders to succeed his father. In 1350 he gained credence by openly refusing to pay homage to the new Valois king John II of France. When his father-in-law Duke John III died without male heirs in 1355, he assumed the title of a Duke of Brabant and moved into the neighbouring duchy, but was unable to wrest it from his sister-in-law Duchess Joanna. Though Louis managed to defeat the Brabantian forces in the Battle of Scheut near Anderlecht (17 August 1356) and capture the cities of Mechelen, Brussels, Antwerp and Leuven, but he was unable to prevail against Joanna, backed by her husband Duke Wenceslaus I of Luxembourg and his mighty brother Emperor Charles IV. By the 1357 Peace of Ath he at least gained the rule over the small Lordship of Mechelen and the thriving city of Antwerp.

Louis tried to govern as a Realpolitiker and continued a policy of neutrality, which kept him in favor with both France and England during the continued conflicts of the Hundred Years' War, initiating a period of stability and relative affluence in Flanders. With regards to his internal policy, his main aim was to prevent the formation of a broad coalition against him, as happened against his father. Except for his last years, he was successful in preventing this.

In 1357 Count Louis II married his seven-year-old daughter Margaret to the minor Duke Philip I of Burgundy, who died from plague four years later. Sole heiress of her father's territories, she was a highly coveted bride courted by both Edmund of Langley, son of King Edward III of England, and Philip the Bold, son of King John II of France and Duke of Burgundy since 1363. After several years of tough bargaining, Count Louis II gave his consent to Philip and his brother King Charles V, in return he received the lordships of Romance Flanders (Lille, Douai, Orchies) and a payment of 200,000 livre tournois. The marriage of Margaret and Philip was celebrated at Saint Bavo Cathedral in Ghent on 19 June 1369.

Though a capable ruler, Louis' lavish lifestyle burdened his county's finances and caused increasing disturbances. However, even in his latter years he managed to get the support of the Bruges citizens against revolting Ghent. The latter years of his rule were nevertheless marked by civil strife. In 1379, he obtained aid from his son-in-law, Duke Philip II of Burgundy, to put down another Ghent revolt. The Flemings again rose in 1382 under Philip van Artevelde and expelled Count Louis from Flanders after the Battle of Beverhoutsved; however, the influence of Philip procured a French army to relieve him, and the Flemings were decisively defeated at the Battle of Roosebeke. The citizens of Ghent continued to resist (with English aid) until after his death in 1384. His mother Margaret had died two years previously, leaving him the County of Artois and the Imperial Free County of Burgundy (Franche-Comté).

2842. MARGUERITE DE BRABANT (Howard Charles's twenty-times-great-grandmother[2836], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born on 9 February 1323 to Jean III de Brabant[2872] and Marie D'Evreux[2873]. She died in 1368, aged about 45.

Margaret of Brabant (9 February 1323 – 1380.[1]) was a countess consort of Flanders. She was the second daughter of Duke John III of Brabant and Mary of Évreux. She was the only child of Duke John to have children. In 1347 she married Louis II of Flanders, who was then sixteen years old and already count of Flanders. On 13 April 1350 their daughter, Margaret III, Countess of Flanders, was baptized. Through this daughter, their only surviving child, Brabant came under the influence of Burgundy when she married Philip the Bold.

On 26 September 1371, Margaret and her mother-in-law, Margaret of Artois, with their attendants, were guests of Philip the Bold, duke of Burgundy for supper in Lens. Soon afterwards, Margaret left Flanders and went to reside permanently, far from her husband, in the county of Réthel, where she died in April 1380 (after Easter).

Louis II of Flanders[2841], aged 16, married Marguerite de Brabant, aged 24, on 6 June 1347. They had one daughter:

Marguerite III of Flanders[2810] born on 13 April 1350; died on 16 March 1405 in Arras / Pas-de-Calais, France

2843. JACQUES 1 DE BOURBON (Howard Charles's twenty-times-great-grandfather[2837], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born in 1315 to Louis I de Bourbon[2874] and Marie D'Hainault-Coombs[2875]. Jacques I was a Count of La Marche. He died in 1393, aged about 78.

He took part in several campaigns of the Hundred Years War. In June 1347 he commanded an army on the Flemish border together with the Marshal Robert de Waurin (fr). They marched to Béthune, the chief city of north-eastern Artois, which was still in French hands, though the countryside had been overrun by the Flemish. There they had been overtaken by the Flemish border forces including the Béthune garrison, Charles de Montmorency (1325-1381) from the sector around Lille and Charles de la Cerda with most of the men from Aire and Saint-Omer. On 13 June they attacked the Flemish camp at night. However the Flemings managed to regroup and launch a counter-attack before slipping across the border.

In 1349, he was created Captain-General of Languedoc. Following the fall of Calais in 1347 a truce had been concluded, but in 1349 open warfare broke out again, the most conspicuous event of that year being Henry of Grosmont, 1st Duke of Lancaster's raid deep into Languedoc to the walls of Toulouse. In early 1350 James was given command of an army mustering at...
Moissac on the borders of Agenais. This he did 22 February. There, he almost immediately entered into negotiations with Lancaster with two papal legates acting as mediators. The result was a truce, at first limited to Languedoc and the other provinces where James was Lieutenant, but in April it was extended to the rest of France.

2844. JEANNE DE CHATILLON (Howard Charles's twenty-times-great-grandmother[2838], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born in 1320, in Châtillon, Hauts-de-Seine, Île-de-France, France. She died on 15 August 1371, aged about 51, in St Jacques, Paris, Île-de-France, France.
Jacques I de Bourbon[2843] married Jeanne de Chatillon. They had one son:

Jean I De Bourbon-Marche de Bourbon[2811] born in 1344 in Vendôme, Loir-et-Cher, Centre, France; died on 11 June 1393 in Vendôme, Loir-et-Cher, Centre, France

was born in 1350, in Pont Abbé, Henrichemont, Cher, Centre, France, to Hervé V Pont-L'Abbe[2876]

Louis de Bourbon, called the Good (4 February 1337 – 10 August 1410), son of Peter de Bourbon and Isabella de Valois (the sister of French King Philip VI), was the third Duke of Bourbon. Duke Louis is reported to have been somewhat mentally unstable, specifically having a trait of nervous breakdowns which is presumably hereditary; this trait was also evidenced in his sister Joanna of Bourbon (the wife of French King Charles V), his nephew Charles VI of France (called "The Mad"), his father Duke Peter, and his grandfather Louis I, Duke of Bourbon. The teenage Louis inherited the duchy from his father Duke Peter I after his death in the Battle of Poitiers in 1356.

On August 19, 1371, he married Anne of Auvergne (1358–1417), Countess of Forez and a daughter of Beraud II, Dauphin of Auvergne, and his wife the Countess of Forez, and they had four children:
- Catherine of Bourbon (b. 1378), d. young
- John of Bourbon (1381–1434), Duke of Bourbon
- Louis of Bourbon (1388 – 1404), Sieur de Beaujeu
- Isabelle of Bourbon (1384 – aft. 1451)

In 1390, Duke Louis launched the Barbary Crusade against the Hafsids of Tunis, in conjunction with the Genoese. Its objective was to suppress piracy based in the city of Mahdia, but the siege was unsuccessful.

Duke Louis died at Montlucon in 1410, at the age of 72 or 73.

2853. ANNE DE AUVERGNE (Howard Charles's twenty-times-great-great-aunt by marriage[2883]) was born in 1358. Anne was a Duchess of Bourbon. She died in 1417, aged about 59.

In 1321, Aymon oversaw the siege engines at the siege of Corbières. On the death of Amadeus V in 1323, Aymon was lord of Bresse under Edward. As a younger son of a noble family, Aymon had planned on a life in the church. When Edward died in 1329, Aymon was in Avignon at the court of Pope John XXII. In 1329, shortly after becoming count, Aymon established a committee to settle the territorial disputes with his cousin, Amadeus III of Geneva. These disputes had been an ongoing feud between the families for generations, but they were able to resolve them through years of negotiations without resorting back to war. This was how Aymon earned his nickname of 'The Peaceful'.

2863. YOLANDE DE MONTFERRAT (Howard Charles's twenty-one-times-great-grandmother[2854], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born in 1318. Yolande was a Countess of Savoy. She died on 24 December 1342, aged about 24. She was buried in Abbey of Hautecome, necropolis Savoyard and Italian sovereigns.

Peter I of Bourbon (1311 – 19 September 1356, Poitiers) was the second Duke of Bourbon, from 1342 to his death.

Peter was son of Louis I of Bourbon, whom he also succeeded as Grand Chamberlain of France, and Mary of Avesnes.

Duke Peter is reported to have been somewhat mentally unstable, a trait of nervous breakdowns presumably hereditary that showed clearly for example in his daughter Joan of Bourbon, the queen, and in her son, king Charles VI of France, as well as in Peter's only surviving son, Duke Louis II.

On 25 January 1336 he married Isabella of Valois, daughter of Charles, Count of Valois and his third wife Mahaut of Châtillon. Peter and Isabella had one son and seven daughters:

Joanna (1338–1378), married King Charles V of France
Blanche (1339–1361, Medina-Sidonia), married King Pedro of Castile in 1353 in Valladolid, poisoned by her husband
Bonne (1341 – 19 January 1402, Château de Mâcon), married Amadeus VI, Count of Savoy in 1355 in Paris
Catherine (1342–1427, Paris), married John VI of Harcourt
Margaret (1344–1416), married Arnaud Amanieu, Viscount of Tartas
Isabelle (b. 1345)
Isabella (1347–1401, Poissy), Prioress of Poissy.

2865. ISABELLE DE VALOIS (Howard Charles's twenty-one-times-great-grandmother[2856], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born in 1313 to Charles I de Valois[2891] and Mahaut de Chatillon[2890]. She died in 1383, aged about 70.

Isabella of Valois, Duchess of Bourbon or Isabella of France (1313 – 26 July 1383), was a Petit Fille of France, and a daughter of Charles of Valois by his third wife Mahaut of Châtillon.[1] She was the wife of Peter I, Duke of Bourbon.

Pierre I The Grand de Bourbon[2864] married Isabelle de Valois. They had three children:

Louis II "The Good" de Bourbon[2852] born in 1337; died in 1410 in Montlucon
Jeanne de Bourbon[2854] born on 3 February 1339 in Val-de-Marne, Lie-de-France, Vincennes, France; died on 6 February 1378 in Paris, Paris, Île-de-France, France

Bonne de Bourbon[2836] born in 1341; died in 1403

2866. PHILIPPE VI DE VALOIS (Howard Charles's twenty-one-times-great-grandfather[2860], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born on 17 November 1293, in Fontainebleau, Seine Et Marne, Ile De France, France, to Charles I de Valois[2891] and Marguerite de Sicily[2892]. Philippe VI was a King of France. He died on 22 August 1350, aged 56, in Nogent-Le-Rotrou, Eure-Et-Loir, France. He was buried in St Denis Abbey, Paris, Seine, France.

Philip VI (French: Philippe VI) (1293 – 22 August 1350), called the Fortunate (French: le Fortuné) and of Valois, was the first King of France from the House of Valois. He reigned from 1328 until his death.

Philip's reign was dominated by the consequences of a succession dispute. When King Charles IV the Fair died without a male heir in 1328, the nearest male relative was his nephew Edward III of England, who inherited his claim through his mother Isabella of France, the sister of the dead king. It was held in France, however, that Edward was ineligible to inherit the French throne through the female line according to the ancient Salic Law. At first, Edward seemed to accept Philip's accession as the nearest male relative of Charles IV descended through the male line, however he pressed his claim to the throne of France after a series of disagreements. with Philip. The result was the beginning of the Hundred Years’ War in 1337. After initial successes at sea, Philip's navy was annihilated at the Battle of Sluys in 1340, ensuring that the war would occur on the continent. The English took another decisive advantage at the Battle of Crécy (1346), while the Black Death struck France, further destabilizing the country. In 1349, Philip VI bought the Dauphiné from its ruined ruler Humbert II and entrusted the government of this province to his grandson Charles. Philip VI died in 1350 and was succeeded by his son John II the Good.

2867. JOHANNA DE BOURGOGNE (Howard Charles’s twenty-one-times-great-grandmother[2861], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born on 24 June 1294, in Bourgogne, Marne, France, to Otto IV de Bourgogne[2893] and Mathilda Dártios[2894]. Johanna became known as ‘The Lame’. The Lame was a Queen of France. She died (Plague) on 12 December 1349, aged 55, in Paris, Ile-de-France, France. She was buried in St Denis, Paris, Seine, France.

Joan was the daughter of Robert II, Duke of Burgundy, and Agnes of France. Her older sister, Margaret, was the first wife of Louis X of France. Joan married Philip of Valois, Louis's cousin, in July 1313. From 1315 to 1328, they were Count and Countess of Maine; from 1325, they were also Count and Countess of Valois and Anjou.

Philippe VI de Valois[2866] married Johanna de Bourgogne in Paris, Ile-de-France, France. They had one son: Jean II de Valois[2839] born on 26 April 1319 in Château de Gué-de-Mauny, Le Mans, Pays de la Loire, France; died on 8 April 1364 in Savoy Palace, London, Middlesex, United Kingdom 2868. JOHN OF BOHEMIA (Howard Charles’s twenty-one-times-great-grandfather[2862], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born on 10 August 1296, in 10 Montée de Clause, Luxembourg City, Luxembourg, to Henry VII de Luxembourg[2895] and Margaretha de Brabant[2896]. John became known as ‘The Blind’. He died (Killed in the Battle of Crécy) in 1346, aged about 49.

John the Blind (Luxembourgeois: Jang de Blannen; German: Johann der Blinde von Luxemburg; Czech: Jan Lucemburský) (10 August 1296 – 26 August 1346) was the Count of Luxembourg from 1309 and King of Bohemia from 1310 and titular King of Poland. He was the eldest son of the Holy Roman Emperor Henry VII and his wife Margaret of Brabant. He is well known for having died while fighting in the Battle of Crécy at age 50, after having been blind for a decade. John lost his eyesight at age 39 or 40 from ophthalmia in 1336, while crusading in Lithuania. A treatment by the famous physician Guy de Chauliac had no positive effects. At the outbreak of the Hundred Years’ War in 1337 he allied with King Philip VI of France and was even governor of Languedoc from 30 November 1338 to November 1340. At the Battle of Crécy in 1346 John controlled Phillip's advanced guard along with controlling the large contingents of Charles II of Alençon and Louis I, Count of Flanders. John was killed at age 50 while fighting against the English during the battle. The body of John the Blind was moved to Kloster Altmünster (“Old-Minster Abbey”) in Luxembourg. When the abbey was destroyed in 1543 the corpse was moved to Kloster Neumünster (“New-Minster Abbey”) in Luxembourg. During the confusion of the French Revolution the mortal remains were salvaged by the Boch industrialist family (founders of Villeroy & Boch, ennobled in 1892) and hidden in an attic room in Mettlach on the Saar River. The legend has it that the monks of the abbey asked Pierre-Joseph Boch for this favor. His son Jean-François Boch met with Prince Frederick William of Prussia on his voyage through the Rhineland in 1833 offering the remains as a gift. As Prince Frederick considered John the Blind to be one of his ancestors he ordered Karl Friedrich Schinkel to construct a funeral chapel. The chapel was built in 1834 and 1835 near Kastel-Staadt on a rock above the town. In 1838 on the anniversary of his death John the Blind was laid in a black marble sarcophagus in a public ceremony. In 1945 the Luxembourg government took the chance to obtain possession of the bones. In a cloak and dagger operation the remains were moved to the crypt of the Notre-Dame Cathedral, Luxembourg. The tomb reads "d.o.m., hoc sub altari servatur, rex bohemiae, comes luxemburgensis, henrici vii imperatoris filius, caroli iv imperatoris pater, wenceslai et sigismundi imperatorum avus, princeps animo maximus, obiit mecccd 30 au." In Luxembourg, he is venerated as a national hero and founder of the Schueberfouer, which makes him a "household name" more than 650 years after his death.
2869. ELIZABETH PŘEMYSLOVNA (Howard Charles's twenty-one-times-great-grandmother[2863], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born on 20 January 1292, in Prague, Bohemia, to Wenceslaus II Přemysl[2897] and Judith of Habsburg[2898]. Elizabeth was a Queen of Bohemia. She died on 28 September 1330, aged 38, in Prague, Bohemia.

Elizabeth of Bohemia (Czech: Eliška Přemyslovna) (20 January 1292 – 28 September 1330) was a princess of the Bohemian Přemyslid dynasty who became queen consort of Bohemia as the first wife of King John the Blind (John of Luxembourg). She was the mother of King of Bohemia and Holy Roman Emperor Charles IV.

John of Bohemia[2868], aged 14, married Elizabeth Přemyslovna, aged 18, on 30 August 1310. They had one daughter:

Judith de Luxembourg[2840] born on 20 May 1315 in Prague, Czech Republic; died on 11 September 1349 in Saint-Ouen-l'Aumône, France

2870. LOUIS I OF FLANDERS (Howard Charles's twenty-one-times-great-grandfather[2864], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born in 1304. Louis I was a Count of Flanders. He died on 25 August 1346, aged about 42.

He was the son of Louis I, Count of Nevers, and Joan, Countess of Rethel, and grandson of Robert III of Flanders. He succeeded his father as count of Nevers and his grandfather as count of Flanders in 1322. He inherited the county of Rethel from his mother.

In 1320 Louis married Margaret, second daughter of King Philip V of France and Joan II, Countess of Burgundy, who would later inherit her mother's counties of Burgundy and Artois in 1361.[2] This marriage alliance made him break with the anti-French policy of his grandfather Robert III and great-grandfather Guy I.

His pro-French policies and excessive taxations levied by Louis caused an uprising in 1323. Beginning as a series of scattered rural riots, the peasant insurrection escalated into a full-scale rebellion that dominated public affairs in Flanders for nearly five years until 1328. The rebels, led by Nicolaas Zannekin, captured the towns of Nieuwpoort, Veurne, Ieper and Kortrijk. In Kortrijk, Zannekin was able to capture Louis himself. In 1325 the King of France, Charles IV intervened whereupon Louis was released from captivity in February 1326 and the Peace of Arques was sealed. The peace didn't last long and soon hostilities erupted again which made the count flee to France. Louis was able to convince his new liege Philip VI of France to come to his aid and Zannekin and his adherents were decisively defeated by the French royal army in the Battle of Cassel.

When the Hundred Years War started, Louis remained steadfast in his French policy, even with the county being economically dependent on England. His actions resulted in an English boycott of the wool trade which in turn sparked a new insurrection under Jacob van Artevelde. In 1339 the count had to flee his lands, never being able to return. Louis was killed at the Battle of Crécy in 1346.

2871. MARGARET I DE BOURGOGNE (Howard Charles's twenty-one-times-great-grandmother[2865], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born in 1310 to Philip V of France[2899] and Jeanne de Bourgogne[2900]. Margaret I was a Countess of Burgundy. She died on 9 May 1382, aged about 71.

Margaret I (1310 – 9 May 1382), Countess Palatine of Burgundy and Artois, reigned from 1361 and 1382. By marriage, she was also countess of Flanders, Nevers and Rethel. Margaret was born in 1310, the second daughter of Countess Joan II of Burgundy and the future King Philip V of France. Her father ascended the throne in 1316, following the death of her infant first cousin King John I. Margaret was married to Louis I, Count of Flanders. Her husband was dependent on her father in suppressing the rebellion of Nicolaas Zannekin. King Philip died in 1322, and the crown was inherited by her uncle, King Charles IV.

Margaret's mother, Joan II, succeeded her own mother, Mahaut, as Countess of Artois in 1329. Margaret's elder sister Joan, inherited the counties of Artois and Burgundy when their mother died in 1330. Her husband was killed in the Battle of Crécy on 26 August 1346. He and Margaret had one son, Louis II, Count of Flanders, who succeeded his father and for whom she acted as a regent in the beginning of his reign. In 1355, the younger Louis claimed the Duchy of Brabant in right of his wife, but Duchess Joanna, managed to keep her possessions. In 1357, Margaret's granddaughter, Margaret, then seven years old, was married to Philip I,
Duke of Burgundy, grandson and heir of Margaret's sister. They were childless and, upon his death in 1361, Margaret inherited Artois and Burgundy. In 1369, the younger Margaret married Philip the Bold, youngest son of King John. According to Guizot, whilst Margaret I favoured the marriage of her granddaughter to Philip the Bold, the girl's father, Louis of Flanders, and the Flemish communes, preferring England to France, were unwilling to arrange the marriage. Reputedly, Margaret, vexed at the ill will of the count her son, had one day said to him, as she tore open her dress before his eyes, "Since you will not yield to your mother's wishes, I will cut off these breasts which gave suck to you, to you and to no other, and will throw them to the dogs to devour." Louis, persuaded, agreed to the marriage.

The unrest in coastal Low Countries escalated to open rebellions in Margaret's last years. A revolt in Ghent was put down by joint operation of Margaret's son and grandson-in-law. However, after the Battle of Beverhoutsveld, Louis II was expelled from Flanders by the Flemings under Philip van Artevelde. A French army (and Philip the Bold) came to help them regain Flanders, and the revolting Flemings were decisively defeated at the Battle of Roosebeke, the year in which Margaret died. However, the citizens of Ghent continued to resist with English aid, and it was left to her granddaughter and grandson-in-law to subdue the town.

Countess Margaret died in 1382. Her counties were inherited by her only son Louis, Count of Flanders, who died two years later. In 1384, all her possessions, together with Flanders and the rest of Louis' inheritance, went to her only surviving grandchild, Margaret III and II.

Louis I of Flanders[2870] married Margaret I de Bourgogne. They had one son:

Louis II of Flanders[2841] born on 25 October 1330; died on 30 January 1384

2872. JEAN III DE BRABANT (Howard Charles's twenty-one-times-great-grandfather[2866], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born in 1300 to Jean II de Brabant[2901] and Margaret Plantagenet[2902]. Jean III was a Duke of Brabant, Lothier, and Limburg. He died in 1355, aged about 55.

2873. MARIE D'EVREUX (Howard Charles's twenty-one-times-great-grandmother[2867], see Maternal Ancestry(113)) was born in 1303 to Louis D'Evreux[2903] and Marguerite D'Artois[2904]. She died in 1335, aged about 32.

Jean III de Brabant[2872], aged about 14, married Marie D'Evreux, aged about 11, in 1314. They had one daughter:

Marguerite de Brabant[2842] born on 9 February 1323; died in 1368

2874. LOUIS I DE BOURBON (Howard Charles's twenty-one-times-great-grandfather[2868], see Maternal Ancestry(113) and Maternal Ancestry(140)) was born in 1280, in Clermont, Oise, to Robert de Clermont[2905] and Beatrice de Bourgogne[2906]. Louis I was a Duke of Bourbon. He died on 22 January 1342, aged about 61, in Paris, France. He was buried in Convent of the Jacobins of Paris.

Louis I, called the Lame (1279 – 22 January 1341) was Count of Clermont-en-Beauvaisis and La Marche and the first Duke of Bourbon. Louis was born in Clermont-en-Beauvaisis, the son of Robert, Count of Clermont, and a grandson of King Louis IX of France. Louis' mother was Beatrix of Burgundy, heiress of Bourbon and a granddaughter of Hugh IV, Duke of Burgundy. He fought on the losing side in the Battle of the Golden Spurs (1302) and in the Battle of Mons-en-Péville (1304), but managed to escape unharmed. In 1310, he was made Grand Chambrier of France. In 1327, Charles IV of France persuaded him to exchange the County of Clermont for that of La Marche, and elevated Bourbon to a duchy-peerage. However, Clermont was restored to him by Philip VI of France in 1331. He belonged to Philip VI's small circle of trusted advisors.

Duke Louis is reported to have been somewhat mentally unstable, in particular suffering from nervous breakdowns. The trait is believed to have been hereditary, with his granddaughter Joanna of Bourbon, her son, King Charles VI of France, and Charles' grandson, King Henry VI of England, all displaying similar symptoms.\[citation needed\]

He was buried in the now-demolished church of the Couvent des Jacobins in Paris.
2875. MARIE DE HAINAULT-COOMBS (Howard Charles's twenty-one-times-great-grandmother[2869], see Maternal Ancestry(113) and Maternal Ancestry(140)) was born in 1280, in Valenciennes, Nord, France, to Jean de Hainault-Coombs[2907] and Phillippa de Luxembourg[2908]. She died on 28 August 1354, aged about 74, in Murat Castle, Bourbonnois, Bourbonnois, France.

Louis I de Bourbon[2874] married Marie de Hainault-Coombs. They had two sons:
- Pierre I The Grand de Bourbon[2864] born in 1311; died in 1365
- Jacques I de Bourbon[2843] born in 1315; died in 1393

Amadeus succeeded his childless paternal uncle Philip I as Count of Savoy in 1285. Amadeus was a younger brother of Thomas III of Piedmont, who had died in 1282. Thomas had been succeeded by his eldest son Philip I of Piedmont who had a stronger claim to the County than Amadeus. However Philip was about seven years old and at the time unable to press a claim. Amadeus managed to secure the support of his nephew by offering Philip control of Turin and Pinerolo. Amadeus also secured the loyalty of his younger brother Louis by offering him Vaud as an hereditary barony.

In 1287 Amadeus besieged the castle of Ile in the Rhône near Geneva, and captured it after fourteen weeks.

The eventual recovery of Lyon by the Kings of France alerted Amadeus to their expansionistic tendencies towards the regions by the Alps. He sought a powerful ally against potential hostility in Henry VII, Holy Roman Emperor. Henry was married to Margaret of Brabant, sister-in-law of Amadeus. The relation through marriage probably helped the alliance. Henry awarded Amadeus with the title of imperial vicar of Lombardy and at least titular claim over the Asti region. Henry also elevated Aosta and Chablais to duchies, though they remained a part of the realm of Savoy.

In 1315, Amadeus assisted the Knights Hospitaller in the defense of Rhodes against the Turks.
2889. SYBILLE DE BAUGÉ (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandmother[2881], see Maternal Ancestry(139)) was born in 1255. Sybille was a Countess of Savoy. She died in 1294, aged about 39.

Amédée V de Savoie[2888] married Sybille de Baugé. They had one son:

Charles of Valois (12 March 1270 – 16 December 1325) was the third son of Philip III of France and Isabella of Aragon. He was a member of the House of Capet and founded the House of Valois. In 1284, he was created Count of Valois (as Charles I) by his father and, in 1290, received the title of Count of Anjou from his marriage to Margaret of Anjou. Through his marriage to Catherine I, titular empress of the Latin Empire, he was titular Latin Emperor of Constantinople from 1301–1307, although he ruled from exile and only had authority over Crusader States in Greece.

Charles I de Valois, aged about 37, married Mahaut de Chatillon[2890], aged about 15, in 1308. They had one daughter:

Isabelle de Valois[2865] born in 1313; died in 1383

2892. MARGUERITE DE SICILY (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandmother[2888], see Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1273 to Charles II de Naples[2929] and Maria Árpád of Hungary[2930]. She died in 1299, aged about 26.

Otho IV, Count of Burgundy (1248, Ornans – 1302) was the son of Hugh de Châlons and Adélaïde, Countess Palatine of Burgundy. Via his mother, he was a grandson of Countess Beatrice II of Burgundy. Via his father, he was descended from another branch of the Counts of Burgundy.

Upon his father's death in 1266/1267, he became Count of Châlons. His mother, Adélaïde, died on March 8, 1279, and Otto inherited the County. However, he was unable to secure real power in the County until 1295. His son and elder daughter Jeanne II would eventually succeed him in the County of Burgundy.

His wife Mahaut drew up a contract on June 4, 1312 with the famous tomb maker Jean Pepin.
de Huy to make a tomb. The contract specifies a tomb made of stone and alabaster. Otto was to be shown as an armed knight with a shield, sword and armor. A lion was shown beneath his feet. Two angels would support the pillow under his head. This tomb no longer exists today, but the designs were preserved.

2894. MATHILDA DÄRTIOS (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandmother[2890], see Maternal Ancestry(143) and Maternal Ancestry(146)) was born in 1268, in Chalon-Sur-Saone, Saone-et-Loire, Bourgogne, France, to Robert II Därtois[2933] and Amicie de Courtenay[2934]. She died on 27 October 1329, aged about 61, in Paris, Seine, Ile-de-France, France.

Mathilde, Countess of Artois (1268 – 28 October 1329, Paris), also known as Mathilda, was sovereign Countess of Artois in 1302-1329. She was further more regent of the County of Burgundy from 1303 during the minority of her son, Robert, Count of Burgundy. She was the eldest child (and only daughter) of Robert II, Count of Artois, and Amicie de Courtenay.

Otto IV de Bourgogne[2893] married Mathilda Därtois. They had two daughters:

Jeanne de Bourgogne[2900] born in 1291; died in 1330
Johanna de Bourgogne[2867] born on 24 June 1294 in Bourgogne, Marne, France; died on 12 December 1349 in Paris, Ile-de-France, France

2895. HENRY VII DE LUXEMBOURG (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandfather[2891], see Maternal Ancestry(144)) was born in 1275, in Valenciennes, France, to Henry VI de Luxembourg[2935] and Beatrice D'Avesnes[2936]. Henry VII was an Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire. He died (Malaria) on 24 August 1313, aged about 38, in Buonconvento near Siena, Italy. He was buried in Pisa, Italy.

Henry VII (German: Heinrich; c. 1275 – 24 August 1313) was the King of Germany (or Rex Romanorum) from 1308 and Holy Roman Emperor from 1312. He was the first emperor of the House of Luxembourg. During his brief career he reinvigorated the imperial cause in Italy, which was racked with the partisan struggles between the divided Guelf and Ghibelline factions, and inspired the praise of Dino Compagni and Dante Alighieri; however, his premature death undid his life's work.

When Henry VII died, Pisans built a monumental tomb inside their cathedral. The tomb was centered behind the High Altar in the apse. The choice of place was intended to demonstrate the devotion of the Pisans to the Emperor.

The tomb was built in 1315 by Tino di Camaino and was built above the grave itself, the statue of Henry VII lying above it and many other statues and angels. But the tomb didn't have a long life: for political reasons it was dismantled and the parts were reused in other places in the square. By 1985, the grave of the Emperor had been shifted to the right transept of the cathedral, near the tomb of Saint Ranieri; a couple of statues were put on the top of the façade and a number of statues portraying Henry VII himself and his counsellors were in the Cemetery. Nowadays the statues have been translated in the Museo dell'Opera del Duomo in Pisa, while the tomb remains in the cathedral.

2896. MARGARETHA DE BRABANT (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandmother[2892], see Maternal Ancestry(144)) was born on 4 October 1276, in Leuven, Belgium, to Jean I de Brabant[2943] and Marguérite de Dampierre[2944]. Margaretha was an Empress of the Holy Roman Empire. She died on 14 December 1311, aged 35, in Genoa, Liguria, Italy. She was buried in Church of San Francesco di Castelletto, Genoa, Italy.

Margaret of Brabant (4 October 1276 – 14 December 1311), was the daughter of John I, Duke of Brabant and Margaret of Flanders. She was the wife of Count Henry of Luxemburg and after his coronation in 1308, she became Holy Roman Queen. She was married to Henry on 9 July 1292 which was arranged to settle a long-standing dispute with the Duke of Brabant over the Duchy of Limburg, with the duke abandoning his claim to Limburg at the time Margaret's marriage took place. By all accounts, the marriage proved to be happy. She became the Queen consort of Germany in 1308 when her husband was crowned king.

Margaret accompanied her husband on his Italy campaign, became ill during the siege of Brescia and died a few months later in Genoa, where she was buried in the church of San Francesco di Castelletto. Her death was recorded in the Gesta Baldeuwini Luzeenburch in December 1311. The famous sculptor Giovanni Pisano was commissioned by the Emperor to create a monument in her memory in 1313 (parts of it are still preserved in Genoa, Museo di Sant’Agostino and Galleria Nazionale della Liguria in Palazzo Spinola).

Henry VII de Luxembourg[2895] married Margaretha de Brabant. They had one son:

John of Bohemia[2868] born on 10 August 1296 in 10 Montée de Clause, Luxembourg City, Luxembourg; died in 1346

2897. KING WENCELAUS II PREMTYSL (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandfather[2893], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born on 17 September 1271, in Prague, Bohemia, to Ottokar II Přemysl[2937] and Kunegunda Rostislavna[2938]. Wencelaus II was a King of Bohemia. He died (Tuberculosis) on 21 June 1305, aged 33, in Prague, Bohemia. He was buried in Cistercian monastery Zbraslav, Prague, Bohemia.

2898. JUDITH OF HABSBURG (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandmother[2894], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born on 13 March 1271, in Habsburg, Aargau, Switzerland, to Rudolph of Habsburg[2939] and Gertrude of Hohenburg[2940]. She died on 21 March 1297, aged 26, in Prague, Bohemia. She was buried in Royal Crypt in St. Vitus Cathedral, Praha, Bohemia.

  Wenceslaus II Přemysl[2897], aged 13, married Judith of Habsburg, aged 13, on 24 January 1285 in Jihlava, Bohemia. They had one daughter:

Elizabeth Přemyslovna[2869] born on 20 January 1292 in Prague, Bohemia; died on 28 September 1330 in Prague, Bohemia 2899. PHILIP V OF FRANCE (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandfather[2895], see Maternal Ancestry(146)) was born in 1294, in Lyons, France, to Philip IV (The Fair) of France[2941] and Jeanne I of Navarre[2942]. Philip V was a King of France. He died on 3 January 1322, aged about 27, in Longchamp, France. He was buried in St. Denis, France.

Philip V (c. 1293 – 3 January 1322), the Tall (French: Philippe le Long), was King of France and King of Navarre (as Philip II). He reigned from 1316 to his death and was the penultimate monarch of the main line of the House of Capet.

As the second son of King Philip IV, he was entitled to an appanage, the County of Poitiers, while his elder brother, Louis X, inherited the throne in 1314. When Louis died in 1316, he left a daughter and a pregnant wife, Clementia of Hungary. Philip the Tall successfully claimed the regency. Queen Clementia gave birth to a boy, who was proclaimed king as John I, but the infant king lived only for five days.

At the death of his nephew, Philip immediately had himself crowned at Reims. However, his legitimacy was challenged by the party of Louis X’s daughter Joan. Philip V successfully contested her claims for a number of reasons, including her youth, doubts regarding her paternity (her mother was involved in the Tour de Nesle Affair), and the Estates General's determination that women should be excluded from the line of succession to the French throne. The succession of Philip, instead of Joan, set the precedent for the French royal succession that would be famously known as the Salic law.

Philip V restored somewhat good relations with the County of Flanders, which had entered into open rebellion during his father’s rule, but simultaneously his relations with Edward II of England worsened as the English king, who was also Duke of Guayenne, initially refused to pay him homage. A spontaneous popular crusade started in Normandy in 1320 aiming to liberate Iberia from the Moors. Instead the angry populace marched to the south attacking castles, royal officials, priests, lepers, and Jews.

Philip V engaged in a series of domestic reforms intended to improve the management of the kingdom. These reforms included the creation of an independent Court of Finances, the standardization of weights and measures, and the establishment of a single currency. Philip V died from dysentery in 1322 without a male heir and was succeeded by his younger brother Charles IV.

2900. JEANNE DE BOURGOGNE (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandmother[2896], see Maternal Ancestry(146)) was born in 1291 to Otto IV de Bourgogne[2893] and Mathilda Dártios[2894]. Jeanne was a Queen of France. She died in 1330, aged about 39.
Philip V of France[2899] married Jeanne de Bourgogne. They had one daughter:
Margaret I de Bourgogne[2871] born in 1310; died on 9 May 1382

2901. JEAN II DE BRABANT (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandfather[2897], see Maternal Ancestry(147)) was born in 1275 to Jean I de Brabant[2943] and Marguerite de Dampierre[2944]. He died in 1312, aged about 37.

2902. MARGARET PLANTAGENET (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandmother[2898], see Maternal Ancestry(147)) was born on 12 March 1275, in Windsor Castle, England, to Edward I, King Plantagenet[2945] and Éléanore de Bourgogne-Castilla[2946]. She died in 1333, aged about 58, in Belgium. She was buried in Cathedral of St. Michael and St. Gudula, Brussels.

Margaret was born on 15 March 1275, at Windsor Castle, the tenth child of King Edward I and his cousin Eleanor of Castile. Margaret's fifteen siblings included Joan of Acre, Eleanor, Countess of Bar, Elizabeth of Rhuddlan and her father's successor, Edward II of England. On 8 July 1290 Margaret married John II, Duke of Brabant in Westminster Abbey, London; becoming Duchess of Brabant less than four years later on 3 May 1294. She had been acquainted with her groom since childhood, as they had been betrothed in 1278 when she was three years old. Margaret's wedding festivities were splendidly extravagant; they included a procession of knights in full body armour and richly-dressed ladies singing as they paraded through the streets of London to the music provided by harpers, minstrels and violinists, while fools danced. Their only child was John III, Duke of Brabant, successor to his father. Margaret, described having been a good-natured, merry child in her youth,[3] was unhappy at the Brabant court, as she was forced to accept her husband's perennial succession of mistresses and the illegitimate children they bore him; all of whom were raised at court alongside her own son John. The latter was her only child, born 10 years after her marriage to the Duke. During the reign of John II, Brabant continued supporting a coalition to stop French expansion. He tried to conquer South Holland (district of medieval Holland) from the pro-French count John II of Holland, but was not successful. John, who suffered from kidney stones and wanted his duchy to be peacefully handed over to his son upon his death, in 1312 signed the famous Charter of Kortenberg.

Margaret and John attended the wedding of her brother Edward to Isabella of France in Boulogne on 25 January 1308. They accompanied the royal pair to England for their joint coronation at Westminster Abbey the following month. Margaret died twenty-two years after her husband. She died in Belgium and was buried at Cathedral of St. Michael and St. Gudula, Brussels. Out of all of Edward I's nineteen children Margaret lived the longest even survived into the reign of her nephew Edward III of England. Her tomb and the one of her husband have been destroyed.

Jean II de Brabant[2901] married Margaret Plantagenet. They had one son:
Jean III de Brabant[2872] born in 1300; died in 1355

2903. LOUIS D'EVREUX (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandfather[2899], see Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born on 3 May 1276 to Philippe III Capet[2947] and Marie de Brabant[2948]. Louis was a Count d'Évreux. He died on 19 May 1319, aged 43, in Longpont-sur-Orge / Essonne.

Louis of Evreux (3 May 1276 – 19 May 1319, Paris) was a prince, the third son of King Philip III of France and his second wife Maria of Brabant, and thus a half-brother of King Philip IV of France.

Louis had a quiet and reflective personality and was politically opposed to the scheming of his half-brother Charles of Valois. He was, however, close with his nephew Philip V of France. He married Margaret of Artois, daughter of Philip of Artois and sister of Robert III of Artois, and had five children:

Marie (1303 – 31 October 1335), married in 1311 John III, Duke of Brabant
Charles (1305–1336), Count of Étampes married Maria de la Cerda, Lady of Lunel, daughter of Fernando de la Cerda.
Philip III of Navarre (1306–1343), married Joan II of Navarre.
Margaret (1307–1350), married in 1325 William XII of Auvergne
Joan (1310–1370), married Charles IV of France.

2904. MARGUERITE D’ARTOIS (Howard Charles’s twenty-two-times-great-grandmother[2900], see Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1285 to Philippe D’Artois[2949] and Blanche de Bretagne[2950]. She died on 26
October 1311, aged about 26.

Margaret of Artois (1285–1311) was the eldest child of Philip of Artois and his wife, Blanche of Brittany.
She was a member of the House of Artois. She was married to Louis d’Évreux, her daughters all made good political marriages. By her marriage, Margaret was Countess consort of Évreux.

Louis D’Évreux[2903], aged about 25, married Marguerite D’Artois, aged about 16, in 1301. They had one daughter:

Marie D’Évreux[2873] born in 1303; died in 1335

2905. ROBERT DE CLERMONT (Howard Charles’s twenty-two-times-great-grandfather[2901], see Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born in 1256 to Louis IX Capet[2951] and Marguerite de Provence[2952]. He died on 7 February 1317, aged about 60. He was buried in Couvent des Jacobins in Paris.

Robert of Clermont (1256 – 7 February 1317) was created Count of Clermont in 1268. He was the son of King Louis IX of France and Marguerite of Provence. In 1272, Robert married Beatrice of Burgundy, heiress of Bourbon. During his first joust, in 1279, Robert suffered head injuries which rendered him an invalid for the remainder of his life.
Robert is considered the founder of the House of Bourbon, a family which, with the passing of centuries came to govern as Kings of Navarre (1572–1830), Kings of France (1589–1848), Kings of the Two Sicilies (1735–1860), Dukes of Parma (1748–1796 and 1847–1859), grand dukes of Luxembourg (1964–present) and Kings of Spain (1700–present). Robert is mentioned in the prologue of the Coutumes de Beauvaisis by Philippe de Beaumanoir. He was buried in the now-demolished church of the Couvent des Jacobins in Paris.

Robert is a supporting character in Les Rois maudits (The Accursed Kings), a series of French historical novels by Maurice Druon. He was portrayed by Alexandre Rignault in the 1972
French miniseries adaptation of the series, and by Ioan Siminie in the 2005 adaptation.

2906. BEATRICE DE BOURGOGNE (Howard Charles’s twenty-two-times-great-grandmother[2902], see Maternal Beatrice of Burgundy (1257 – October 1, 1310) was Lady of Bourbon and, through her mother, heiress of all Bourbon estates. She was the daughter of John of Burgundy (son of Hugh IV, Duke of Burgundy) and Agnes of Dampierre. In 1272 Beatrice married Robert, Count of Clermont and their eldest son Louis I, le Boiteux became the first Duke of Bourbon. It is through her that her distant male descendants of the French House of Bourbon get their name.

Ottone and Acerbo Morena in their Historia Frederici I described Beatrice as "[O]f medium height, her hair shone like gold, her face most beautiful...".

Robert de Clermont[2905] married Beatrice de Bourgogne. They had one son:
Louis I de Bourbon[2874] born in 1280 in Clermont, Oise; died on 22 January 1342 in Paris, France

2907. JEAN DE HAINAULT-COOMBS (Howard Charles’s twenty-two-times-great-grandfather[2903], see Maternal Ancestry(150)) was born in 1248. Jean was a Count of Hainaut, Holland, and Zeeland. He died on 22
August 1304, aged about 56.

John II, born 1247, was the oldest son of John I of Avesnes and Adelaide of Holland, daughter of Floris IV, Count of Holland. He was Count of Hainaut from 1280 to his death and Count of Holland from 1299 until his death. John continued the war between the House of Dampierre and the House of Avesnes against count Guy of Flanders for imperial Flanders.
He became Count of Holland in 1299 with the death of John I, Count of Holland,[2] through his mother Adelaide of Holland, heiress and regent of this county. The personal union he established between Hainaut and Holland–Zeeland lasted for another half-century. His cousin, Count Floris V, was fighting against Flanders for Zeeland.[3] He sought help of France against Flanders.[3] The French defeated the Flemish in 1300 and 1301. The rebels in Zeeland were defeated as well. John's brother, Guy of Avesnes, became Bishop of Utrecht. So all his main enemies were gone. The tide changed dramatically after a Flemish uprising and the defeat of the French army at the Battle of the Golden Spurs in 1302, where his eldest son was killed fighting for the French. Flemish patriots attacked Hainaut and Zeeland supported by the dissatisfied population there. Guy of Namur defeated John's son, William, in a battle on the island of Duiveland. Bishop Guy of Utrecht was taken prisoner. Guy of Namur and Duke John II of Brabant conquered most of Utrecht, Holland, and Zeeland. Guy of Namur was finally defeated in 1304 by the fleet of Holland and France at the naval Battle of Zierikzee. John II regained most of his authority when he died in the same year.

2908. PHILLIPPA DE LUXEMBOURG (Howard Charles's twenty-two-times-great-grandmother[2904], see Maternal Ancestry(150)) was born in 1252 to Henry V Le Blond de Luxembourg[2953] and Marguerite de Bar[2954]. She died in 1311, aged about 59.

Jean de Hainault-Coombs[2907] married Phillippa de Luxembourg. They had one daughter:

Thomas II (c. 1199, Montmélian – 7 February 1259) was the Lord of Piedmont from 1233 to his death, Count of Flanders jure uxoris from 1237 to 1244, and regent of the County of Savoy from 1253 to his death, while his nephew Boniface was fighting abroad. He was the son of Thomas I of Savoy and Margaret of Geneva.
Although he was the next brother of Amadeus IV, he never became the Count of Savoy because he predeceased his nephew, Boniface, who himself died without sons to succeed him. Thomas did act as regent for Boniface during the early years of his reign. Although Thomas left sons, upon Boniface’ death the remaining uncles, younger brothers of Thomas, ruled the County of Savoy. Thomas’ eldest son and heir Thomas III thought it to be an injustice and unsuccessfully claimed Savoy. However, it so happened that Philip I, the last surviving brother of Thomas, made Thomas’ younger son Amadeus his heir in Savoy, leaving the elder son, Thomas, and the genealogically senior line descending from him out of the Savoy succession.

2927. BEATRICE FIESCHI (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandmother[2919], see Maternal Ancestry(139)) was born in 1225, in Lavagna, Italy. She died on 15 July 1283, aged about 58, in Savoy. She was buried in Abbey of Hautecombe.

2928. ISABELLA DE ARAGON (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandmother[2921], see Maternal Ancestry(141) and Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1248 to James I The Conqueror Aragon[2968] and Violant of Hungary[2969]. Isabella was a Queen of France. She died (Childbirth) on 28 January 1271, aged about 22, in Cosenza, Calabria. She was buried in Basilica of St Denis. Her tomb, like many others, was desecrated during the French Revolution in 1793.

Isabella was the daughter of King James I of Aragon and his second wife Violant of Hungary[6] and thus granddaughter of Yolanda de Courtenay.
In Clermont on 28 May 1262, Isabella married the future Philip III of France, son of Louis IX and Margaret of Provence. They had four sons:
Louis (1265–1276)
Philip IV "the Fair" (1268–1314), King of France
Robert (1269–1271)
Charles, Count of Valois (1270–1325)
She accompanied her husband on the Eighth Crusade against Tunis. On their way home, they stopped in Cosenza, Calabria. Six months pregnant with her fifth child, on 11 January 1271 she suffered a fall from her horse after they had resumed the trip back to France. Isabella gave birth to a premature stillborn son. She never recovered from her injuries and the childbirth, and died seventeen days later, on 28 January. Her husband took her body and their stillborn son and, when he finally returned to France, buried her in the Basilica of St Denis. Her tomb, like many others, was desecrated during the French Revolution in 1793.

2929. CHARLES II DE NAPLES (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandfather[2923], see Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1254, in Naples, Italy, to Charles I de Anjou[2970] and Beatrice de Provence[2971]. Charles II became known as ‘The Lame’. The Lame was a King of Naples. He died on 5 May 1309, aged about 54.

Charles was a King of Naples, King of Albania, Prince of Salerno, Prince of Achaea, Count of Provence and Forcalquier and Count of Anjou.

2930. MARIA ÁRPÁD OF HUNGARY (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandmother[2924], see Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1258, in Budapest, Hungary, to Steven V Árpád of Hungary[2972] and Erzsebet Kuman[2973]. Maria was a Queen of Naples. She died on 25 March 1323, aged about 64, in Naples, Italy. She was buried in Santa Maria Donna Regina, Naples, Italy.

In 1270, when Mary was only twelve years of age, she married the future Charles II of Naples. The wedding took place in Naples on 6 August 1270. The marriage was intended as a double alliance between Naples and Hungary to support the intended conquest of Byzantium by Naples, but it did not serve its purpose as her brother in 1272 made an alliance with Byzantium as well. Maria accompanied Charles on his trips and spent 1278–82 in Provence with her consort. In 1284, she made her first political act: when Charles was taken captive by Aragon, she made the decision to free the Aragonese prisoner Beatrice of Hohenstaufen. In 1285, Charles became monarch but remained in Aragonese prison. She did not take part in the regency for him in Naples, but remained in Provence, where she did take part in the administration from time to time, though she was not formal regent. In 1288, she took part in the negotiations of her consort's release, and the same year, she made a peace treaty with Aragon. Charles was release the same year, and they returned to Naples together. In 1290-94, she was regent for him in Provence.

Mary's tomb in Naples
On 10 July 1290, Mary's brother, Ladislaus IV of Hungary died childless. The question now was who would succeed him: he had four sisters, three of them outlived him, all four had married powerful rulers and all four had their own children. On 21 September 1290, Mary claimed the throne of Hungary. She was up against her two sisters, Catherine and Elisabeth, and their children, plus the children of her younger sister Anna. Mary was crowned Queen by a Papal legate in Naples (1291), but immediately transferred her rights to her eldest son, Charles Martel of Anjou. The Pope confirmed her sole rights in Hungary on 30 August 1295. However, Catherine's son, Stephen Vladislav II of Syrmia, was still a dangerous rival for Mary and Charles Martel. In the end, Charles Martel gave his cousin Slavonia as a compromise. Charles Martel was only titular King of Hungary, it was Mary's grandson who became King, Charles I of Hungary. Ultimately the claims of the sisters Mary and Catherine were united in a common descendant when the pair's great-great-granddaughter, Mary of Hungary, ascended to the Hungarian throne in 1382.
When the line of Charles Martel and the Angevins in Hungary died out, it was Sigismund, a remote descendant of Béla IV, whose family succeeded. During 1290, Mary's sister Elisabeth fled from Bohemia with her son because her husband had lost favour and was executed. Mary allowed Elisabeth and her son to stay in Naples with her, before she became a nun, but escaped and remarried to Stephen Uroš II Milutin of Serbia (brother of Catherine's husband) Elizabeth's stay in Naples is documented during July 1300. In 1294, Mary returned with Charles to Naples.
She was his representative at the negotiations with the Pope in 1295-96. Between 1296 and 1298, she served as regent of Naples in the absence of her consort. She served as regent the last time in 1302. After this, she lost her influence over states affairs, and retired to pious duties such as to finance convents and churches.
Mary's husband died in August 1309. Mary was now a widow. There is no evidence that she became a nun, which has sometimes been rumored, but she did spent a lot of her time in convents. She lived in Naples for the rest of her life, where she died on 25 March 1323. She was buried in Naples at the Santa Maria Donna Regina.

2933. ROBERT II DÁRTOIS (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandfather[2927], see Maternal Ancestry(143), Maternal Ancestry(146) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1250, in Artois, Pas-de-Calais, France, to Robert I Dártios[2976] and Matilda de Brabant[2977]. Robert II became known as ‘The Noble’. The Noble was a Count of Artois. He died (Died at the Battle of the Golden Spurs) on 11 July 1302, aged about 52, in Kortrijk, Flandres, Belgium. He was buried in L'Abbaye de Maubuisson, Maubuisson, France.

Robert II (September 1250 – 11 July 1302) was the Count of Artois, the posthumous son and heir of Robert I and Matilda of Brabant. Nephew of the sainted King Louis IX, as a young man Robert was fond of practical jokes and in later life owned a pet wolf. He died at the Battle of the Golden Spurs. An experienced soldier, he took part in the Aragonese Crusade and attempted an invasion of Sicily in 1287. In 1288 Robert began work on a great park at Hesdin. The park contained a menagerie, aviaries, fishponds, orchards, an enclosed garden and facilities for tournaments. It also contained mechanical statues including waving monkeys draped in skins.

He defeated the Flemings in 1297 at the Battle of Furnes. He was again sent into Flanders in July 1302, where he began to ravage the countryside and attempted to take the town of Kortrijk.

He met the Flemish army at the Battle of the Golden Spurs. His infantry advanced with great success against the Flemings (mostly city militia), but he ordered their recall to allow his cavalry to make the final, victorious charge. But on the broken, marshy ground, his knights were unable to gain enough momentum to break the Flemish shieldwall, and they were knocked down and slaughtered. Robert led some of the reserves in a second charge in an attempt to reverse their fortunes, but he and his troops were cut down by the Flemish infantry.

2934. AMICIE DE COURTENAY (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandmother[2928], see Maternal Ancestry(143), Maternal Ancestry(146) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1250, in Courtenay, France, to Pierre I de Courtenay[2978] and Pétronille de Joigny[2979]. Amicie was a Countess of Artois. She died in 1275, aged about 25, in Rome, Italy. She was buried in St. Peter's Basilica, Rome, Italy.

Amicie of Courtenay (1250–1275) was a French noblewoman and a member of the Capetian House of Courtenay, a cadet line of the House of Capet.

Her father was Peter of Courtenay, Lord of Conches and Mehun (1218-1250); he fell in the Battle of Al Mansurah during the Seventh Crusade. Amicie's mother was Pétronille of Joigny, the daughter of Gaucher de Joigny.

She married Count Robert II of Artois (1250-1302), together they had three children:

- Mathilda Dártios[2894] born in 1268 in Chalon-Sur-Saone, Saone-et-Loire, Bourgogne, France; died on 27 October 1329 in Paris, Seine, Ile-de-France, France
- Philippe D’Artois[2949] born in 1269; died on 11 September 1298 in Furnes, Belgium

Robert II Dártios[2933] married Amicie de Courtenay. They had two children:

2935. HENRY VI DE LUXEMBOURG (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandfather[2929], see Maternal Ancestry(144)) was born in 1240 to Henry V Le Blond de Luxembourg[2953] and Marguerite de Bar[2954]. Henry VI was an Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire. He died on 12 June 1288, aged about 47.

Ottokar II (Czech: Přemysl Otakar II; c. 1233 – 26 August 1278), the Iron and Golden King, was a member of the Přemyslid dynasty who reigned as King of Bohemia from 1253 until 1278. He also held the titles of a Duke of Austria from 1251, Duke of Styria from 1260, as well as Duke of Carinthia and Margrave of Carniola from 1269.

With Ottokar's rule, the Přemyslids reached the peak of their power in the Holy Roman Empire. His expectations of imperial crown, however, were never fulfilled.

2938. KUNEGUNDA ROSTISLAVNA (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandmother[2932], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1240, in Kiev, Ukraine, to Mikhailovich Rostislavna[2982] and Anna Árpád[2983]. Kunegunda was a Princess of Ukraine. She died on 9 September 1285, aged about 45.

She was presumably born in Ruthenia, in the domains of her paternal grandfather Michael of Chernigov. Her grandfather was the last Grand Prince of Kiev, who was deposed not by a more powerful prince but by the Mongol Empire. Her parents were Rostislav Mikhailovich, future ruler of Belgrade and Slavonia, and his wife Anna of Hungary. After the death of her father's father, Kunigunda's family relocated to Hungary, where her mother's father, Béla IV of Hungary, made her father governor of certain Serbian-speaking regions in the Danube Valley. Her father proclaimed himself Emperor of Bulgaria in 1256 but did not stay there to defend his title.

Ottokar II Přemysl[2937], aged about 28, married Kunegunda Rostislavna, aged about 21, on 25 October 1261 in Bratislava, Bohemia. They had one son:

Rudolf I, also known as Rudolf of Habsburg; 1 May 1218 – 15 July 1291), was Count of Habsburg from about 1240 and was elected King of the Romans from 1273 until his death. Rudolf's election marked the end of the Great Interregnum in the Holy Roman Empire after the death of the Hohenstaufen emperor Frederick II in 1250. Originally a Swabian count, he was the first Habsburg to acquire the dukies of Austria and Styria in opposition to his mighty rival, the Přemyslid king Ottokar II of Bohemia, whom he defeated in the 1278 Battle on the Marchfeld. The territories remained under Habsburg rule for more than 600 years, forming the core of the Habsburg Monarchy and the present-day country of Austria.

Rudolf was the first king of the Romans of the Habsburg dynasty, and he played a vital role in raising the comital house to the rank of Imperial princes. He was also the first of a number of late medieval count-kings, so called by the historian Bernd Schneidmüller, from the rival noble houses of Habsburg, Luxembourg, and Wittelsbach, all striving after the Roman-German royal dignity, which ultimately was taken over by the Habsburgs in 1438.

2940. GERTRUDE OF HOHENBURG (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandmother[2934], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1225, in Swabia, Bavaria. Gertrude was a Countess of Habsburg. She died on 16 February 1281, aged about 55, in Vienna, Austria.

Queen Joan I of Navarre and countess of Champagne and Brie was declared to be of legal majority upon her marriage in 1284, and did homage for Champagne and Brie to her father-in-law in Paris.

Joan never visited the Kingdom of Navarre, which was ruled in her name by French governors appointed first by her father-in-law and then by her spouse in her name. The French governors were extremely unpopular in Navarre and her absence from the country was resented;[8] however, it was the French who were blamed for her absence rather than her, and the loyalty to her right to rule was not questioned; rather, it was emphasized in Navarre that it was in fact she rather than the French who was their sovereign. From afar, edicts were issued in her name, coins struck in her image, and she gave her protection to chapels and convents. She never came closer to Navarre than to Carcassonne in 1300, and her spouse was somewhat blamed for this.

Joan was much more directly active as countess of Champagne. While being a county rather than a kingdom, Champagne was much richer and more strategically important. Philip IV appointed her administrators, however, Joan visited Champagne regularly and is recorded to have participated in all duties of a ruling vassal and is not regarded to have been passive but an active independent ruler in this domain. In 1297, she raised and led an army against the Count of Bar when he rebelled against her by invading Champagne. This was explicitly in the absence of her spouse, and she personally brought the count to prison before she joined her spouse. She also personally acted in her process against Bishop Guichard of Troyes, whom she accused of having stolen funds from Champagne and her mother by fraud.
Joan died in 1305, allegedly in childbirth, though one chronicler accused her husband of having killed her. Her personal physician was the inventor Guido da Vigevano.

Philip IV (The Fair) of France[2941], aged about 16, married Jeanne I of Navarre, aged about 11, in 1284. They had one son:

John I of Brabant, also called John the Victorious (1252/1253 – 3 May 1294) was Duke of Brabant (1267–1294), Lothier and Limburg (1288–1294). During the 19th century, John I was venerated as a Belgian folk hero. Born at Leuven, he was the son of Henry III, Duke of Brabant and Aleidis of Burgundy, daughter of Hugh IV, Duke of Burgundy. He was also an older brother of Maria of Brabant, Queen consort of Philip III of France. In 1267 his older brother Henry IV, Duke of Brabant, being mentally deficient, was deposed in his favour. His greatest military victory was the Battle of Worringen 1288, by which John I came to reign over the Duchy of Limburg. He was completely outnumbered in forces but led the successful invasion into the Rhineland to defeat the confederacy. In 1288 Limburg was formally attached to Brabant.

John I was said to be a model of feudal prince: brave, adventurous; excelling in every form of active exercise, fond of display, and generous in temper. He was considered one of the most gifted princes of his time. This made him very popular in Middle Ages poetry and literature. Even today there exists an ode to him, so well known that it was a potential candidate to be the North Brabant anthem. John I delighted in tournaments and was always eager to take part in jousts. He was also famous for his many illegitimate children.

On 3 May 1294 at some marriage festivities at Bar-le-Duc (‘s Hertogenbosch), John I was mortally wounded in the arm in an encounter by Pierre de Bausner. He was buried in the church of the Minderbroeders in Brussels, but since the Protestant iconoclasm (Beeldenstorm) in 1566, nothing remains of his tomb.

2944. MARGUÉRITE DE DAMPPIERRE (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandmother[2938], see Maternal Ancestry(144) and Maternal Ancestry(147)) was born in 1253. She died in 1285, aged about 32.

Jean I de Brabant[2943] married Marguérite de Dampierre. They had two children:

Jean II de Brabant[2901] born in 1275; died in 1312
Margaretha de Brabant[2896] born on 4 October 1276 in Leuven, Belgium; died on 14 December 1311 in Genoa, Liguria, Italy

2945. EDWARD I, KING PLANTAGENET (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandfather[2939], see Maternal Ancestry(147)) was born on 18 June 1239, in Palace of Westminster, London, to Henry III Plantagenet[2988] and Éléonore de Aragón[2989]. Edward I, King was a King of England. He died (Dysentery) on 7 July 1307, aged 68, in Burgh by Sands, Scotland. He was buried in Westminster Abbey, London.

Edward I, King married twice. He was married to Éléonore de Bourgogne-Castilla[2946] and Margaret of France[2915] (his cousin, once removed).

Edward I (17/18 June 1239 – 7 July 1307), also known as Edward Longshanks and the Hammer of the Scots (Latin: Malleus Scotorum), was King of England from 1272 to 1307. The first son of Henry III, Edward was involved early in the political intrigues of his father's reign, which included an outright rebellion by the English barons. In 1259, he briefly sided with a baronial reform movement, supporting the Provisions of Oxford. After reconciliation with his father, however, he remained loyal throughout the subsequent armed conflict, known as the Second Barons' War. After the Battle of Lewes, Edward was hostage to the rebellious barons, but escaped after a few months and joined the fight against Simon de Montfort. Montfort was defeated at the Battle of Evesham in 1265, and within two years the rebellion was extinguished. With England pacified, Edward joined the Ninth Crusade to the Holy Land. The crusade accomplished little, and Edward was on his way home in 1272 when he was informed that his father had died. Making a slow return, he reached England in 1274 and was crowned at Westminster on 19 August.

He spent much of his reign reforming royal administration and common law. Through an extensive legal inquiry, Edward investigated the tenure of various feudal liberties, while the law was reformed through a series of statutes regulating criminal and property law. Increasingly, however, Edward's attention was drawn towards military affairs. After suppressing a minor rebellion in Wales in 1276–77, Edward responded to a second rebellion in 1282–83 with a full-scale war of conquest. After a successful campaign, Edward subjected Wales to English rule, built a series of castles and towns in the countryside and settled them with English people. Next, his efforts were directed towards Scotland. Initially invited to arbitrate a succession dispute, Edward claimed feudal suzerainty over the kingdom. In the war that followed, the Scots persevered, even though the English seemed victorious at several points. At the same time there were problems at home. In the mid-1290s, extensive military campaigns required high levels of taxation, and Edward met with both lay and ecclesiastical opposition. These crises were initially averted, but issues remained unsettled. When the King died in 1307, he left to his son, Edward II, an ongoing war with Scotland and many financial and political problems.

Edward I was a tall man for his era, hence the nickname "Longshanks". He was temperamental, and this, along with his height, made him an intimidating man, and he often instilled fear in his contemporaries. Nevertheless, he held the respect of his subjects for the way he embodied the medieval ideal of kingship, as a soldier, an administrator and a man of faith. Modern historians are divided on their assessment of Edward I: while some have praised him for his contribution to the law and administration, others have criticised him for his uncompromising attitude towards his nobility. Currently, Edward I is credited with many accomplishments during his reign, including restoring royal authority after the reign of Henry III, establishing Parliament as a permanent institution and thereby also a functional system for raising taxes, and reforming the law through statutes. At the same time, he is also often criticised for other actions, such as his brutal conduct towards the Scots, and issuing the Edict of Expulsion in 1290, by which the Jews were expelled from England. The Edict remained in effect for the rest of the Middle Ages, and it was over 350 years until it was formally overturned under Oliver Cromwell in 1656.

Edward I, King Plantagenet married Margaret of France.[2915]

2946. ÉLÉANORE DE BOURGOGNE-CASTILLA (Howard Charles’s twenty-three-times-great-grandmother[2940], see Maternal Ancestry(147)) was born in 1240, in Burgos, Spain, to Ferdinand III de Bourgogne-Castilla[2990] and Jeanne Dammartin[2991]. Éléanore was a Queen of England. She died on 29 November 1290, aged about 50, in Harby, Nottinghamshire, England. She was buried in Westminster Abbey, London.

Eleanor of Castile (1241 – 28 November 1290) was the first queen consort of Edward I of England, whom she married as part of a political deal to affirm English sovereignty over Gascony.

The marriage was known to be particularly close, and Eleanor travelled extensively with her husband. She was with him on the Eighth Crusade, when he was wounded at Acre, but the popular story of her saving his life by sucking out the poison has long been discredited. When she died, near Lincoln, her husband famously ordered a stone cross to be erected at each stopping-place on the journey to London, ending at Charing Cross. Eleanor was better-educated than most medieval queens, and exerted a strong cultural influence on the nation. She was a keen patron of literature, and encouraged the use of tapestries, carpets and tableware in the Spanish style, as well as innovative garden designs. She was also a successful businesswoman, endowed with her own fortune as Countess of Ponthieu.

Eleanor’s funeral took place in Westminster Abbey on 17 December 1290. Her body was placed in a grave near the high altar that had originally contained the coffin of Edward the Confessor and, more recently, that of King Henry III until his remains were removed to his new tomb in 1290. Eleanor’s body remained in this grave until the completion of her own tomb. She had probably ordered that tomb before her death. It consists of a marble chest with carved mouldings and shields (originally painted) of the arms of England, Castile, and Ponthieu. The chest is surmounted by William Torel’s superb gilt-bronze effigy, showing Eleanor in the same pose as the image on her great seal.

Edward I, King Plantagenet[2945] married Éléanore de Bourgogne-Castilla. They had one daughter:

PHILIPPE III CAPET (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandfather[2941], see Maternal Ancestry[141], Maternal Ancestry[142], Maternal Ancestry[146] and Maternal Ancestry[148]) was born on 1 May 1245, in Poissy / Yvelines, to Louis IX Capet[2951] and Marguerite de Provence[2952]. Philippe III was a King of France. He died (Dysentry) on 5 October 1285, aged 40, in Perpignan / Pyrénées-Orientales. He was buried in Perpignan / Pyrénées-Orientales. Philippe III married twice. He was married to Marie de Brabant[2948] and Isabella de Aragon[2928].

Philip III (30 April 1245 – 5 October 1285), called the Bold (French: le Hardi), was King of France from 1270 to 1285, a member of the House of Capet. Philip proved indecisive, soft in nature, and timid. The strong personalities of his parents apparently crushed him, and policies of his father dominated him. People called him "the Bold" on the basis of his abilities in combat and on horseback and not on the basis of his political or personal character. He was pious but not cultivated. He followed the suggestions of others, first of Pierre de La Broce and then of his uncle King Charles I of Naples, Sicily, and Albania.

His father, Louis IX, died in Tunis during the Eighth Crusade. Philip, who was accompanying him, came back to France to claim his throne and was anointed at Reims in 1271. Philip made numerous territorial acquisitions during his reign, the most notable being the County of Toulouse which was annexed to the Crown lands of France in 1271. Following the Sicilian Vespers, a rebellion triggered by Peter III of Aragon against Philip's uncle Charles I of Naples, Philip led an unsuccessful Aragonese Crusade in support of his uncle. Philip was forced to retreat and died from dysentry in Perpignan in 1285. He was succeeded by his son Philip the Fair.

Philippe III Capet married Isabella de Aragon[2928]. They had two children:

Charles I de Valois[2891] born on 12 March 1271 in Vincennes, Isle De France, France; died on 16 December 1325 in Nogent-Le-Roi, France
Margaret of France[2915] born in 1279 in Paris, France; died on 14 February 1318 in Marlborough Castle, England

2948. MARIE DE BRABANT (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandmother[2942], see Maternal Ancestry[146] and Maternal Ancestry[148]) was born in 1254, in Leuven, Brabant, to Henry III de Brabant[2992] and Adelaide de Bourgogne[2993]. Marie was a Queen of France. She died in 1321, aged about 67, in Monastery at Les Mureaux. She was buried in Cordeliers Convent, in Paris.

Marie of Brabant (13 May 1254 – 12 January 1322) was Queen consort of France. Born in Leuven, Brabant, she was a daughter of Henry III, Duke of Brabant, and Adelaide of Burgundy.

Marie married the widowed Philip III of France on 21 August 1274. His first wife, Isabella of Aragon, had already given birth to three surviving sons: Louis, Philip and Charles. Philip was under the strong influence of his mother, Margaret of Provence and his minion, surgeon and chamberlain (Chambellan) Pierre de La Broce. Not being French, Marie stood out at the French court. In 1276, Marie's stepson Louis died under suspicious circumstances. Marie was suspected of ordering him to be poisoned. La Brosse, who was also suspected, was imprisoned and later executed for the murder. Margaret suspected Marie of ordering the death of Louis, and Philip did seem to agree more with his mother than his wife[according to whom?].

After the death of Philip III in 1285, Marie lost some of her political influence, and dedicated her life to their three children: Louis (May 1276 – 19 May 1319), Blanche (1278 - 19 March 1305) and Margaret (died in 1318). Her stepson, Philip IV was crowned king of France on 6 January 1286 in Reims. Together with Joan I of Navarre and Blanche of Artois, she negotiated peace in 1294 between England and France with Edmund Crouchback, the younger brother of Edward I of England. Marie lived through Philip IV’s reign and she outlived her children. She died in 1321, aged 66, in the monastery at Les Mureaux, near Meulan, where she had withdrawn to in 1316. Marie was not buried in the royal necropolis of Basilica of Saint-Denis, but in the Cordeliers Convent, in Paris. Destroyed in a fire in 1580, the church was rebuilt in the following years.

Philippe III Capet[2947], aged 29, married Marie de Brabant, aged about 20, on 27 August 1274 in Vincennes, France. They had two sons:
Philip IV (The Fair) of France[2941] born in 1268 in Fontainebleau, France; died on 29 November 1314 in Fontainebleau, France

Philippe was a Seigneur de Conches, de Nonancourt, de Domfront. He died (Wounded in Battle) on 11 September 1298, aged about 29, in Furnes, Belgium. He was buried in Now-demolished church of the Couvent des Jacobins in Paris.

Philippe of Artois (1269 – 11 September 1298) was the son of Robert II of Artois, Count of Artois,[1] and Amicie de Courtenay. He was the Lord of Conches, Nonancourt, and Domfront. He married Blanche of Brittany, daughter of John II, Duke of Brittany, and had the following children:

- Margaret (1285–1311), married in 1301 Louis, Count of Évreux
- Robert III of Artois (1287–1342)
- Isabelle (1288–1344), a nun at Poissy
- Joan of Artois (1289 – aft. 1350), married Gaston I, Count of Foix, in Senlis in 1301
- Marie of Artois (1291 – 22 January 1365, Wijnendaele), Lady of Merode, married in 1309 in Paris John I, Marquis of Namur
- Catherine (1296–1368, Normandy), married John II of Ponthieu, Count of Aumale

He served under his father at the Battle of Furnes, where he was wounded. He never recovered, and died of the effects over a year later. He was buried in the now-demolished church of the Couvent des Jacobins in Paris. His premature death led to a legal battle later, when Artois was left to his sister Mahaut rather than his son Robert.

Blanche de Bretagne (1271–1327) was a daughter of John II, Duke of Brittany, and Beatrice of Dreux. Through her mother she was the granddaughter of King Henry III of England and Eleanor of Provence.

Blanche was married in Paris sometime after November 1281 to Philip of Artois, who was the son of Robert II of Artois and Amicie de Courtenay. The couple had seven children, they were:

- Margaret (1285–1311), married in 1301 Louis, Count of Évreux
- Robert III of Artois (1287–1342), married in 1318 Joan of Valois
- Isabella (1288–1344), a nun at Poissy
- Joan (1289 – aft. 1350), married in 1301 in Senlis, Gaston I, Count of Foix
- Othon (died 2 November 1291)
- Marie of Artois (1291 – 22 January 1365, Wijnendaele), Lady of Merode, married in 1309 in Paris John I, Marquis of Namur
- Catherine (1296–1368, Normandy), married John II of Ponthieu, Count of Aumale

Blanche's daughter Margaret was the mother of Philip III of Navarre who was married to Joan II of Navarre. Her sister, Marie was married to Guy IV, Count of Saint-Pol.

Blanche died on 19 March 1327 at the Chateau de Bois-de-Vincennes, and was buried in the now-demolished church of the Couvent des Jacobins in Paris.

2951. LOUIS IX CAPET (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandfather[2945], see Maternal Ancestry(148) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born on 25 April 1214 to Louis VIII Capet[2996] and Blanche de Castile[2997]. Louis IX was a Saint and King of France. He died on 25 August 1270, aged 56.

Louis IX (25 April 1214 – 25 August 1270), commonly known as Saint Louis, was King of France from 1226 until his death. Louis was crowned in Reims at the age of 12, following the death of his father Louis VIII the Lion, although his mother, Blanche of Castile, ruled the kingdom until he reached maturity. During Louis's childhood, Blanche dealt with the opposition of rebellious vassals and put an end to the Albigensian crusade which had started 20 years earlier.
As an adult, Louis IX faced recurring conflicts with some of the most powerful nobles, such as Hugh X of Lusignan and Peter of Dreux. Simultaneously, Henry III of England tried to restore his continental possessions, but was defeated at the battle of Taillebourg. His reign saw the annexation of several provinces, notably Normandy, Maine and Provence.
Louis IX was a reformer and developed French royal justice, in which the king is the supreme judge to whom anyone is able to appeal to seek the amendment of a judgment. He banned trials by ordeal, tried to prevent the private wars that were plaguing the country and introduced the presumption of innocence in criminal procedure. To enforce the correct application of this new legal system, Louis IX created provosts and bailiffs.
According to his vow made after a serious illness, and confirmed after a miraculous cure, Louis IX took an active part in the Seventh and Eighth Crusade in which he died from dysentery. He was succeeded by his son Philip III.
Louis's actions were inspired by Christian values and Catholic devotion. He decided to punish blasphemy, gambling, interest-bearing loans and prostitution, and bought presumed relics of Christ for which he built the Sainte-Chapelle. He also expanded the scope of the Inquisition and ordered the burning of Talmuds. He is the only canonized king of France, and there are consequently many places named after him.

2952. MARGUERITE DE PROVENCE (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandmother[2946], see Maternal Ancestry(148) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born in 1221 to Raimond Bérenger IV de Provence[2998] and Béatrix de Savoie[2999]. Marguerite was a Queen of France. She died in 1295, aged about 74, in Poor Clares monastery she had founded. She was buried in Basilica of St-Denis outside Paris. Her grave, beneath the altar steps, was never marked by a monument, so its location is unknown; probably for this reason, it was the only royal grave in the basilica that was not ransacked during the French Revolution, and it probably remains intact today.

Margaret was born in the spring of 1221 in Forcalquier. She was the eldest of four daughters of Ramon Berenguer IV, Count of Provence, and Beatrice of Savoy. Her younger sisters were Queen Eleanor of England, Queen Sanchia of Germany, and Queen Beatrice of Sicily. She was especially close to Eleanor, to whom she was close in age, and with whom she sustained friendly relationships until they grew old.

Louis IX Capet[2951] married Marguerite de Provence. They had two sons:
Philippe III Capet[2947] born on 1 May 1245 in Poissy / Yvelines; died on 5 October 1285 in Perpignan / Pyrénées-Orientales

Henry V the Blondell (1216 – 24 December 1281), called the Great, was the count of Arlon from 1226 to his death, lord of Ligny from 1240 to his death, count of Luxembourg and Laroche from 1247 to his death, and the count of Namur between 1256 and 1264 as Henry III. He was the son and successor of Waleran III of Limburg and Ermesinde of Luxembourg. In 1226, following the death of his father Waleran III, Henry inherited the county of Arlon.
In 1240 Henry married Margaret of Bar, [1]daughter of Henry II of Bar and Philippa of Dreux who was the great-granddaughter of King Louis VI of France. Henry's marriage to Margaret brought him Ligny-en-Barrois as her dowry, though, by a clause in the marriage contract, it remained under the feudal suzerainty of the county of Bar. In contempt of this, Henry paid homage in 1256 to Theobald II of Navarre, in his capacity as Count of Champagne. Henry's brother-in-law, Theobald II of Bar, took advantage of the conflict then raging between Frederick III of Lorraine and the bishops of Metz. Henry V was a partisan of the duke and so Theobald took the side of the bishop. Henry was captured in battle at Prény on 14 September 1266. On 8 September 1268, King Louis IX arbitrated between the two counts and Henry was freed and repossessed of Ligny, but under the suzerainty of the Barrois.

Henry inherited Luxembourg and Larochelle following the death of his mother, Ermesinde, in 1247. In 1256, Henry seized Namur while the reigning margrave, Baldwin II, was also reigning emperor in Constantinople. Baldwin relinquished his rights to Namur to Guy of Dampierre, Count of Flanders, who retook the margraviate from Henry. The two parties made peace and Guy married Henry's daughter, Isabelle.

2954. MARGUERITE DE BAR (Howard Charles's twenty-three-times-great-grandmother[2948], see Maternal Ancestry(144) and Maternal Ancestry(150)) was born in 1220, in Le Duc, Meuse, Argonne Lorraine, France. Marguerite was a Countess of Luxembourg. She died on 25 November 1275, aged about 55, in Palestine, Holy Land.

Henry V Le Blond de Luxembourg[2953] married Marguerite de Bar. They had three children:

The son of William de Ferrers, 4th Earl of Derby, and his wife Lady Agnes de Kevelioc, daughter of Hugh de Kevelioc, 3rd Earl of Chester, and his wife Lady Bertrada de Montfort, he accompanied King Henry III to France in 1230 and attended Parliament in London in the same year.

Like his father, he suffered from gout from youth and after the 1230s took little part in public affairs, travelling always in a litter. He was accidentally thrown from his litter into the water while crossing a bridge at St Neots in Huntingdonshire and, although he escaped immediate death, never recovered from the effects of the accident.

Succeeding to the title of his father in 1247, he only lived another seven years and, dying on 28 March 1254, was buried in Merevale Abbey, Warwickshire.

He was succeeded by his son Robert de Ferrers, 6th Earl of Derby, who in 1249 had been married to the King's niece and knighted. Being too young to inherit at his father's death, wardship of the heir's estates was granted to the King's eldest son, Edward I.

THOMAS I DE SAVOIE (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather[2962], see Maternal Ancestry(139) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born on 27 May 1178, in Aiguebelle, Savoy, to Humbert III de Savoie[3017] and Beatrice de Viennois[3018]. Thomas I was a Comte de Savoie, d'Aoste et de Maurienne et Seigneur de Piémont. He died on 8 March 1233, aged 54, in Moncalieri, Italy. He was buried in St Michael, Aosta, Aosta Valley, Italy.

Thomas (Tommaso I; 1178 – 1 March 1233) was Count of Savoy from 1189 to 1233. He is sometimes numbered "Thomas I" to distinguish him from his son of the same name, who governed Savoy but was not count. Thomas was born in Aiguebelle, the son of Humbert III of Savoy and Beatrice of Viennois. His birth was seen as miraculous; his monkish father had despaired of having a male heir after three wives. Count Humbert sought counsel from St. Anthelm, who blessed Humbert three times, and it was seen as a prophecy come true when Thomas was born shortly before Anthelm himself died on 26 June 1178. He was named in honour of Saint Thomas Becket.

Thomas was still a minor when his father died on 4 March 1189, and a council of regency was established, composed of his mother Beatrice, his father's cousin Boniface I of Montferrat, and the Bishop of Saint-Jean-de-Maurienne. He had reached his majority by August 1191. Thomas possessed the martial abilities, energy, and brilliance that his father lacked, and Savoy enjoyed a golden age under his leadership. Despite his youth he began the push northwest into new territories. In the same year he granted Aosta Valley the "Charte des Franchises", recognising the right to administrative and political autonomy. This right was maintained until the eve of the French Revolution. Later he conquered Vaud, Bugey, and Carignano. He supported the Hohenstaufens, and was known as "Thomas the Ghibelline" because of his career as Imperial Vicar of Lombardy.

2967. MARGUERITE DE GENEVOIS (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2963], see Maternal Ancestry(139) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born in 1180. Marguerite was a Countess of Savoy. She died on 8 April 1257, aged about 76.

Margaret of Geneva (1180?-1252), countess of Savoy, was the daughter of William I, Count of Geneva, and Beatrice de Faucigny (1160-1196).

She was supposed to become the third wife of Philip II of France. However, when her father was escorting her to France in May 1195, Thomas I of Savoy carried her off. Attracted by her youth and her beauty, Count Thomas then married her himself, claiming that Philip II was already married (the French King had married Ingeborg of Denmark in 1193 but had repudiated her soon thereafter). Margaret's father fell sick and died after the wedding, and her mother died the following year. Margaret was the mother of either 14 or 19 children.

Thomas I de Savoie[2966], aged about 18, married Marguerite de Genevois, aged about 16, in 1196. They had two children:

Thomas II de Piedmont[2926] born in 1199 in Montmélian, Savoy; died on 7 February 1259 in Chambery, Savoy

Béatrix de Savoie[2999] born in 1205; died in 1266 in Les Echelles / Savoie

2968. JAMES I THE CONQUEROR ARAGON (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather[2964], see Maternal Ancestry(141) and Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born on 1 February 1207, in Montpellier, Herault, Languedoc-Roussillon, France. James I The Conqueror was a King of Aragon. He died on 27 July 1276, aged 69, in Valencia, Spain.

James I the Conqueror ; 2 February 1208 – 27 July 1276) was King of Aragon, Count of Barcelona, and Lord of Montpellier from 1213 to 1276; King of Majorca from 1231 to 1276; and Valencia from 1238 to 1276. His long reign—the longest of any Iberian monarch—saw the expansion of the House of Aragon and House of Barcelona in three directions: Languedoc to the north, the Balearic Islands to the southeast, and Valencia to the south. By a treaty with Louis IX of France, he wrested the county of Barcelona from nominal French suzerainty and integrated it into his crown, also he renounced to expand north and take back the once Catalan territories in Oceitania and vassal counties loyal to the County of Barcelona that were lost by his father Peter II of Aragon in the Battle of Muret during the Albigensian Crusade and annexed by the Kingdom of France, so he then decided to turn south. His great part in the Reconquista was similar in Mediterranean Spain to that of his contemporary Ferdinand III of Castile in Andalusia. One of the main reasons for this formal renounce on most of the once Catalan territories in Languedoc and Occitania and any possible expansion there, we can find it in the fact that he was raised by the templars.
(crusaders), the ones who defeated his father fighting for the Pope, alongside the French, so it was almost forbidden for him to try to maintain anyhow the traditional influence of the Count of Barcelona that used to have in Occitania and mainly Languedoc.

2969. VIOLANT OF HUNGARY (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2965], see Maternal Ancestry(141) and Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1213, in Esztergom, Komarom-Esztergom, Hungary, to Andrew II (The Jerusolimitan) of Hungary[3019] and Yolande de Courtenay[3020]. She died on 12 October 1251, aged about 38, in Huesca, Aragon, Spain.

Violyant of Hungary (c. 1215 – c. 1251) was a Queen consort of Aragon and the second wife of King James I of Aragon. She is also called Jolán in Hungarian, Iolanda or Violant d’Hongria in Catalan and Yolanda or Violante de Hungria in Spanish. Violyant was born at Esztergom circa 1215, the only child of King Andrew II of Hungary and his second wife Yolanda of Courtenay. Violyant married James in 1235. James had already been married to Eleanor of Castile, but he had this marriage annulled on the basis of consanguinity in 1229. He and Eleanor had a son named Alfonso, who was considered legitimate, but who died prior to his father. James and Violyant had ten children:

Violyant of Aragon[2] (1236–1301), Queen of Castile by her marriage to Alfonso X of Castile
Constance of Aragon, Lady of Villena (1239-1269)
Peter III of Aragon (1240–1285)
James II of Majorca (1243–1311)
Ferdinand of Aragon (1245–1250)
Sancho of Aragon (1246–1251)
Isabella of Aragon (1247–1271), Queen of France by her marriage to Philip III of France
Maria of Aragon (1248–1267), nun
Sancho of Aragon (1250–1275), Archbishop of Toledo[3]

Eleanor of Aragon (born 1251, date of death unknown; died young).

James I The Conqueror Aragon[2968] married Violyant of Hungary. They had one daughter:
Isabella de Aragon[2928] born in 1248; died on 28 January 1271 in Cosenza, Calabria

2970. CHARLES I DE ANJOU (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather[2966], see Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born on 21 March 1227, in Paris, Ile-de-France, France, to Louis VIII Capet[2996] and Blanche de Castile[2997]. Charles I was a King of Sicily. He died on 7 January 1285, aged 57, in Foggia, Italy.

Charles I (21 March 1227 – 7 January 1285), known also as Charles of Anjou, was the King of Sicily by conquest from 1266,[1] though he had received it as a papal grant in 1262 and was expelled from the island in the aftermath of the Sicilian Vespers of 1282. Thereafter, he claimed the island, though his power was restricted to the peninsular possessions of the kingdom, with his capital at Naples (for this he is usually titled King of Naples after 1282, as are his successors).

Charles was the seventh child[2] and youngest son of Louis VIII of France and Blanche of Castile, and hence younger brother of Louis IX of France and Alfonso II of Toulouse. He conquered the Kingdom of Sicily from the Hohenstaufen and acquired lands in the eastern Mediterranean. However, the War of the Sicilian Vespers forced him to abandon his plans to reassemble the Latin Empire.

By marriage to Beatrice of Provence, heiress of Raymond Berengar IV of Provence, he was Count of Provence and Forcalquier from 1246. In 1247, his brother Louis IX made him Count of Anjou and Maine, as appanages of the French crown. By conquest and self-proclamation, he became King of Albania in 1272 and by purchase King of Jerusalem in 1277. By the testament of William II of Villehardouin, he inherited the Principality of Achaea in 1278. He strated the Eighth Crusade.

2971. BEATRICE DE PROVENCE (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2967], see Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1234, in Aix En Provence, Bouches-du-Rhone, Provence-Alpes-Cote d'Azur, France, to Raimond Bérenger IV de Provence[2998] and Béatrix de Savoie[2999]. Beatrice was a Queen Consort of Sicily and Naples. She died on 23 September 1267, aged about 33, in Nocera, Calabria, Italy.
Beatrice of Provence (c. 1234 – 23 September 1267), was Countess of Provence and Forcalquier since 1245, Countess consort of Anjou and Maine since 1247, and Queen consort of Sicily and Naples since 1266 until her death. She was the fourth and youngest daughter of Ramon Berenguer IV, Count of Provence and Forcalquier by his wife Beatrice, in turn daughter of Count Thomas I of Savoy and Margaret of Geneva.

Charles I de Anjou married Beatrice de Provence. They had one son:

Charles II de Naples born in 1254 in Naples, Italy; died on 5 May 1309

2972. STEVEN V ÁRPÁD OF HUNGARY (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather[2968], see Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1240, in Esztergom, Komarom-Esztergom, Hungary, to Béla IV Árpád[3031] and Maria Laskirina[3032]. Stephen V was a King of Hungary. He died on 6 August 1272, aged about 32.

2973. ERZSEBET KUMANS (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2969], see Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1240, in Cumania, Bosnia, to Kuthen Kipchak of The Kumans[3021] and Erszébet Mstislava[3022]. Erzsebet was a Queen Consort of Hungary. She died in 1290, aged about 50, in Budapest, Hungary.
IV. Her regency lasted until 1277 and saw palace revolutions and civil wars. Her upbringing of her son would cause further problems for his reign. Ladislaus favored the society of the “semi-pagan” Cumans, from whom he was descended through his mother. He wore Cuman dress as his court wear, surrounded himself with Cuman concubines and thus alienated the Hungarian nobility. His later attempts to regain Hungarian loyalty instead alienated parts of the Cumans. He was murdered in his tent by Cumans while camped in Bihar county on 10 July 1290. By that time Elizabeth herself seems to have also been deceased. There is no mention of her in the reign of his successor, Andrew III. There is a tradition that she died in the year 1290.

Steven V Árpád of Hungary married Erzsebet Kumans. They had one daughter:

Maria Árpád of Hungary born in 1258 in Budapest, Hungary; died on 25 March 1323 in Naples, Italy

2974. JEAN LE SAGE DE BOURGOGNE (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather, see Maternal Ancestry(143) and Maternal Ancestry(146)) was born in 1190, in Bourgogne, France, to Etienne III de Bourgogne and Beatrice de Châlon. Jean Le Sage was a Count of Auxonne. He died on 30 August 1267, aged about 77, in Bourgogne, France. He was buried in Abbey of Charity, Auxonne.

John (1190 – September 30, 1267), called the Old (l'Antique), was a French nobleman, the Count of Auxonne and Chalon-sur-Saône in his own right and regent in right of his son, Hugh III, Count of Burgundy. In contemporary documents, he was sometimes called "Count of Burgundy", as by King William of Germany in 1251. He was the son of Stephen III of Auxonne and Beatrice, Countess of Châlon. On June 5, 1237, he exchanged his inherited patrimony of Auxonne and Chalon with Hugh IV, Duke of Burgundy for the following territories: Salins (which was at the time the second city of the County of Burgundy), Belvoir, Vuillafans, Ornans, Montfaucon, Arlay, the castle of Clées in Vaud, Chaussin, and Orgelet. He thus became one of the most powerful nobles in the county. Although he gave charters to the towns in his territory, he also welcomed the Dominican friars as inquisitors. The possession of Salins, with its salt production, gave John the fortune necessary to extend his territories. To protect the trade routes, he built the following fortresses: Le Pin, Montmahoux, Saint-Anne, Arguel, and Nozeroy, where he normally resided. To avoid the customs imposed by the Count of Pontarlier, he bought the forests in the region around Pontarlier and Jougne, which he logged, creating new roads. He founded the towns of Châtelblanc, Chaux-Neuve, and Rochejean, the last of which contains his name.

2975. MAHAUT DE BOURGOGNE (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother, see Maternal Ancestry(143) and Maternal Ancestry(146)) was born in 1190. Mahaut was a Countess of Auxonne. She died in 1242, aged about 52.

Jean Le Sage de Bourgogne married Mahaut de Bourgogne. They had one son:

Hughes III de Bourgogne born in 1220; died in 1266

2976. ROBERT I DÁRTOIS (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather, see Maternal Ancestry(143), Maternal Ancestry(146), Maternal Ancestry(146) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born on 25 September 1216, in Paris, Île-de-France, France, to Louis VIII Capet and Blanche de Castile. Robert I was a Count of Artois. He died (Killed in battle on crusade) on 8 February 1250, aged 33, in Al Mansurah, Egypt.

Robert I (25 September 1216 – 8 February 1250), called the Good, was the first Count of Artois, the fifth (and second surviving) son of Louis VIII of France and Blanche of Castile. He received Artois as an appanage, in accordance with the will of his father (died 1226) on attaining his majority in 1237 (aged twenty-one). In 1240 Pope Gregory IX, in conflict with the Emperor Frederick II, offered to crown Robert as emperor in opposition to Frederick, but the French count refused to pretend to such a title. While participating in the Seventh Crusade, Robert died while leading a reckless attack on Al Mansurah, without the knowledge of his brother King Louis IX. He and the Templars after fording a river, charged a Mamluk outpost in which the Mamluk commander, Fakhr-ad-Din Yusuf, was killed. Emboldened by his success, Robert, the Templar knights, and a contingent of English troops charged into the town and became trapped in the narrow streets. According to Jean de Joinville, he defended himself for some time in a house there, but was at last overpowered and killed.
2977. MATILDA DE BRABANT (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2973], see Maternal Ancestry(143), Maternal Ancestry(146), Maternal Ancestry(146) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born on 14 June 1224, in Brabant, Meuse, Lorraine, France. Matilda of Brabant (14 June 1224 – 29 September 1288) was the eldest daughter of Henry II, Duke of Brabant and his first wife Marie of Hohenstaufen. On 14 June 1237, which was her 13th birthday, Matilda married her first husband Robert I of Artois. Robert was 21 years old and the fifth son of Louis VIII of France and Blanche of Castile. They had two children: Blanche of Artois (1248 – 2 May 1302). Married first Henry I of Navarre and secondly Edmund Crouchback, 1st Earl of Lancaster. Robert II, Count of Artois (1250 – 11 July 1302). On 8 February 1250, Robert I was killed while participating in the Seventh Crusade. On 16 January 1255, Matilda married her second husband Guy III, Count of Saint-Pol. He was a younger son of Hugh I, Count of Blois and Mary, Countess of Blois. Robert I Därtois[2976] married Matilda de Brabant. They had two children: Blanche House of Capet D'Artois[2987] born in 1248 in Artois, France; died on 2 May 1302 in Paris, Ile-de-France, France Robert II Därtois[2933] born in 1250 in Artois, Pas-de-Calais, France; died on 11 July 1302 in Kortrijk, Flandres, Belgium

2978. PIERRE I DE COURTENAY (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather[2974], see Maternal Ancestry(143), Maternal Ancestry(146) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1218, in Courtenay, Gâtinais, Ile-de-France, France. Pierre I was a Lord of Conches. He died (Died in the Battel of Al Mansurah on Crusade) on 8 February 1250, aged about 31, in Mansurah, Egypt. Citation: Source 96. Unreliable or estimated.
Peter of Courtenay (French: Pierre de Courtenay (c. 1218 – 1249 or 1250 in Egypt) was a French knight and a member of the Capetian House of Courtenay, a cadet line of the royal House of Capet. From 1239 until his death, he was the ruling Lord of Conches-en-Ouche and Mehun-sur-Yèvre. He was the eldest of five sons of Robert of Courtenay, Lord of Champignelles († 1239), and his wife Matilda of Mehun. From his parents he inherited the castle of Conches and Mehun. On 25 August 1248, he sailed with his cousin, King Louis IX of France, from Aigues-Mortes to Egypt to fight the Seventh Crusade, during which he died. Most historians think he died during the battle for the city of Al Mansurah on 8 February 1250. On that day, Count Robert I of Artois led a vanguard of Crusaders in a spontaneous attack on the city. The vanguard was caught in a trap set by the defending Mamluks and all attackers were killed. However, the chronicler Jean de Joinville maintains Peter of Courtenay died on an earlier date. After the conquest of the Egyptian port city of Damietta in June 1249, a large part of the crusader army camped outside the city wall, until they were ready to march to Al Mansurah in the autumn. The Sultan of Egypt offered a reward of one gold solidus for the head of each crusader. During the night, Saracens would sneak into the Crusader camp, kill sleeping Crusaders in their tents, and steal their severed heads. According to Joinville, Peter of Courtenay was the victim of one such attack. However, Joinville may be mistaken. One should consider that he wrote his chronicle decades after the fact, and that Peter de Courtenay is mentioned twice later in the chronicle, in connection with the Battle of Al Mansurah.

2979. PÉTRONILLE DE JOIGNY (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2975], see Maternal Ancestry(143), Maternal Ancestry(146) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1230, in Joigny, Yonne, Bourgogne, France, to Gauchier II de Joigny[3025] and Amicie de Montfort[3026]. She died in 1282, aged about 52. Pierre I de Courtenay[2978] married Pétronille de Joigny. They had one daughter: Amicie de Courtenay[2934] born in 1250 in Courtenay, France; died in 1275 in Rome, Italy

Wenceslaus I (Czech: Václav I. Přemyslid; c. 1205 – 23 September 1253), called One-Eyed, was King of Bohemia from 1230 to 1253.

Wenceslaus was a son of Ottokar I of Bohemia and his second wife Constance of Hungary. Under the reign of Wenceslas I of Bohemia, the royal court came to cultivate lifestyles typical of contemporary Western Europe, including the culture of jousting and tournaments and the enjoyment of courtly poetry and songs. His government is associated with the establishment of Czech statehood, an increase of Czech political influence in Europe, the rise of Czech nobility, and continued development of urban life, trade and crafts. He therefore ranks among the top five kings of Czech history.

Wenceslas, like his father and son, supported the arrival of ethnic Germans into the country. He was also the first to allow privileges to the Jews; however, they were expected to pay considerable sums of money for them.

"Good King Wenceslas" is a popular Christmas carol that tells a story of a Bohemian king going on a journey and braving harsh winter weather to give alms to a poor peasant on the Feast of Stephen (December 26, the day after Christmas). During the journey, his page is about to give up the struggle against the cold weather, but is enabled to continue by following the king's footprints, step for step, through the deep snow. The legend is based on the life of the historical Saint Wenceslaus I, Duke of Bohemia or Svatý Václav in Czech (907–935). The name Wenceslas is a Latinised version of the modern Czech language “Václav”.

2981. KUNIGUNDE HOHENSTAUFEN (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2977], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1202 to Philipp von Hohenstaufen[3027] and Irene Angelina[3028]. She died on 13 September 1248, aged about 46. She was buried in Convent of St Agnes, Bohemia.

Wenceslaus I Přemysl[2980] married Kunigunde Hohenstaufen. They had one son:

Ottokar II Přemysl[2937] born in 1233; died on 26 August 1278

2982. MIKHAILOVICH ROSTISLAVNA (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather[2978], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1225, in Kiev, Ukraine, to Vsevolodovich Mikhail[3029] and Romanovna Mariye[3030]. Mikhailovich was a Grand Duke of Kiev. He died in 1263, aged about 38.

2983. ANNA ÁRPÁD (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2979], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1227, in Budapest, Hungary, to Bela IV Árpád[3031] and Maria Laskirina[3032]. She died in 1274, aged about 47.

Mikhailovich Rostislavna[2982], aged about 18, married Anna Árpád, aged about 16, in 1243 in Budapest, Hungary. They had one daughter:

Kunegunda Rostislavna[2938] born in 1240 in Kiev, Ukraine; died on 9 September 1285

2984. ALBERT IV OF HABSBURG (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather[2980], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1188 to Rudolph II of Habsburg[3033] and Ida of Staufen[3034]. Albert IV was a Count of Habsburg. He died on 13 December 1239, aged about 51.

Albert IV (or Albert the Wise) (ca. 1188 – December 13, 1239) was Count of Habsburg in the Aargau and a progenitor of the royal House of Habsburg.

He was the son of Count Rudolph II of Habsburg and Agnes of Staufen. About 1217 Albert married Hedwig (Heilwig), daughter of Count Ulrich of Kyburg (died 1237) and Anna of Zähringen. Upon the death of his father in 1232 he divided his family's estates with his brother Rudolph III, whereby he retained the ancestral seat at Habsburg Castle. A follower of Emperor Frederick II of Hohenstaufen, he took part in the Barons' Crusade with King Theobald I of Navarre and died near Ashkelon.

Albert was the father of King Rudolph I of Germany, and a mutual ancestor of Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria and his wife Sophie, Duchess of Hohenberg[1] He is also an ancestor of Queen Elizabeth II of the United Kingdom.

2985. HEDWIG OF KYKBURG (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2981], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1196. Hedwig was a Countess of Habsburg. She is no longer living.
Albert IV of Habsburg married Hedwig of Kykborg. They had one son:

Rudolph of Habsburg born on 1 May 1218 in Limburg Castle, Sasbach, Baden; died on 15 July 1291 in Speyer, Rhineland 2986. HENRY (THE FAT) OF NAVARRE (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather, see Maternal Ancestry(146)) was born in 1239, in Troyes, Aube, Champagne-Ardenne, France. Henry (The Fat) was a King of Navarre. He died in 1274, aged about 35.

Recognized as heir presumptive during his brother's reign, Henry succeeded to the thrones of the Kingdom of Navarre and County of Champagne upon Theobald II's death in December 1270. Henry I's proclamation at Pamplona, however, did not take place until the following year, 1 March 1271, and his coronation was delayed until May 1273. His first act was the swear to uphold the Fueros of Navarre and then go to perform homage to Philip III of France for Champagne.

Henry came to the throne at the height of an economic boom in Navarre that was not happening elsewhere in Iberia at as great a rate. But by the Treaty of Paris (1259), the English had been ceded rights in Gascony that effectively cut off Navarrese access to the ocean (since France, Navarre's ally, was at odds with England). Henry allowed the Pamplonesse burg of Navarreria to disentangle itself from the union of San Cernin and San Nicolás, effected in 1266. He also granted privileges to the towns of Estella, Los Arcos, and Viana, fostering urban growth. His relations with the nobility were, on the whole, friendly, though he was prepared to maintain the peace of his realm at nearly any cost.

Henry initially sought to recover territory lost to Castile by assisting the revolt of King Alfonso X of Castile's brother Philip in 1270. He eventually declined, preferring to establish an alliance with Castile through the marriage of his son Theobald to Alfonso X's daughter Violant in September 1272. This failed with the death of the young Theobald after he fell from a battlement at the castle of Estella in 1273.

2987. BLANCHE HOUSE OF CAPET D'ARTOIS (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother, see Maternal Ancestry(146)) was born in 1248, in Artois, France, to Robert I Dártois and Matilda de Brabant. Blanche was a Regent of Navarre. She died on 2 May 1302, aged about 53, in Paris, Ile-de-France, France. She was buried in Monoressea Convent, Aldgate, London, England.

Henry (The Fat) of Navarre, aged about 30, married Blanche House of Capet D'Artois, aged about 21, in 1269. They had one daughter:

Jeanne I of Navarre born on 14 January 1273 in Bar-sur-Seine, Champagne, France; died on 2 April 1305 in Chateau de Vincennes, France 2988. KING HENRY III PLANTAGENET (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather, see Maternal Ancestry(147) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born on 1 October 1207, in Winchester, England, to John Plantagenet and Isabella Angoulême. Henry III was a King of England and Ireland. He died on 16 November 1272, aged 65, in Palace of Westminster, London. He was buried in Westminster Abbey, London.

Henry III (1 October 1207 – 16 November 1272), also known as Henry of Winchester, was King of England, Lord of Ireland and Duke of Aquitaine from 1216 until his death.[1] The son of King John and Isabella of Angoulême, Henry assumed the throne when he was only nine in the middle of the First Barons' War. Cardinal Guala declared the war against the rebel barons to be a religious crusade and Henry's forces, led by William Marshal, defeated the rebels at the battles of Lincoln and Sandwich in 1217. Henry promised to abide by the Great Charter of 1225, which limited royal power and protected the rights of the major barons. His early rule was dominated first by Hubert de Burgh and then Peter des Roches, who re-established royal authority after the war. In 1230 the King attempted to reconquer the provinces of France that had once belonged to his father, but the invasion was a debacle. A revolt led by William Marshal's son, Richard, broke out in 1232, ending in a peace settlement negotiated by the Church.

Following the revolt, Henry ruled England personally, rather than governing through senior ministers. He travelled less than previous monarchs, investing heavily in a handful of his favourite palaces and castles. He married Eleanor of Provence, with whom he had five children. Henry was known for his piety, holding lavish religious ceremonies and giving generously to charities; the King was particularly devoted to the figure of Edward the Confessor, whom he adopted as his patron saint. He extracted huge sums of money from the Jews in England, ultimately crippling their ability to do business, and as attitudes towards the Jews hardened, he introduced the Statute of Jewry, attempting to segregate the community. In a fresh attempt to reclaim his family's lands in France, he invaded Poitou in 1242, leading to the disastrous Battle of Taillebourg. After this, Henry relied on diplomacy, cultivating an alliance with Holy Roman Emperor Frederick II. Henry supported his brother Richard in his bid to become King of the Romans in 1256, but was unable to place his own son Edmund on the throne of Sicily, despite investing large amounts of money. He planned to go on crusade to the Levant, but was prevented from doing so by rebellions in Gascony.

By 1258, Henry's rule was increasingly unpopular, the result of the failure of his expensive foreign policies and the notoriety of his Poitevin half-brothers, the Lusignans, as well as the role of his local officials in collecting taxes and debts. A coalition of his barons, initially probably backed by Eleanor, seized power in a coup d'état and expelled the Poitevins from England, reforming the royal government through a process called the Provisions of Oxford. Henry and the baronial government enacted a peace with France in 1259, under which Henry gave up his rights to his other lands in France in return for King Louis IX of France recognising him as the rightful ruler of Gascony. The baronial regime collapsed but Henry was unable to reform a stable government and instability across England continued.

In 1263 one of the more radical barons, Simon de Montfort, seized power, resulting in the Second Barons' War. Henry persuaded Louis to support his cause and mobilised an army. The Battle of Lewes occurred in 1264, where Henry was defeated and taken prisoner. Henry's eldest son, Edward, escaped from captivity to defeat de Montfort at the Battle of Evesham the following year and freed his father. Henry initially enacted a harsh revenge on the remaining rebels, but was persuaded by the Church to mollify his policies through the Dictum of Kenilworth. Reconstruction was slow and Henry had to acquiesce to various measures, including further suppression of the Jews, to maintain baronial and popular support. Henry died in 1272, leaving Edward as his successor. He was buried in Westminster Abbey, which he had rebuilt in the second half of his reign, and was moved to his current tomb in 1290. Some miracles were declared after his death but he was not canonised.

2989. ELÉONORE DE ARAGÓN (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2985], see Maternal Ancestry(147) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1223, in Aix-en-Provence, Provence-Alpes-Côte d'Azur, France, to Raimond Bérenger IV de Provence[2998] and Béatrix de Savoie[2999]. Eléonore was a Queen of England. She died on 24 June 1291, aged about 67, in Amesbury, Wiltshire, England, Great Britain. She was buried in Abbey of St. Mary, Amesbury, Wiltshire, England, United Kingdom.

England. She remained in England as queen dowager, and raised several of her grandchildren—Edward's son Henry and daughter Eleanor, and Beatrice's son John. When her grandson Henry died in her care in 1274, Eleanor went into mourning and gave orders for his heart to be buried at the priory at Guildford which she founded in his memory. In 1275 Eleanor's two remaining daughters died Margaret 26 February and Beatrice 24 March.

She retired to a convent; however, she remained in contact with her son, King Edward, and her sister, Queen Margaret of France.

Eleanor died on 24/25 June 1291 in Amesbury, eight miles north of Salisbury, England. She was buried on 11 September 1291 in the Abbey of St Mary and St Melor, Amesbury on 9 December. The exact site of her grave at the abbey is unknown making her the only English queen without a marked grave. Her heart was taken to London where it was buried at the Franciscan priory.

Henry III Plantagenet[2988] married Éléonore de Aragón. They had two children:

Edward I, King Plantagenet[2945] born on 18 June 1239 in Palace of Westminster, London; died on 7 July 1307 in Burgh by Sands, Scotland

2990. FERDINAND III DE BOURGOGNE-CASTILLA (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather[2986], see Maternal Ancestry(147)) was born on 5 August 1201, in Monastery of Valparaíso, Province of Zamora, to Alfonso IX de Castille[3037] and Berengaria Alfonsez[3038]. Ferdinand III was a Saint and King of Castile. He died on 30 May 1252, aged 50. He was buried in Cathedral of Seville, Spain.

Ferdinand III (1198/1201 – 30 May 1252), called the Saint (el Santo), was King of Castile from 1217 and King of Leon from 1230 as well as King of Galicia from 1231. He was the son of Alfonso IX of León and Berenguela of Castile. Through his second marriage he was also Count of Aumale. Ferdinand III was one of the most successful kings of Castile, securing not only the permanent union of the crowns of Castile and Leon, but also masterminding the most expansive campaign of Reconquista yet.

By military and diplomatic efforts, Ferdinand greatly expanded the dominions of Castile into southern Spain, annexing many of the great old cities of al-Andalus, including the old Andalusian capitals of Córdoba and Seville, and establishing the boundaries of the Castilian state for the next two centuries.

Ferdinand was canonized in 1671 by Pope Clement X and, in Spanish, he is known as Fernando el Santo, San Fernando or San Fernando Rey. Places such as San Fernando, Pampanga, and the San Fernando de Dilao Church in Paco, Manila in the Philippines, and in California, San Fernando City and the San Fernando Valley, were named for him and placed under his patronage.

Ferdinand III had started out as a contested king of Castile. By the time of his death in 1252, Ferdinand III had delivered to his son and heir, Alfonso X, a massively expanded kingdom. The boundaries of the new Castilian state established by Ferdinand III would remain nearly unchanged until the late 15th century. His biographer, Sister María del Carmen Fernández de Castro Cabeza, A.C.J., asserts that, on his death bed, Ferdinand said to his son "you will be rich in land and in many good vassals, more than any other king in Christendom."

Ferdinand was buried in the Cathedral of Seville by his son, Alfonso X. His tomb is inscribed in four languages: Arabic, Hebrew, Latin, and an early version of Castilian. He was canonized as St. Ferdinand by Pope Clement X in 1671. Today Saint Fernando can still be seen in the Cathedral of Seville, for he rests enclosed in a gold and crystal casket worthy of the king. His golden crown still encircles his head as he reclines beneath the statue of the Virgin of the Kings. Several places named San Fernando were founded across the Spanish Empire in his honor.

Joan of Dammartin (French: Jeanne de Dammartin; c. 1220 – 16 March 1279) was Queen consort of Castile and León (1252), suo jure Countess of Ponthieu (1251–1279) and Aumale (1237–1279). Her daughter, the English queen Eleanor of Castile, was her successor in Ponthieu. Her son and co-ruler in Aumale, Ferdinand II, Count of Aumale, predeceased her, so she was succeeded by her grandson John I, Count of Aumale, deceased at the Battle of Courtrai, 11 July 1302.

Ferdinand III de Bourgogne-Castilla[2990] married Jeanne Dammartin. They had one daughter:
Éléanore de Bourgogne-Castilla[2946] born in 1240 in Burgos, Spain; died on 29 November 1290 in Harby, Nottinghamshire, England

2992. HENRY III DE BRABANT (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather[2988], see Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1231, in Louvain, Brabant, France, to Henry II de Brabant[3039] and Marie de Swabia[3040]. Henry III was a Duke of Brabant. He died on 28 February 1261, aged about 29, in Louvain, Brabant, France.

Henry III of Brabant (c. 1230 – February 28, 1261, Leuven) was Duke of Brabant between 1248 and his death. He was the son of Henry II of Brabant and Marie of Hohenstaufen. The disputed territory of Lothier, the former Duchy of Lower Lorraine, was assigned to him by the German King Alfonso X of Castile. Alfonso also appointed him Imperial Vicar to advance his claims on the Holy Roman Empire.

In 1251, he married Adelaide of Burgundy (c. 1233 – October 23, 1273), daughter of Hugh IV, Duke of Burgundy and Yolande de Dreux, by whom he had four children:

Henry IV, Duke of Brabant (c. 1251 – aft. 1272) Mentally handicapped, and made to abdicate in favor of his brother John on 24 May 1267.

John I, Duke of Brabant (1253–1294) Married first to Marguerite of France, daughter of King Louis IX of France (Saint Louis) and his wife Margaret of Provence, and later to Margaret of Flanders, daughter of Guy, Count of Flanders and his first wife Mathilda of Béthune.

Godfrey of Brabant, Lord of Aarschot (d. July 11, 1302, Kortrijk), killed at the Battle of the Golden Spurs, married 1277 Jeanne Isabeau de Vierzon (d. aft. 1296)

Maria of Brabant (1256, Leuven – January 12, 1321, Murel), married at Vincennes on August 27, 1274 to King Philip III of France.

He also had two illegitimate sons:

John Lyngwood (+1289)
Gilles, ancestor of the van der Balch family.

Composed several pieces of music, among them "Amors m'est u cuer entree" and "Se kascuns del monde savoi".

2993. ADELAIDE DE BOURGOGNE (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2989], see Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1233. She died in 1273, aged about 40.

Adelaide of Burgundy (c. 1233 – 23 October 1273) was a daughter of Hugh IV, Duke of Burgundy, by his first wife Yolande of Dreux. She was a member of the House of Burgundy. Adelaide's brother was Robert II, Duke of Burgundy, he succeeded their father upon his death in 1270. Adelaide's eldest brother was Odo, Count of Nevers, but he died in 1266, therefore he never inherited the duchy. Her paternal grandparents were Odo III, Duke of Burgundy, and Alice of Vergy. Her maternal grandparents were Robert III of Dreux and Aénor of Saint-Valéry.

In 1251, Adelaide married Henry III, Duke of Brabant (c. 1230 – 28 February 1261, Leuven), he was the son of Henry II, Duke of Brabant, and Marie of Hohenstaufen. The couple had four children, all of whom lived to adulthood,

Henry IV, Duke of Brabant (c. 1231 – after 1272)

John I, Duke of Brabant (1253–1294)

Godfrey of Brabant, Lord of Aarschot (died 11 July 1302, Kortrijk), killed at the Battle of the Golden Spurs, married in 1277 Jeanne Isabeau de Vierzon (died after 1296)

Maria of Brabant (1256, Leuven – 12 January 1321, Murel), married at Vincennes on 27 August 1274 to King Philip III of France.

Adelaide's husband died in 1261, and Adelaide died in 1273, aged forty years. The Château of Val-Duchesse was a priory for women founded in 1262 by Adelaide of Burgundy. The Duchess gave the name to the place Val Duchesse or Hertoginnedal (both meaning Valley of the Duchess). According to the legend she was inspired by Thomas Aquinas who is said to have been a guest at Val Duchesse. It was the first priory for women in the Low Countries that followed the rule of Saint Dominic and was generously donated by Adelaide and other noble ladies.
Henry III de Brabant[2992] married Adelaide de Bourgogne. They had one daughter:
Marie de Brabant[2948] born in 1254 in Leuven, Brabant; died in 1321 in Monastery at Les Mureaux

2994. JEAN II DE BRETAGNE (Howard Charles's twenty-four-times-great-grandfather[2990], see Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born on 4 January 1239 to Jean I de Bretagne[3041] and Blanche de Navarre[3042]. Jean II was a Comte de Richmont (1268), de Bretagne (1286-1305); Duc de Bretagne (1297-1305). He died (Crushed to death in an accident during the celebrations of a papal coronation) on 18 November 1305, aged 66, in Lyon, France. He was buried in Carmelite Convent, Ploërmel.

John II (Breton: Yann, French: Jean; 1239 – 18 November 1305) reigned as Duke of Brittany from 1268 until his death, and was also Earl of Richmond in the Peerage of England. He took part in two crusades prior to his accession to the ducal throne. As a duke, John was involved in the conflicts between the kings of France and England. He was crushed to death in an accident during the celebrations of a papal coronation.

From 1294 until 1304, John assisted the King of France in his campaign against Count Guy of Flanders, taking part in the decisive Battle of Mons-en-Pévèle. Following King Philip's victory, in 1305, John travelled to Lyon to attend the coronation of Pope Clement V. John was leading the Pope's horse through the crowd during the celebrations. So many spectators had piled atop the walls that one of them crumbled and collapsed on top of the Duke. He died four days later, on 18 November. His body was placed in a lead coffin and sent down the Loire. He was buried on 16 December in the Carmelite convent he had founded in Ploërmel.

Louis VIII the Lion (5 September 1187 – 8 November 1226) was King of France from 1223 to 1226. He also claimed the title King of England from 1216 to 1217. Louis VIII was born in Paris, the son of King Philip II of France and Isabelle of Hainault, from whom he inherited the County of Artois.

While Louis VIII only briefly reigned as king of France, he was an active leader in his years as crown prince. During the First Barons' War of 1215-17 against King John of England, his military prowess earned him the epithet the Lion. After his victory at the Battle of Roche-au-Moine in 1214, he invaded southern England and was proclaimed "King of England" by rebellious barons in London on the 2 June 1216. He was never crowned, however, and renounced his claim after being excommunicated and repelled.[1][2][3][4] In 1217, Louis started the conquest of Guyenne, leaving only a small region around Bordeaux to Henry III of England.

Louis's short reign was marked by an intervention using royal forces into the Albigensian Crusade in southern France that decisively moved the conflict towards a conclusion. He died in 1226 and was succeeded by his son Louis IX.

2997. BLANCHE DE CASTILE (Howard Charles’s twenty-four-times-great-grandmother[2993], see Maternal Ancestry(142), Maternal Ancestry(143) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born on 4 March 1188, in Palencia, Castille and Leon, Spain, to Alfonso VIII de Castile[3045] and Eleanor Plantagenet[3046]. Ramon Berenguer IV or V (1198 – 19 August 1245), Count of Provence and Forcalquier, was the son of Alfonso II of Provence and Garsenda de Sabran, heiress of Forcalquier. He was the first Count of Provence to live in the county in more than one hundred years. On 5 June 1219, Ramon married Beatrix of Savoy, daughter of Thomas, Count of Savoy. She was a shrewd and politically astute woman, whose beauty was likened by Matthew Paris to that of a second Niobe. The wedding also provided the 14-year-old Ramon with a powerful father-in-law to aid him in establishing his authority and protecting his interests. Ramon Berenguer IV died in Aix-en-Provence. At least two planhs (Occitan funeral laments) of uncertain authorship (one possibly by Aimeric de Peguilhan and one falsely attributed to Rigaut de Berbezilh) were written in his honour. Giovanni Villani in his Nuova Cronica had this to say about Raymond: Count Raymond was a lord of gentle lineage, and kin to them of the house of Aragon, and to the family of the count of Toulouse, By inheritance Provence, this side of the Rhone, was his; a wise and courteous lord was he, and of noble state and virtuous, and in his time did honourable deeds, and to his court came all gentle persons of Provence and of France and of Catalonia, by reason of his courtesy and noble estate, and he made many Provençal coblas and canzoneti of great worth.

Beatrice of Savoy (v. 1198 – v. 1267)[1] was the daughter of Thomas I of Savoy and Margaret of Geneva. She was Countess consort of Provence by her marriage to Ramon Berenguer IV, Count of Provence. Her paternal grandparents were Humbert III, Count of Savoy, and Beatrice of Viennois. Her maternal grandparents were William I, Count of Geneva and Beatrice de Faucigny. Beatrice of Savoy’s mother, Margaret was betrothed to Philip II of France. While Margaret was travelling to France for her wedding, she was captured by Beatrice’s father, Thomas. He took her back to Savoy and married her himself. Thomas’ excuse was that Philip II was already married, which was true. Beatrice was the tenth of fourteen children born to her parents. Her siblings included: Amadeus IV, Count of Savoy; Thomas II of Piedmont; Peter II, Count of Savoy; Philip I, Count of Savoy; Boniface of Canterbury; Avita the Countess of Devon; and Margherita of Savoy wife of Hartmann I of Kyburg.

Beatrice betrothed on 5 June 1219 to Ramon Berenguer IV, Count of Provence; they married in December 1220. She was a shrewd and politically astute woman, whose beauty was likened to that of a second Niobe by Matthew Paris. Ramon and Beatrice of Savoy had four daughters, who all lived to adulthood, and married kings. Their only son, Raymond died in early infancy.

Raimond Bérenger IV de Provence[2998], aged about 20, married Béatrix de Savoie, aged about 13, on 5 June 1219. They had three daughters:

John FitzGilbert the Marshal of the Horses (c. 1105 – 1165) was a minor Anglo-Norman nobleman during the reign of King Stephen, and fought in the 12th century civil war on the side of Empress Matilda. Since at least 1130 and probably earlier, he had been the royal marshal to King Henry I. When Henry died, John FitzGilbert swore for Stephen and was granted the castles of Marlborough and Ludgershall, Wiltshire during this time. Along with Hamstead Marshal, this gave him control of the valley of the River Kennet in Wiltshire. Around 1139, John changed sides and swore for the Empress Matilda. In September 1141, Matilda fled the siege of Winchester and took refuge in the Marshal's castle at Ludgershall. While covering her retreat from Winchester, John Marshal was forced to take refuge at Wherwell Abbey. The attackers set fire to the building, and John lost an eye to dripping lead from the melting roof.

In 1152, John had a celebrated confrontation with King Stephen, who had besieged him at Newbury Castle. After John had broken an agreement to surrender, Stephen threatened to kill his son, whom John had given as a hostage. John refused, saying he could make more sons, but Stephen apparently took pity on the young boy and did not kill him. The boy grew up to be William Marshal, 1st Earl of Pembroke, a legendary figure in medieval lore, and one of the most powerful men in England.

The office of Lord Marshal, which originally related to the keeping of the King's horses, and later, the head of his household troops, was won as a hereditary title by John, and was passed to his eldest son, and later claimed by William. John also had a daughter, Margaret Marshal, who married Ralph de Somery, son of John de Somery and Hawise de Paynell.

John was the son of Gilbert, Royal Serjeant and Marshal to Henry I, and his wife Margaret. After his father died in 1129 John inherited the title of the king's marshal. John married Aline Pipard whose father Walter Pipard had been a friend of John's father. John arranged an annulment of his marriage to Aline Pipard in order to marry Sibyl of Salisbury, the sister of Patrick of Salisbury, who had been a local rival of his, and a supporter of King Stephen, up to that point. John had two sons by Aline - Gilbert (d. 1166) and Walter (d. bef.1165). Walter predeceased his father and Gilbert died shortly after inheriting his father's lands.

John's eldest son by Sibyl of Salisbury, also called John Marshal (1145–1194), inherited the title of Marshal, which he held until his death. The title was then granted by King Richard the Lionheart to his second son by Sybilla, William (1147–1219), who made the name and title famous. Though he had started out as a younger son without inheritance, by the time he inherited the title his reputation as a soldier and statesman was unmatched across Western Europe. John Marshal had four sons in total by his second wife. As well as John and William, there was Henry (1150–1206), who went on to become Bishop of Exeter, and Ancel, who served as a knight in the household of his kinsman, Rotrou, Count of Perche. There were also two daughters, Sybilla and Margaret.

3010. Sir John de Port (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandfather[3008], see Maternal Ancestry(15)) was born on 10 June 1117, in Portchester, Basing, Hampshire, England. John was a Knight Templar, Baron, Lord of Basing, Sheriff of Hampshire. He died on 29 September 1168, aged 51, in Portchester, Basing, Hampshire, England.

3011. Maude Fitzjohn (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3009], see Maternal Ancestry(15)) was born in 1127, in St-Jean-le-Thomas, Manche, Normandy, France. She died in 1149, aged about 22, in Basing, Hampshire, England.

John de Port[3010], aged about 21, married Maude Fitzjohn, aged about 11, in 1138 in Bramber, Sussex, England. They had one daughter:

Alice Deport[2962] born in 1144 in Pembroke, Pembrokeshire, Wales; died in 1180

3012. Hugh de Plaiz (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandfather[3010], see Maternal Ancestry(103)) was born in 1095, in Weeting, Thetford, Norfolk, England, to Ralph de Plaiz[3055] and Helewisa de Plaiz[3056]. He died in 1147, aged about 52, in Feltwell, Thetford, Norfolk, England.

Ralph du Pleiss[2963] born in 1125 in Barnham, Suffolk, England; died in 1177

3013. William II de Ferrers (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandfather[3011], see Maternal Ancestry(54), Maternal Ancestry(105), Maternal Ancestry(107) and Maternal Ancestry(109)) was born in 1168, in Ferrers, Derbyshire, England, to William Robert de Ferrers[3057] and Sibilla de Braose[3058]. He died on 22 September 1247, aged about 79, in Ferrers, Derbyshire, England.

William Marshal, 1st Earl of Pembroke (1146 or 1147 – 14 May 1219), also called William the Marshal (Norman French: Williame li Mareschal, French: Guillaume le Maréchal), was an Anglo-Norman soldier and statesman. He served five English kings – Henry II, his sons the "Young King" Henry, Richard I, John, and John's son Henry III.

Knighted in 1166, he spent his younger years as a knight errant and a successful tournament competitor; Stephen Langton eulogized him as the "best knight that ever lived."[3] In 1189, he became the de facto Earl of Pembroke through his marriage to Isabel de Clare, though the title of earl would not be officially granted until 1199 during the second creation of the Pembroke Earldom. In 1216, he was appointed protector for the nine-year-old Henry III, and regent of the kingdom.

Before him, his father's family held a hereditary title of Marshal to the king, which by his father's time had become recognized as a chief or master Marshalcy, involving management over other Marshals and functionaries. William became known as 'the Marshal', although by his time much of the function was delegated to more specialized representatives (as happened with other functions in the King's household). Because he was an Earl, and also known as the Marshal, the term “Earl Marshal” was commonly used and this later became an established hereditary title in the English Peerage. All Kings of England, Great Britain and the United Kingdom since James VI and I have been cognatic descendants of William Marshal through his great-great-grandson Robert the Bruce.

Marshal's health finally failed him early in 1219. In March 1219 he realised that he was dying, so he summoned his eldest son, also William, and his household knights, and left the Tower of London for his estate at Caversham in Berkshire, near Reading, where he called a meeting of the barons, Henry III, the Papal legate Pandulf Verraccio, the royal justiciar (Hubert de Burgh), and Peter des Roches (Bishop of Winchester and the young King's guardian). William rejected the Bishop's claim to the regency and entrusted the regency to the care of the papal legate; he apparently did not trust the Bishop or any of the other magnates that he had gathered to this meeting. Fulfilling the vow he had made while on crusade, he was invested into the order of the Knights Templar on his deathbed. He died on 14 May 1219 at Caversham, and was buried in the Temple Church in London, where his tomb can still be seen.

3016. ISABEL DE CLARE (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3014], see Maternal Ancestry(54), Maternal Ancestry(105), Maternal Ancestry(107) and Maternal Ancestry(109)) was born in 1172, in Pembroke, Pembrokeshire, Wales, to Richard Strongbow de Clare[3059] and Aoife Macmurrough[3060]. Isabel was 4th Countess Of Pembroke. She died on 9 March 1220, aged about 47, in Pembroke, Pembrokeshire, Wales. William Marshal Sir[3015], aged about 42, married Isabel de Clare, aged about 17, in 1189 in London, Middlesex, England. They had one daughter:

Sybil Marshal[2965] born in 1209 in Pembroke, Pembrokeshire, Wales; died on 27 April 1245 in Ashbourne, Derbyshire, England 3017. HUMBERT III DE SAVOIE (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandfather[3015], see Maternal Ancestry(139) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born in 1136 to Amédèe III de Savoie[3061] and Matilda D'Albon[3062]. Humbert III was a Count of Savoy. He died in 1189, aged about 53. Citation: Source 96. Unreliable or estimated.

Umberto III (1136, Avigliana, Piedmont – 4 March 1188, Chambéry, Savoy), surnamed the Blessed, was Count of Savoy from 1148 to 1188. His parents were Amadeus III of Savoy and Mathilde d'Albon the daughter of Guigues III of Albon. He ceded rights and benefits to monasteries and played a decisive role in the organization of Hautecombe Abbey. It is said that he would rather have been monk than a sovereign. On the death of his third wife he retired to Hautecombe, but then changed his mind and, by his fourth wife finally had son, Thomas. He sided with the Guelph party of Pope Alexander III against the Ghibelline Emperor Frederick Barbarossa. The result was an invasion of his states twice: in 1174 Susa was set on fire, and in 1187 Henry VI banished him from the empire and wrested away most of his domains, of which he was left only with the valleys of Susa and Aosta. He died at Chambéry in 1189. He was the first prince buried at Hautecombe. His memorial day is March 4.

3018. BEATRICE DE VIENNOIS (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3016], see Maternal Ancestry(139) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born in 1160, in Vienne, France. She died in 1230, aged about 70, in Champagne-et-Fontaine, Aquitaine, France. Citation: Source 96. Unreliable or estimated.

Beatrice was born in 1160 in Vienne, France, the second child of Géraud I of Mâcon and Maurette de Salins. She was descended from the House of Mâcon and had seven siblings. After the death of Humbert III, Count of Savoy's third wife, Clementia of Zähringen, in 1175, Humbert was inconsolable and refused to remarry; however, he had no male heir. His advisers persuaded him to wed Beatrice the following year.[1] Beatrice gave birth to Thomas, Count of Savoy in 1178. Beatrice died in 1230 in Champagne-et-Fontaine, Aquitaine, France.

Humbert III de Savoie[3017] married Beatrice de Viennois. They had one son:

Thomas I de Savoie[2966] born on 27 May 1178 in Aiguebelle, Savoy; died on 8 March 1233 in Moncalieri, Italy

3019. ANDREW II (THE JEROSOLIMITAN) OF HUNGARY (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandfather[3017], see Maternal Ancestry(141) and Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1177 to Bela III Árpád[3063] and Agnes de Chatillon[3064]. He died in 1236, aged about 59. Citation: Source 96. Unreliable or estimated.

Andrew II (Hungarian: II. András, Croatian: Andrija II., Slovak: Ondrej II., Ukrainian: Aniopií II; c. 1177 – 21 September 1235), also known as Andrew of Jerusalem, was King of Hungary and Croatia between 1205 and 1235. He ruled the Principality of Halych from 1188 until 1189/1190, and again between 1208/1209 and 1210. He was the younger son of Béla III of Hungary, who entrusted him with the administration of the newly conquered Principality of Halych in 1188. Andrew's rule was unpopular, and the boyars expelled him. Béla III willed property and money to Andrew, obliging him to lead a crusade to the Holy Land. Instead, Andrew forced his elder brother, King Emeric of Hungary, to cede Croatia and Dalmatia as an appanage to him in 1197. The following year, Andrew occupied Hum. Andrew's first wife, Gertrude of Merania, was murdered in 1213, because her blatant favoritism towards her German kinsmen and courtiers stirred up discontent among the native lords. The veneration of their daughter, Elizabeth of Hungary, was confirmed by the Holy See during Andrew's lifetime. After Andrew's... death, his sons, Béla and Coloman, accused his third wife, Beatrice d'Este, of adultery and never considered her son, Stephen, to be a legitimate son of Andrew.

3020. YOLANDE DE COURTENAY (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3018], see Maternal Ancestry(141) and Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1198 to Pierre II de Courtenay[3065] and Yolanda of Flanders[3066]. Yolande was a Queen of Hungary. She died in 1233, aged about 35. She was buried in Igriş Abbey of the White Monks.

Yolanda de Courtenay (c. 1200 – June 1233), Queen of Hungary[1] was the second wife of King Andrew II of Hungary. Yolanda was the daughter of Count Peter II of Courtenay and his second wife, Yolanda of Flanders, the sister of Baldwin I and Henry I, the Emperors of Constantinople. Her marriage with King Andrew II, whose first wife, Gertrude had been murdered by conspirators on 24 September 1213, was arranged by her uncle, the Emperor Henry I. Their marriage was celebrated in February 1215 in Székesfehérvár and John, Archbishop of Esztergom crowned her queen consort. However, Bishop Robert of Veszprém sent a complaint to Pope Innocent III, because the coronation of the queens consort in Hungary had been traditionally the privilege of his see. The Pope sent a legate to Hungary in order to investigate the complaint and confirmed the privilege of the See of Veszprém.

Following her uncle's death on 11 July 1216, her husband was planning to acquire the imperial crown for himself, but the barons of the Latin Empire proclaimed her father emperor, instead. Yolanda maintained good relations with her husband's children from his first marriage. Her husband survived her. She was buried in the Igriş Abbey of the White Monks.

Andrew II (The Jerosolimitan) of Hungary[3019] married Yolande de Courtenay. They had one daughter:

Violant of Hungary[2969] born in 1213 in Esztergom, Komarom-Esztergom, Hungary; died on 12 October 1251 in Huesca, Aragon, Spain

3021. KUTHEN KIPCHAK OF THE KUMANS (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandfather[3019], see Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1200, in Bács-Kiskun, Cumania, Hungary. Kuthen was a Chieftain of the Kumans. He died in 1239, aged about 39, in Budapest, Hungary.

The Cumans were a Turkic, nomadic people comprising the western branch of the Cuman-Kipchak confederation. After the Mongol invasion (1237), many sought asylum in Hungary, as many Cumans had settled in Hungary and Bulgaria before the invasion. Related to the Pecheneg, they inhabited a shifting area north of the Black Sea and along the Volga River known as Cumania, where the Cuman-Kipchaks meddled in the politics of the Caucasus and the Khwarezm Empire. Many eventually settled to the west of the Black Sea, influencing the politics of Kievan Rus', the Galicia–Volhynia Principality, the Golden Horde Khanate, the Second Bulgarian Empire, Kingdom of Serbia, the Kingdom of Hungary, Moldavia, the Kingdom of Georgia, the Byzantine Empire, the Empire of Nicaea, the Latin Empire and Wallachia.

The Cumans also had a pre-eminent role in the Fourth Crusade and in the creation of the Second Bulgarian Empire. Cuman and Kipchak tribes joined politically to create the Cuman-Kipchak confederation. The Cuman language is attested in some medieval documents and is the best-known of the early Turkic languages. The Codex Cumanicus was a linguistic manual that was written to help Catholic missionaries communicate with the Cuman people. The Cumans were fierce and formidable nomadic warriors of the Eurasian steppe who exerted an enduring impact on the medieval Balkans. They were numerous, culturally sophisticated and militarily powerful.

The basic instrument of Cuman political success was military force, which dominated each of the warring Balkan factions. Groups of the Cumans settled and mingled with the local population in regions of the Balkans, and Cuman settlers founded three successive Bulgarian dynasties (Asenids, Terterids, and Shishmanids) and the Wallachian dynasty (Basarabids); however, in the cases of the Basarab and Asenid dynasties, medieval documents refer to them as Vlach (Romanian) dynasties. They played an active role in the Byzantine Empire, the Kingdom of Hungary, the Second Bulgarian Empire and Kingdom of Serbia, with Cuman immigrants being integrated into each country's elite.

Stephen (or Etienne) III (died 1241) was count of Auxonne. He was from the house of Ivrea, son of Stephen II, count of Auxonne (died after 1173) and Judith of Lorraine (c. 1140 – 1173). His father Stephen II of Auxonne was son of William III, count of Mâcon and his wife Poncette/Alice, lady of Traves. His mother Judith was daughter of Matthias I, Duke of Lorraine and Bertha Hohenstaufen (daughter of Frederick II, Duke of Swabia). Stephen III married firstly (c.1186) to Beatrix, countess of Châlon (daughter of Guillaume, count of Chalon & Beatrix a daughter of Frederick baronessa emperor of the Holy Roman Empire) but they divorced 1197/1200. He married secondly (before 1212) to Agnes of Dreux (1195–1258), daughter of Robert II, Count of Dreux by his second wife Yolande de Coucy.

BEATRICE DE CHÂLON (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3022], see Maternal Ancestry(143) and Maternal Ancestry(146)) was born in 1174, in Chalon Sur Saone, Saone Et Loire, Bourgogne, France. Beatrice was a Countess of Auxonne. She died on 7 April 1227, aged about 52, in Labbaye De Citeaux, Ferte Sur Grosne, Saone Et Loire, France.

Etienne III de Bourgogne[3023] married Beatrice de Châlon. They had one son:

Jean Le Sage de Bourgogne[2974] born in 1190 in Bourgogne, France; died on 30 August 1267 in Bourgogne, France

GAUCHIER II DE JOIGNY (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandfather[3023], see Maternal Ancestry(143), Maternal Ancestry(146) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1161, in Joigny, Yonne, Bourgogne, France. He died in 1237, aged about 76.

AMICIE DE MONTFORT (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3024], see Maternal Ancestry(143), Maternal Ancestry(146) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1213, in Normandy, France, to Simon IV de Montfort[3069] and Alice de Montmorency[3070]. She died on 20 February 1253, aged about 39, in Monastère des Dominicaines, Montargis, Loiret, Centre, France. She was buried in Monastère des Dominicaines, Montargis, Loiret, Centre, France.

Gauchier II de Joigny[3025] married Amicie de Montfort. They had one daughter:

Pétronille de Joigny[2979] born in 1230 in Joigny, Yonne, Bourgogne, France; died in 1282

PHILIPP VON HOHENSTAUFEN (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandfather[3025], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1177 to Frederich I (Barbarossa) von Hohenstaufen[3071] and Béatrice de Bourgogne[3072]. Philipp was a King of Germany. He died (Assassinated) on 21 June 1208, aged about 30.

Philip of Swabia (February/March 1177 – 21 June 1208) was a prince of the House of Hohenstaufen and King of Germany from 1198 to 1208. In the long-time struggle for the German throne upon the death of Emperor Henry VI between the Hohenstaufen and Welf dynasties, he was the first German king to be assassinated. Philip was preparing to crush the last flicker of the Welf rebellion in Brunswick-Lüneburg, when he proceeded to Bamberg, in order to participate as a guest at the wedding of his niece Countess Beatrice II of Burgundy with Duke Otto of Merania on 21 June 1208. After the ceremony, Philip retired in his rooms, where he was assaulted and murdered by the Bavarian count palatine Otto VIII. The pregnant queen Irene Angelina fled to Hohenstaufen Castle where she miscarried and died shortly afterwards. Otto of Wittelsbach escaped the Hohenstaufen henchmen. The motives for the murder have not been conclusively established. Allegedly the Wittelsbach scion, already known for his unstable character, had fallen into a rage when he learned of the dissolution of his betrothal to Gertrude of Silesia by her father, the Piast duke Henry I the Bearded. Duke Henry was apparently informed of the Wittelsbach's cruel tendencies and in an act of concern for his young daughter decided to terminate the marriage agreement. Otto proceeded to blame Philip for another spurned marriage alliance (the first being to one of Philip’s own daughter, Beatrice or Kunigunde, who was betrothed to Wenceslaus I of Bohemia in 1207) and swore revenge on the German King, culminating in the murder at Bamberg. An alleged conspiracy by the Andechs dukes of Merania, King Philip II of France and Duke Henry of Brabant in favour of King Otto could never be proved.

3028. IRENE ANGELINA (Howard Charles’s twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3026], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1181. She died on 27 August 1208, aged about 27.

Philipp von Hohenstaufen[3027] married Irene Angelina. They had one daughter:

Kunigunde Hohenstaufen[2981] born in 1202; died on 13 September 1248

3029. VSEVOLODOVICH MIKHAIL (Howard Charles’s twenty-five-times-great-grandfather[3027], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1155, in Kiev, Ukraine, to Vsevolod III of Kiev[3073] and Vsevolod Anastazja[3074]. Vsevolodovich was a Grand Duke of Kiev. He died on 20 September 1246, aged about 91.

3030. ROMANOVNA MARIYE (Howard Charles’s twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3028], see Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1194, in Galich, Stanislav, Ukraine. Romanovna was a Princess of Galich. She is no longer living.

Vsevolodovich Mikhail[3029] married Romanovna Mariye. They had one son:

Béla IV (1206 – 3 May 1270) was King of Hungary and Croatia between 1235 and 1270, and Duke of Styria from 1254 to 1258. Being the oldest son of King Andrew II, he was crowned upon the initiative of a group of influential noblemen in his father's lifetime in 1214. His father, who strongly opposed Béla's coronation, refused to give him a province to rule until 1220. In this year, Béla was appointed Duke of Slavonia, also with jurisdiction in Croatia and Dalmatia. Around the same time, Béla married Maria, a daughter of Theodore I Laskaris, Emperor of Nicea. From 1226, he governed Transylvania with the title Duke. He supported Christian missions among the pagan Cumans who dwelled in the plains to the east of his province. Some Cuman chiefstains acknowledged his suzerainty and he adopted the title of King of Cumania in 1233. King Andrew died on 21 September 1235 and Béla succeeded him. He attempted to restore royal authority, which had diminished under his father. For this purpose, he revised his predecessors' land grants and reclaimed former royal estates, causing discontent among the noblemen and the prelates.

The Mongols invaded Hungary and annihilated Béla's army in the Battle of Mohi on 11 April 1241. He escaped from the battlefield, but a Mongol detachment chased him from town to town as far as Trogir on the coast of the Adriatic Sea. Although he survived the invasion, the Mongols devastated the country before their unexpected withdrawal in March 1242. Béla introduced radical reforms in order to prepare his kingdom for a second Mongol invasion. He allowed the barons and the prelates to erect stone fortresses and to set up their private armed forces. He promoted the development of fortified towns. During his reign, thousands of colonists arrived from the Holy Roman Empire, Poland and other neighboring regions to settle in the depopulated lands. Béla's efforts to rebuild his devastated country won him the epithet of "second founder of the state" (Hungarian: második honalapító).

He set up a defensive alliance against the Mongols, which included Daniil Romanovich, Prince of Halych, Boleslaw the Chaste, Duke of Cracow and other Ruthenian and Polish princes. His allies supported him in occupying the Duchy of Styria in 1254, but it was lost to King Ottokar II of Bohemia six years later. During Béla's reign, a wide buffer zone—which included Bosnia, Barancs (Braničevo, Serbia) and other newly conquered regions—was established along the southern frontier of Hungary in the 1250s. Béla's relationship with his eldest son and heir, Stephen became tense in the early 1260s, because the elderly king favored his daughter, Anna and his youngest child, Béla, Duke of Slavonia. He was forced to cede the territories of the Kingdom of Hungary east of the river Danube to Stephen, which caused a civil war lasting until 1266. Nevertheless, Béla's family was famed for his piety: he died as a Franciscan tertiary, and the veneration of his three saintly daughters—Kunigunda, Yolanda, and Margaret—was confirmed by the Holy See.

3032. MARIA LASKIRINA (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3030], see Maternal Ancestry(142) and Maternal Ancestry(145)) was born in 1206, in Nicaea, Bursa, Turkey, to Theodoros I Laskirina[3077] and Anna Komnene[3078]. She died in 1270, aged about 64, in Esztergom, K-Eszt, Hungary.

She was a younger sister of Irene Lascarina, first Empress consort of John III Doukas Vatatzes. Theodore married his eldest daughter to his designated heir in 1212. Theodore was widowed in the same year and proceeded to marriages with Philippa of Armenia and Marie de Courtenay. However John was never displaced in succession. As a younger daughter, the marriage of Maria was not intended to add a potential husband in the line of succession to the throne. Instead it secured a marital alliance with the Kingdom of Hungary.

In 1218, Maria was married to prince Béla of Hungary. Bride and groom were about twelve-years-old. Her husband was the eldest son of Andrew II of Hungary and Gertrude of Merania.

Andrew II died on 26 October 1235. The crown prince succeeded him as Béla IV and Maria became queen. Béla reigned for thirty-five years and died on 3 May 1270. Maria survived him by about two months.

Bela IV Árpád[3031] married Maria Laskirina. They had two children:

Anna Árpád[2983] born in 1227 in Budapest, Hungary; died in 1274
Steven V Árpád of Hungary[2972] born in 1240 in Esztergom, Komarom-Esztergom, Hungary; died on 6 August 1272

John (24 December 1166 – 19 October 1216), also known as John Lackland (Norman French: Johan sans Terre),[1] was King of England from 6 April 1199 until his death in 1216. John lost the Duchy of Normandy to King Philip II of France, which resulted in the collapse of most of the Angevin Empire and contributed to the subsequent growth in power of the Capetian dynasty during the 13th century. The baronial revolt at the end of John's reign led to the sealing of Magna Carta, a document sometimes considered to be an early step in the evolution of the constitution of the United Kingdom.

John, the youngest of five sons of King Henry II of England and Eleanor of Aquitaine, was at first not expected to inherit significant lands. Following the failed rebellion of his elder brothers between 1173 and 1174, however, John became Henry's favourite child. He was appointed the Lord of Ireland in 1177 and given lands in England and on the continent. John's elder brothers William, Henry and Geoffrey died young; by the time Richard I became king in 1189, John was a potential heir to the throne. John unsuccessfully attempted a rebellion against Richard's royal administrators whilst his brother was participating in the Third Crusade. Despite this, after Richard died in 1199, John was proclaimed King of England, and came to an agreement with Philip II of France to recognise John's possession of the continental Angevin lands at the peace treaty of Le Goulet in 1200.

When war with France broke out again in 1202, John achieved early victories, but shortages of military resources and his treatment of Norman, Breton and Anjou nobles resulted in the collapse of his empire in northern France in 1204. John spent much of the next decade attempting to regain these lands, raising huge revenues, reforming his armed forces and rebuilding continental alliances. John's judicial reforms had a lasting impact on the English common law system, as well as providing an additional source of revenue. An argument with Pope Innocent III led to John's excommunication in 1209, a dispute finally settled by the king in 1213. John's attempt to defeat Philip in 1214 failed due to the French victory over John's allies at the battle of Bouvines. When he returned to England, John faced a rebellion by many of his barons, who were unhappy with his fiscal policies and his treatment of many of England's most powerful nobles.

Although both John and the barons agreed to the Magna Carta peace treaty in 1215, neither side complied with its conditions. Civil war broke out shortly afterwards, with the barons aided by Louis of France. It soon descended into a stalemate. John died of dysentery contracted whilst on campaign in eastern England during late 1216; supporters of his son Henry III went on to achieve victory over Louis and the rebel barons the following year.

Contemporary chroniclers were mostly critical of John's performance as king, and his reign has since been the subject of significant debate and periodic revision by historians from the 16th century onwards. Historian Jim Bradbury has summarised the current historical opinion of John's positive qualities, observing that John is today usually considered a "hard-working administrator, an able man, an able general".[2] Nonetheless, modern historians agree that he also had many faults as king, including what historian Ralph Turner describes as "distasteful, even dangerous personality traits", such as pettiness, spitefulness and cruelty.[3] These negative qualities provided extensive material for fiction writers in the Victorian era, and John remains a recurring character within Western popular culture, primarily as a villain in films and stories depicting the Robin Hood legends.

3036. ISABELLA ANGOULÊME (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3034], see Maternal Ancestry(147) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1187, in Angoulême, Charente, Poitou-Charentes, France, to Aymer de Taillefer[3081] and Alice de Courtenay[3082]. Isabella was a Queen of England. She died on 31 March 1246, aged about 58, in Fontevraud, France.

Isabella of Angoulême c. 1188 – 4 June 1246) was queen consort of England as the second wife of King John from 1200 until John's death in 1216. She was also suo jure Countess of Angoulême from 1202 until 1246. She had five children by the king, including his heir, later Henry III. In 1220, Isabella married Hugh X of Lusignan, Count of La Marche, by whom she had another nine children.

Some of her contemporaries, as well as later writers, claim that Isabella formed a conspiracy against King Louis IX of France in 1241, after being publicly snubbed by his mother, Blanche of Castile for whom she had a deep-seated hatred. In 1244, after the plot had failed, Isabella was accused of attempting to poison the king. To avoid arrest, she sought refuge in Fontevraud Abbey where she died two years later, but none of this can be confirmed.

John Plantagenet[3035], aged 33, married Isabella Angoulême, aged about 13, on 24 August 1200. They had one son:

Alfonso IX (15 August 1171 – 23 or 24 September 1230) was king of León and Galicia from the death of his father Ferdinand II in 1188 until his own death. According to Ibn Khaldun (1332–1406), he is said to have been called the Baboso or Slobberer because he was subject to fits of rage during which he foamed at the mouth. He took steps towards modernizing and democratizing his dominion and founded the University of Salamanca in 1212. In 1188 he summoned the first parliament reflecting full Genealogy representation of the citizenry ever seen in Western Europe, the Cortes of León. He took a part in the work of the Reconquest, conquering the area of Extremadura (including the cities of Cáceres and Badajoz).

Berengaria (Castilian: Berenguela; 1179 or 1180 – 8 November 1246) was queen regnant of Castile in 1217 and queen consort of León from 1197 to 1204. As the eldest child and heir presumptive of Alfonso VIII of Castile, she was a sought after bride, and was engaged to Conrad, the son of Holy Roman Emperor Frederick I Barbarossa. After his death, she married her cousin, Alfonso IX of León, to secure the peace between him and her father. She had five children with him before their marriage was voided by Pope Innocent III. When her father died, she served as regent for her younger brother Henry I in Castile until she succeeded him on his untimely death. Within months, she turned Castile over to her son, Ferdinand III, concerned that as a woman she would not be able to lead Castile's forces. However, she remained one of his closest advisors, guiding policy, negotiating, and ruling on his behalf for the rest of her life. She was responsible for the re-unification of Castile and León under her son's authority, and supported his efforts in the Reconquista. She was a patron of religious institutions and supported the writing of a history of the two countries.

Alfonso IX de Castile[3037] married Berengaria Alfonsez. They had one son:
Ferdinand III de Bourgogne-Castilla[2990] born on 5 August 1201 in Monastery of Valparaíso, Province of Zamora; died on 30 May 1252

3039. HENRY II DE BRABANT (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandfather[3037], see Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1207. He died on 1 February 1248, aged about 40.

Maria of Hohenstaufen was born in Arezzo, Tuscany, Italy on 3 April 1201. Her paternal grandparents were Frederick I, Holy Roman Emperor and Beatrice I, Countess of Burgundy, and her mother's parents were Byzantine Emperor Isaac II Angelos and his first wife Herina. Emperor Frederick II was her first cousin. In 1208, at the age of seven, Maria was left an orphan by the unexpected deaths of her parents. On 21 June, her father was murdered by Otto of Wittelsbach, and two months later her mother died after giving birth to a daughter, who did not live beyond early infancy. Maria had three surviving sisters.

Henry II de Brabant[3039] married Marie de Swabia. They had one son:

John I (Breton: Yann, French: Jean; c. 1217/18 – 8 October 1286), known as John the Red due to the colour of his beard, was Duke of Brittany from 1237 to his death and 2nd Earl of Richmond in 1268. John was the eldest of three children born to Duchess Alix and her husband and jure uxoris co-ruler, Duke Peter I. He became duke upon his mother's death in 1221. His father, who had reigned as duke due to his marriage to Alix, ruled as regent until John reached adulthood. He experienced a number of conflicts with the Bishop of Nantes and the Breton clergy. In 1240, he issued an edict expelling Jews from the duchy and cancelling all debts to them. He joined Louis IX of France in the Eighth Crusade in 1270, and survived the plague that killed the king. The duchy of Brittany experienced a century of peace, beginning with John I and ending with Duke John III's reign in 1341.

3042. BLANCHE DE NAVARRE (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3040], see Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1225. Blanche was a Duchess of Brittany. Blanche of Navarre (1226 – 12 August 1283), also known as Blanche of Champagne, was the daughter of Theobald the Troubador, King of Navarre and Count of Champagne, and his second wife Agnes of Beaujeu. She was a member of the House of Champagne. By her marriage to John I, Duke of Brittany she became Duchess consort of Brittany. Blanche was firstly betrothed to Otto III, Count of Burgundy; the marriage contract was signed on 16 January 1236. However, the engagement was broken. Blanche was instead married in 1236 to John I, Duke of Brittany: the main reason he married Blanche was so he could get Navarre, and Theobald did make John heir to the throne. However, John renounced the claim after Margaret of Bourbon bore Theobald two sons. John and Blanche had eight children. In 1270 Blanche founded the Abbey de la Joie near Hennebont; she was later buried there. She died in 1283; her husband outlived her by three years. Blanche outlived six of her eight children.

Jean I de Bretagne[3041], aged about 18, married Blanche de Navarre, aged about 10, on 16 January 1236 in Rennes, Ille Et Vilaine, France. They had one son:

Philip II, called Philip Augustus (French: Philippe Auguste; 21 August 1165 – 14 July 1223) was King of France from 1180 to 1223, a member of the House of Capet. Philip's predecessors had been known as kings of the Franks, but from 1190 onward, Philip became the first French monarch to style himself king of France. The son of King Louis VII and his third wife, Adèle of Champagne, he was originally nicknamed Dieudonné "God-given" because he was the first son of Louis VII, born late in his father's life.[1] Philip was given the nickname "Augustus" by the chronicler Rigord for having extended the Crown lands of France so remarkably. After a twelve-year struggle with the Plantagenet dynasty in the Anglo-French War of 1202–14, Philip broke up the large Angevin Empire presided over by the crown of England and defeated a coalition of his rivals (German, Flemish and English) at the Battle of Bouvines in 1214. This victory would have a lasting impact on western European politics: the authority of the French king became unchallenged, while the English King John was forced by his barons to sign Magna Carta and deal with a rebellion against him aided by Philip, the First Barons' War. The military actions surrounding the Albigensian Crusade helped prepare the expansion of France southward. Philip did not participate directly in these actions, but he allowed his vassals and knights to help carry it out. Philip transformed France from a small feudal state into the most prosperous and powerful country in Europe. He checked the power of the nobles and helped the towns to free themselves from seigniorial authority, granting privileges and liberties to the emergent bourgeoisie. He built a great wall around Paris ("the Wall of Philip II Augustus"), re-organized the French government and brought financial stability to his country.

Alfonso VIII (11 November 1155[2] – 5 October 1214), called the Noble (El Noble) or the one of the Navas (el de las Navas), was the King of Castile from 1158 to his death and King of Toledo. He is most remembered for his part in the Reconquista and the downfall of the Almohad Caliphate. After having suffered a great defeat with his own army at Alarcos against the Almohads in 1195, he led the coalition of Christian princes and foreign crusaders who broke the power of the Almohads in the Battle of the Navas de Tolosa in 1212, an event which marked the arrival of a tide of Christian supremacy on the Iberian peninsula. His reign saw the domination of Castile over León and, by his alliance with Aragon, he drew those two spheres of Christian Iberia into close connection.

ELEANOR PLANTAGENET (Howard Charles's twenty-five-times-great-grandmother[3044], see Maternal Ancestry(147) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born on 13 October 1162, in Domfront, Normandy, to Henry II Plantagenet[3091] and Eleanor de Acquitaine[3092]. Eleanor of England (Spanish: Leonor; 13 October 1162[1] – 31 October 1214), or Eleanor Plantaganet, was Queen of Castile and Toledo as wife of Alfonso VIII of Castile. She was the sixth child and second daughter of Henry II, King of England and Eleanor of Aquitaine. Eleanor was born in the castle at Domfront, Normandy on 13 October 1162, as the second daughter of Henry II, King of England and his wife Eleanor, Duchess of Aquitaine, and was baptised by Henry of Marcy. Her half-siblings were Marie and Alix of France, and her full siblings were Henry the Young, Duchess Matilda, King Richard, Duke Geoffrey, Queen Joan and King John.

When Alfonso died, Eleanor was reportedly so devastated with grief that she was unable to preside over the burial. Their eldest daughter Berengaria instead performed these honours. Eleanor then took sick and died only twenty-eight days after her husband, and was buried at Abbey of Santa Maria la Real de Las Huelgas.

Alfonso VIII de Castile[3045] married Eleanor Plantagenet. They had two daughters:

"The noble family of De Playz were," says Blomfield, in his History of Norfolk, "soon after the Conquest, enfeoffed of several lordships by the Earl Warren." Ralph de Playz witnesses a charter of William, second Earl 1091-97, granting the church of Coningsburgh, in South Yorkshire, to the monastery that his father had founded at Lewes. "Sir Hugh was Lord in the time of King Stephen," and was succeeded by a second Ralph. "The family of De Playz had a considerable estate in Otringhythe; and in the reign of King Henry II. there was a church concerning the patronage of which there was a great controversy between Sir Ralph de Playz and others, which was adjusted by the Bishop of Norwich, when it was allowed to be the right of the said Ralph, and his heirs for ever, to present to the same."—Ibid. Among the adherents of the rebellious barons under King John we find another Sir Hugh, who held seven knight's fees at Iford and Werpesburn in Sussex, and was twice married. From his first wife, Beatrix de Say, widow of Hugh de Nevill, he was divorced; but the second, Philippa, one of the co-heiresses of Richard de Montfichet, brought him a great estate in Essex, where the manor of Playz, in Becontree Hundred, and the hamlet of Plaistow, near Stratford, are named from him. His great-grandson Giles was summoned to a great council held by Edward 1. in 1293, followed him to Gascony in the ensuing year, and was a baron by writ in 1297. Sir Richard, the grandson of Giles, was, in 1334, found heir to Stansted Montfichet on the death of John de Lancaster; and the next heir, Sir John, called the fourth baron (though neither he nor his predecessor were ever summoned to parliament) was the father of Margery, the heiress of the house, who carried the barony to the Howards. Her granddaughter Elizabeth transferred it to the De Veres, and it fell into abeyance between the three sisters and co-heirs of the fourteenth Earl of Oxford. According to an old deed (quoted by Blomfield) the last Sir John de Playz had a brother named Richard, living at Fettwell in Norfolk, but of him or his posterity we hear nothing more. A family of this name was seated at Halnaby in North Yorkshire, and afterwards (through a Surtees heiress) at Dinsdale in the county of Durham, continuing till the early part of the last century. William de Playz is mentioned in Yorkshire as early as 1189-90 (Rot. Pip.).

Amadeus III of Savoy (1095 – April 1148) was Count of Savoy and Maurienne from 1103 until his death. He was also known as a Crusader. He was born in Carignano, Piedmont, the son of Humbert II of Savoy and Gisela of Burgundy, the daughter of William I of Burgundy. He succeeded as count of Savoy upon the death of his father. Amadeus had a tendency to exaggerate his titles, and also claimed to be Duke of Lombardy, Duke of Burgundy, Duke of Chablais, and vicar of the Holy Roman Empire, the latter of which had been given to his father by Henry IV, Holy Roman Emperor. He helped restore the Abbey of St. Maurice of Agaune, in which the former kings of Burgundy had been crowned, and of which he himself was abbot until 1147. He also founded the Abbey of St. Silpicius in Bugey, Tamiè Abbey in the Bauges, and Hautecombe Abbey on the Lac du Bourget.

In 1128, Amadeus extended his realm, known as the "Old Chablais", by adding to it the region extending from the Arve to the Dranse d’Abondance, which came to be called the "New Chablais" with its capital at Saint-Maurice. Despite his marriage to Mahaut, he still fought against his brother-in-law Guy, who was killed at the Battle of Montmelian. Following this, King Louis VI of France, married to Amadeus' sister Adélaïde de Maurienne, attempted to confiscate Savoy. Amadeus was saved by the intercession of Peter the Hermit, and by his promise to participate in Louis' planned crusade.

In 1147, he accompanied his nephew Louis VII of France and his wife Eleanor of Aquitaine on the Second Crusade. He financed his expedition with help from a loan from the Abbey of St. Maurice. In his retinue were many barons from Savoy, including the lords of Faucigny, Seye, Farnèse, Montbelliard, Menthon-Saint-Bernard, Sions, and Châtillon. Amadeus travelled south through Italy to Brindisi, where he crossed over to Durazzo, and marched east along the Via Egnatia to meet Louis at Constantinople in late 1147. After crossing into Anatolia, Amadeus, who was leading the vanguard, became separated from Louis near Laodicea, and Louis' forces were almost entirely destroyed. Marching on to Adalia, Louis, Amadeus, and other barons decided to continue to Antioch by ship. On the journey, Amadeus fell ill on Cyprus, and died at Nicosia in April 1148. He was buried in the Church of St. Croix in Nicosia. In Savoy, his son Humbert III succeeded him, under the regency of bishop Amadeus of Lausanne.

3063. BELA III ÁRPÁD (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandfather[3062], see Maternal Ancestry(141), Maternal Ancestry(142) and Maternal Ancestry(174)) was born in 1147, in Esztergom, Komárom-Esztergom, Magyarország, Hungar, to Géza II Árpád[3109] and Jevfrosina Mstislavna Ungern of Kiev[3110]. Bela III was a King of Hungary. He died on 16 April 1196, aged about 48. He was buried in Szekesfehervar, Fejer, Hungary.

Béla III (Hungarian: III. Béla, Croatian: Bela III, Slovak: Belo III; c. 1148 – 23 April 1196) was King of Hungary and Croatia between 1172 and 1196. He was the second son of King Géza II and Géza's wife, Euphrosyne of Kiev. Around 1161, Euphrosyne granted Béla a duchy, which included Croatia, central Dalmatia and possibly Sirmium. In accordance with a peace treaty between his elder brother, Stephen III, who succeeded their father in 1162, and the Byzantine Emperor Manuel I Komnenos, Béla moved to Constantinople in 1163. He was renamed to Alexios, and the emperor granted him the newly created senior court title of despotes. He was betrothed to the Emperor's daughter, Maria. Béla's patrimony caused armed conflicts between the Byzantine Empire and the Kingdom of Hungary between 1164 and 1167, because Stephen III attempted to hinder the Byzantines from taking control of Croatia, Dalmatia and Sirmium. Béla-Alexios, who was designated as Emperor Manuel's heir in 1165, took part in three Byzantine campaigns against Hungary. His betrothal to the emperor's daughter was dissolved after her brother, Alexios, was born in 1169. The emperor deprived Béla of his high title, granting him the inferior rank of kaisar.

Stephen III died on 4 March 1172, and Béla decided to return to Hungary. Before his departure, he pledged that he would never make war against the Byzantine Empire. Although the Hungarian prelates and lords unanimously proclaimed Béla king, Lucas, Archbishop of Esztergom opposed his coronation because of Béla's alleged simony. Finally, the Archbishop of Kalocsa crowned him king on 18 January 1173, with Pope Alexander III's approval. Béla fought with his younger brother, Géza, whom he held in captivity for more than a decade.

Taking advantage of the internal conflicts in the Byzantine Empire after Emperor Manuel's death, Béla reoccupied Croatia, Dalmatia and Sirmium between 1180 and 1181. He occupied the Principality of Halych in 1188, but it was lost within two years. Béla promoted the use of written records during his reign. Hungarian chronicles from the 14th century even state that he was responsible for the establishment of the Royal Chancery. The royal palace built in Esztergом during his reign was the first example of Gothic architecture in AGNES DE CHATILLON (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandmother[3063], see Maternal Ancestry(141), Maternal Ancestry(142) and Maternal Ancestry(174)) was born in 1153, in Versailles, France, to Renaud de Chatillon[3112] and Constance de Hauteville[3113]. Agnes was a Queen of Hungary. She died in 1183, aged about 30. She was buried in Székesfehérvár, Fejer, Hungary.

Agnes of Antioch(1154 – c. 1184) was a Queen of Hungary from 1172 until 1184 as the first wife of Béla III.

The accidental discovery of her intact tomb during the Hungarian Revolution of 1848 has provided an opportunity for patriotic demonstrations. She was the only 12th century Hungarian queen whose remains were studied by scientists, and her appearance was reconstructed.

She was the daughter of Raynald of Châtillon, and Constance, Princess of Antioch.

The exact date of her birth is uncertain. It is assumed that she was born soon after the secret marriage of her parents, which took place before May 1153. The most common belief in historiography was that Agnes was born in 1154.[5] At the baptism she probably received the name of Agnes.

The new couple went on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem where they made a donation for the Knights Hospitaller. In the summer, after the death of King Stephen III of Hungary (4 March 1172), her husband ascended the throne as King Béla III, and they moved to Hungary. Anna was crowned queen alongside her husband at Cathedral Basilica of Saint Stephen in Székesfehérvár on 13 January 1173.

Is attributed to Anna the spread of French cultural patterns in the Kingdom of Hungary. The Queen's activities where also connects with the presence in Hungary from Burgundy of the first Cistercian monks. Anna could keep in touch with Burgundian Cistercians through ancestral linkages. The first Cistercian monastery in Hungary, founded in 1182, was in fact closely associated with three Cistercian abbeys located near Pontigny and the surrounding estates belonged to the Donzy family, from which Anna descended.

Bela III Árpád[3063], aged about 20, married Agnes de Chatillon, aged about 14, in 1167 in Constantinople, Turkey. They had two sons:

András (Andrew) II Árpád[3075] born in 1175 in Esztergom, Komárom-Esztergom, Magyarország, Hungary; died on 25 September 1235 in Transylvania - Magyarország (present Romania), Hungary

3069. SIMON IV DE MONTFORT (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandfather[3068], see Maternal Ancestry(143), Maternal Ancestry(146) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1170, in l'Armaury Castle, Montfort, Ile-de-France, Normandie, France, to Simon III de Montfort[3118] and Amicie de Beaumont[3119]. Simon IV became known as 'The Crusader'. The Crusader was 4th Earl of Leicester. He died (Died at the Siege of Toulouse) on 25 June 1218, aged about 47, in Belagerung, Toulouse, France. He was buried in Montfort l'Amaury. A tombstone in the South Transept of the Cathedral is inscribed "of Simon de Montfort".

Simon remained on his estates in France before taking the cross once more, this time against Christian dissidence. He participated in the initial campaign of the Albigensian Crusade in 1209, and after the fall of Carcassonne, was elected leader of the crusade and viscount of the confiscated territories of the Raymond-Roger Trencavel family. Simon was rewarded with the territory conquered from Raymond VI of Toulouse, which in theory made him the most important landowner in Occitania. He became feared for his ruthlessness. In 1210 he burned 140 Cathars in the village of Minerve who refused to recant - though he spared those who did. In another widely reported incident, prior to the sack of the village of Lastours, he brought prisoners from the nearby village of Bram and had their eyes gouged out and their ears, noses and lips cut off. One prisoner, left with a single good eye, led them into the village as a warning.

Simon's part in the crusade had the full backing of his feudal superior, the King of France, Philip Augustus. But historian Alistaire Horne, in his book Seven Ages of Paris, states that Philip "turned a blind eye to Simon de Montfort's crusade...of which he disapproved, but readily accepted the spoils to his exchequer". Following the latter's success in winning Normandy from John Lackland of England, he was approached by Innocent III to lead the crusade but turned this down. He was heavily committed to defend his gains against John and against the emerging alliance among England, the Empire and Flanders.

ALICE DE MONTMORENCY (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandmother[3069], see Maternal Ancestry(143), Maternal Ancestry(146) and Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1176, in Seine et, Oise, Picardie, France. She died on 24 February 1220, aged about 43, in Leicester, Leicestershire, England.

Simon IV de Montfort[3069] married Alice de Montmorency. They had one daughter:

3071. FREDERICH I (BARBAROSSA) VON HOHENSTAUFEN (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandfather[3070], see Maternal Ancestry(172)) was born in 1122. Frederich I (Barbarossa) became known as 'Barbarossa'. Barbarossa was an Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire. He died in 1190, aged about 68.

Frederich I (German: Friedrich; 1122 – 10 June 1190), also known as Frederick Barbarossa, was the Holy Roman Emperor from 1155 until his death. He was elected King of Germany at Frankfurt on 4 March 1152 and crowned in Aachen on 9 March 1152. He became King of Italy in 1155 and was crowned Roman Emperor by Pope Adrian IV on 18 June 1155. Two years later, the term sacrum ("holy") first appeared in a document in connection with his Empire.[1] He was later formally crowned King of Burgundy, at Arles on 30 June 1178. He got the name Barbarossa from the northern Italian cities he attempted to rule: Barbarossa means "red beard" in Italian;[2] in German, he was known as Kaiser Rotbart, which has the same meaning.

Before his imperial election, Frederich was by inheritance Duke of Swabia (1147–1152, as Frederich III). He was the son of Duke Frederick II of the Hohenstaufen dynasty and Judith, daughter of Henry IX, Duke of Bavaria, from the rival House of Welf. Frederich therefore descended from the two leading families in Germany, making him an acceptable choice for the Empire's prince-electors.

Historians consider him among the Holy Roman Empire's greatest medieval emperors. He combined qualities that made him appear almost superhuman to his contemporaries: his longevity, his ambition, his extraordinary skills at organization, his battlefield acumen and his political perspicuity. Among his contributions to Central European society and culture include the reestablishment of the Corpus Juris Civilis, or the Roman rule of law, which counterbalanced the papal power that dominated the German states since the conclusion of the Investiture Controversy.

3072. BÉATRICE DE BOURGOGNE (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandmother[3071], see Maternal Ancestry(172)) was born in 1143, in Hoch Bourgogne, Marne, France, to Renaud III de Bourgogne[3120] and Agatha de Lorraine[3121]. Béatrice was an Empress of the Holy Roman Empire. She died on 15 November 1184, aged about 41, in Besançon, Doubs, Franche-Comté, France.

Beatrice of Burgundy (1143 – 15 November 1184) was the only daughter of Renaud III, Count of Burgundy and Agatha of Lorraine. Orphaned as a child, she inherited the County of Burgundy and became one of the most desirable heiresses in France. She then became the second wife of Frederick I, Holy Roman Emperor, and as such Holy Roman Empress, at the age of about 12. Beatrice was active at the Hohenstaufen court, encouraging literary works and chivalric ideals. She accompanied her husband on his travels and campaigns across his kingdom, and he was known to be under Beatrice's influence. She was crowned Holy Roman Empress by Antipope Paschal III in Rome on 1 August 1167, and later as Queen of Burgundy at Vienne in August 1178. Beatrice died young in 1184, 6 years before her much older husband.

Andrew II (Hungarian: II. András, Croatian: Andrija II., Slovak: Ondrej II., Ukrainian: Андрій II; c. 1177 – 21 September 1235), also known as Andrew of Jerusalem, was King of Hungary and Croatia between 1205 and 1235. He ruled the Principality of Halych from 1188 until 1189/1190, and again between 1208/1209 and 1210. He was the younger son of Béla III of Hungary, who entrusted him with the administration of the newly conquered Principality of Halych in 1188. Andrew's rule was unpopular, and the boyars expelled him. Béla III willed property and money to Andrew, obliging him to lead a crusade to the Holy Land. Instead, Andrew forced his elder brother, King Ëmeric of Hungary, to cede Croatia and Dalmatia as an appanage to him in 1197. The following year, Andrew occupied Hum.

Despite the fact that Andrew did not stop conspiring against Ëmeric, the dying king made Andrew guardian of his son, Ladislaus III, in 1204. After the premature death of Ladislaus, Andrew ascended the throne in 1205. According to historian László Kontler, "[i]t was amindst the socio-political turmoil during [Andrew's] reign that the relations, arrangements, institutional framework and social categories that arose under Stephen I, started to disintegrate in the higher echelons of society" in Hungary.[1] Andrew introduced a new grants policy, the so-called "new institutions", giving away money and royal estates to his partisans despite the loss of royal revenues. He was the first Hungarian monarch to adopt the title of "King of Halych and Lodomeria". He waged at least a dozen wars to seize the two Rus' principalities, but the local boyars and neighboring princes prevented him from conquering the principalities. He participated in the Fifth Crusade to the Holy Land in 1217–1218, but the crusade was a failure.

When the servientes regis, or "royal servants", rose up, Andrew was forced to issue the Golden Bull of 1222, confirming their privileges. This led to the rise of the nobility in the Kingdom of Hungary. His Diploma Andreanum of 1224 listed the liberties of the Transylvanian Saxon community. The employment of Jews and Muslims to administer the royal revenues led him into conflict with the Holy See and the Hungarian prelates. Andrew pledged to respect the privileges of the clergymen and to dismiss his non-Christian officials in 1233, but he never fulfilled the latter promise.

Andrew's first wife, Gertrude of Merania, was murdered in 1213, because her blatant favoritism towards her German kinsmen and courtiers stirred up discontent among the native lords. The veneration of their daughter, Elizabeth of Hungary, was confirmed by the Holy See during Andrew's lifetime. After Andrew's death, his sons, Béla and Coloman, accused his third wife, Beatrice d'Este, of adultery and never considered her son, Stephen, to be a legitimate son of Andrew.

3076. GERTRUDE MERANIA (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandmother[3075], see Maternal Ancestry(142) and Maternal Ancestry(174)) was born on 24 September 1185, in Andechs, Starnberg, Bayern, Germany, to Berthold IV Merania[3124] and Agnes of Rochlitz[3125]. She died (Murdered by Hungarian noblemen) on 28 September 1213, aged 28, in Esztergom, K-Eszt, Hungary. She was buried in Pilisszentkereszt, Pest, Hungary.

Gertrude of Merania (1185 – 28 September 1213) was Queen of Hungary as the first wife of Andrew II from 1205 until her assassination. She was regent during her husband's absence.

She was the daughter of the Bavarian Count Berthold IV of Andechs, who had been elevated to the title Duke of Merania by Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, and his wife Agnes from the Saxon House of Wettin. Gertrude's elder sister was Agnes of Merania, a famous beauty, who married King Philip II of France. Her younger sister was St. Hedwig of Silesia, wife of the Piast duke Henry I the Bearded, the later High Duke of Poland. Their brother was Otto, who succeeded their father as Duke of Merania.

Her parents wanted their daughters to all make important political marriages, which would create alliances for Duke Berthold IV. Gertrude married the Árpád prince Andrew II, younger son of late King Béla III of Hungary, before 1203. Andrew thereby took sides in the conflict over the German throne, joining his father-in-law in his support of Duke Philip of Swabia, while his elder brother King Emeric of Hungary backed King Otto IV of Germany.

András (Andrew) II Árpád[3075], aged about 28, married Gertrude Merania, aged about 17, in 1203 in Esztergom, K-Eszt, Hungary. They had one son:

Bela IV Árpád[3031] born in 1206 in Esztergom, Komarom-Esztergom, Hungary; died on 3 May 1270 in Esztergom, Komarom-Esztergom, Hungary

3077. EMPEROR THEODOROS I LASKIRINA (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandfather[3076], see Maternal Ancestry(142) and Maternal Ancestry(175)) was born in 1175, in Nicaea, Bursa, Turkey, to Manolis Laskirina[3126] and Ioanna Karatzaina[3127]. Theodoros I was an Emperor of Byzantium. He died in 1222, aged about 47.

In 1198/9, Theodore married Anna Angelina, daughter of the Byzantine Emperor Alexios III Angelos and Euphrosyne Doukaina Kamatera; she was the widow of his cousin the sebastokratōr Isaac Komnenos. By this marriage he was brother-in-law of Eudokia Angelina. Theodore later distinguished himself during the sieges of Constantinoiple by the Latins of the Fourth Crusade (1203–1204). He remained in Constantinople until the Latins actually penetrated into the city, at which point he fled across Bosphorus together with his wife. At about the same time his brother Constantine Laskaris was unsuccessfully proclaimed emperor by some of the defenders of Constantinoiple. In Bithynia Theodore established himself in Nicaea, which became the chief rallying-point for his countrymen.

At first Theodore did not claim the imperial title, perhaps because his father-in-law and his brother were both still living, perhaps because of the imminent Latin invasion, or perhaps because there was no Patriarch of Constantinople to crown him Emperor. In addition, his own control over the Anatolian domains of the Byzantine Empire was challenged, by David Komnenos in Paphlagonia and Manuel Maurozomes in Phrygia. It was only after defeating the latter two in 1205 that he was proclaimed Emperor and invited Patriarch John X Kamateros to Nicaea. But John died in 1206 before crowning Theodore. Theodore appointed Michael IV as the new Patriarch and was crowned by him in March 1208.

In the meantime, Theodore had been defeated by the Latins at Adramyttion (Edremit), but soon afterwards the Latins were themselves defeated by Kaloyan of Bulgaria at the Battle of Adrianople. This temporarily stalled the Latin advance, but it was renewed by Emperor Henry of Flanders in 1206. Theodore entered into an alliance with Kaloyan and took the offensive in 1209. The situation was complicated by the invasion of Sultan Kaykhusraw I of Rum at the instigation of the deposed Alexios III in 1211; however, the Nicaeans defeated the Seljuk army at the Battle of Antioch on the Meander where Theodore Laskaris killed the sultan in combat. Although the danger from Rum and Alexios III was thus neutralized, Emperor Henry defeated Theodore in the same year, and established his control over the southern shores of the Sea of Marmara. In spite of this defeat, Theodore was able to take advantage of the death of David Megas Komnenos, the brother of Emperor Alexios I of Trebizond in 1212 and to extend his own control over Paphlagonia. In 1214 Theodore concluded a peace treaty with the Latin Empire at Nymphaion, and in 1219 he married Marie de Courtenay, a niece of now deceased Emperor Henry and daughter of the current regent, Yolanda of Flanders. In spite of predominantly peaceful relations, Theodore attacked the Latin Empire again in 1220, but peace was restored. Theodore died in November 1221 and was succeeded by his son-in-law John III Doukas Vatatzes. At the end of his reign he ruled over a territory roughly coterminous with the old Roman provinces of Asia and Bithynia. Though there is no proof of higher qualities of statesmanship in him, by his courage and military skill he enabled the Byzantine nation not merely to survive, but ultimately to beat back the Latin invasion.

Anna Komnene Angelina or Comnena Angelina (c. 1176 – 1212) was a daughter of the Byzantine Emperor Alexios III Angelos and of Euphrosyne Doukaina Kamatera. Her first marriage was to the sebastokratōr Isaac Komnenos, a great-nephew of the emperor Manuel I Komnenos. They had one daughter, Theodora Angelina. Soon after Anna's father became emperor, in 1195, Isaac Komnenos was dispatched to combat the Vlach-Bulgarian Rebellion. He was captured, became a pawn between rival Bulgarian and Vlach factions, and died in chains. Her second marriage to Theodore Laskaris, eventually emperor of Nicaea, was celebrated in a double wedding in early 1200 (the other couple was Anna’s sister Irene and Alexios Palaiologos). Theodoros I Laskirina[3077] married Anna Komnene. They had one daughter:

Aymer (also Aymar, Adhemar, Ademar, or Adomar; c. 1160 – 16 June 1202) was the last Count of Angoulême of the House of Taillefer. He was a middle child of Count William VI and Marguerite de Turenne. Two of his elder brothers, Wulgrin III and William VII, became Counts of Angoulême in succession after the death of their father in 1179. Aymer succeeded his brother in 1186, and soon after was at the court of Richard the Lionheart, then Duke of Aquitaine and thus Aymer's lord, to receive recognition of his accession.[1] By 1188, Aymer had married Alice of Courtenay, the daughter of Peter I of Courtenay and thus granddaughter of King Louis VI of France. In that year, Alice gave birth to a daughter, Isabella of Angoulême, who married King John of England in 1200. The marriage alliance was sealed by two treaties, one public, the other private between Aymer and John. The count remained a steady ally of the kings of England against the rebellious House of Lusignan.

Aymer had a claim to the County of La Marche, where in 1199 or 1200 he was exercising authority, perhaps on behalf of his son-in-law, and issued a charter to some monks of Aubignac. In February 1202 when John was visiting Angoulême to negotiate a treaty with Sancho VII of Navarre, Aymer took him on a tour of the newly consecrated abbey church at La Couronne. The role of Aymer's daughter in John's continued refusal to properly care for his brother Richard the Lionheart's widow, Berengaria of Navarre, may explain the Count of Angoulême's proximity to the negotiations between the two kingdoms.

Aymer died in Limoges on 16 June 1202. His daughter and only child succeeded him as Countess of Angoulême. Her title, however, was largely empty since her husband denied her control of her inheritance as well as her marriage dowry and dower. John's appointed governor, Bartholomew de Le Puy (de Podio), ran most of the administrative affairs of Angoulême until John's death in 1216.[6] In 1217 Isabella returned and seized her inheritance from Bartholomew, who appealed unsuccessfully to the English king for help.

Aymer's widow, Alice, ruled the city of Angoulême until March 1203, when John summoned her to court and granted her a monthly pension of 50 livres d'Anjou in return for her dower rights. She thereafter retired from public life to her estate at La Ferté-Gaucher, where she was living as late as July 1213, when she issued a charter at Provins using the title Countess of Angoulême.[3].

Alice was born in 1160, the second eldest daughter and one of the ten children of Peter I of Courtenay and Elisabeth of Courtenay, daughter of Renaud de Courtenay and Hawise du Donjon. Her family was one of the most illustrious in France; and her paternal grandparents were King Louis VI of France and Adélaide de Maurienne. Her eldest brother Peter became the Latin Emperor of Constantinople in 1216. In addition to Peter, she had three more brothers, Philippe de Courtenay, Robert, Seigneur of Champignelles, and William, Seigneur of Tanlay; and five sisters, Eustacie, Clemence, Isabelle, Constance, and another whose name is unknown.

Aymer de Taillefer[3081] married Alice de Courtenay. They had one daughter:

Isabella Angoulême[3036] born in 1187 in Angoulême, Charente, Poitou-Charentes, France; died on 31 March 1246 in Fontevraud, France

3083. FERDINAND II DE LEON (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandfather[3082], see Maternal Ancestry(147)) was born in 1137, in Toledo, Spain. Ferdinand II was a King of Leon. He died on 22 January 1188, aged about 50, in Benavente, Spain. He was buried in Cathedral of Compostela, Spain.

3084. URRAQUE DE PORTUGAL (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandmother[3083], see Maternal Ancestry(147)) was born in 1151, in Coimbra, Portugal, to Alfonse I de Portugal[3134] and Matilde de Savoie[3135]. Urraque was a Queen Consort of Leon. She died on 16 October 1188, aged about 37, in Valladolid, Castilla-Leon, Spain. She was buried in Monastery of Santa Maria de Wamba, Valladolid, Castilla-Leon, Spain.

Infanta Urraca of Portugal; (Coimbra, 1148[1] – Wamba, Valladolid, 1211) was an infanta of Portugal, daughter of Afonso Henriques, the first king of Portugal, and his wife, Queen Maud of Savoy. She was queen consort of Leon as the wife of King Ferdinand II and the mother of Alfonso IX. Daughter of Afonso I, the first king of Portugal, and his wife Maud of Savoy, she had several siblings, including King Sancho I.

In May or June 1165, she married Ferdinand II, becoming the first infanta of Portugal to have married a Leonese monarch. The only son of this marriage, Alfonso IX, was born in Zamora on 15 August 1171. However, the marriage of Ferdinand II and Urraca was annulled in 1171 or 1172 by Pope Alexander III the two being second cousins, great-grandchildren of Alfonso VI of León and Castile. Urraca then became a nun joining the Order of Saint John of Jerusalem and retired to live in the estates that her former husband had given her in the Carta de Arras (wedding tokens) in Zamora. Later, she retired in the Monastery of Santa María de Wamba which belonged to the aforementioned order. On 25 May 1176, Queen Urraca donated land and villas to the Order of Saint John, probably coinciding with her joining the order. These properties included Castroveerde de Campos and Mansilla in León and Salas and San Andrés in Asturias. She was present in 1188 at the coronation of her son Alfonso IX who inherited the throne after his father’s death on 22 January 1188 and, in that same year, on 4 May, both confirmed the privileges granted by the former king to the Order of Santiago.[4] Her presence is registered for the last time in medieval charters in 1211 when she donated the village of Castrotrufafo that she had received from her husband the king in 1165 as a wedding gift to the Cathedral of Zamora.

Queen Urraca was buried at the Monastery of Santa María de Wamba in what is now the province of Valladolid, that belonged to the Order of Saint John. In the interior of the Church of Santa María, the only part remaining of the ancient monastery, is the Chapel of the Queen where a plaque that was placed there subsequently mentions that Queen Urraca of Portugal had been interred in this church.

Ferdinand II de Leon[3083] married Urraque de Portugal. They had one son:

Alfonso IX de Castille[3037] born on 15 August 1171 in Zamora, León, Castille-León, Spain; died on 24 September 1230 in Villanueva de Sarria, Lugo, Galice, Espagne

3085. PIERRE DE BRETAGNE (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandfather[3084], see Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1187 to Robert II de Dreux[3136] and Yolande de Coucy[3137]. Pierre was a Duke of Brittany. He died (Died at sea) on 26 May 1250, aged about 62. He was buried in Braine, France.

Peter was the second son of Robert II, Count of Dreux and Yolande de Coucy. The latter was in turn the son of Robert I of Dreux, a younger brother of Louis VII of France. Peter was thus a Capetian, a second cousin of Louis VIII of France. Despite being of royal descent, as the younger son of a cadet branch Peter's early prospects were that of a minor noble, with a few scattered fiefs in the Île-de-France and Champagne. He was initially destined for a career in the clergy, which he later renounced, earning him the nickname Mauclerc (French: mauvais clerc, bad-cleric). He broke the convention of ecclesiastical heraldry by placing on the canton of his paternal arms the ermine, then reserved for the clergy.

Peter's son John reached the age of majority in 1237. Peter Mauclerc then participated in the Barons' Crusade to the Holy Land in 1239. While there, Peter's troops along with some local knights were attacked by heavily armed Mamluk cavalry, firing their bows, but the crusader force managed to outflank and defeat them, taking a few prisoners with them back to Jaffa. In early November, two days into a march from Acre to Ascalon, Peter and his lieutenant Raoul de Soissons split off from the main force to conduct a raid. They divided their force in half and each waited in ambush along a possible route for the Muslim caravan which was moving up the Jordan to Damascus. Peter's half clashed with the Muslims outside of a castle, and after some fighting, he sounded his horn to summon Raoul. The Muslims were routed and fled inside the castle, where Peter's men followed them, killed many, took some captives, and seized the booty and edible animals of the caravan. This minor victory would soon be overshadowed by a serious defeat at Gaza.

Back in France, he won some success against the English at sea in 1242 and 1243. In 1249, he participated in the Seventh Crusade to Egypt under King Louis IX. He died at the sea before he was able to return home. He was buried in Braine.

3086. ALIX DE THOUARS (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandmother[3085], see Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born on 12 September 1201, in Thouars, Deux-Sèvres, Poitou-Charentes, France. Alix was a Duchess of Brittany. She died on 28 October 1221, aged 20, in Nantes, Loire-Atlantique, Pays de la Loire, France.

Alix was born in 1200. She was the daughter of Constance, Duchess of Brittany and Guy of Thouars. According to several French historians, Constance died after giving birth to Alix’s sisters Catherine and Margaret. Alix’s older half-brother was Arthur I, Duke of Brittany and her half-sister was Eleanor, Fair Maid of Brittany, the children of Constance and Geoffrey Plantagenet. Upon the death of Richard I of England, a power struggle commenced between her half-brother Arthur and John, King of England. At the Battle of Mirebeau in 1202, Arthur and Eleanor were captured. Arthur was imprisoned at the Château de Falaise and in 1203... disappeared. Eleanor was imprisoned at Corfe Castle. The Breton barons recognized Alix as Duchess of Brittany after the death of Arthur, instead of Eleanor. This was due to fears that John might claim to rule Brittany as regent for the imprisoned Eleanor. Alix's father Guy became regent for Alix until 1206, when Philip II of France made himself the regent of the duchy in Alix's name. King Philip II broke off the betrothal of Alix and the Breton prince Henry of Penthièvre, and turned to his French cousin Peter of Dreux, as Alix's husband. Pierre married Alix on 27 January 1213, and paid homage to the French king for Brittany. Alix died on the 21st of October 1221, without having exercised much control over her own inheritance. She was succeeded in the duchy by her son John I, but Peter remained the de facto ruler of Brittany as John I's regent until 1237.

Pierre de Bretagne married Alix de Thouars. They had one son:

Jean I de Bretagne born in 1217 in Dreux, Eure-et-Loir, France; died on 8 October 1286 in Chateau de L'Isle, Tarn-et-Garonne

3087. LOUIS VII CAPET (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandfather, see Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born in 1120, in Paris, France, to Louis VI Capet[3138] and Adélaide de Savoye[3139]. Louis VII was a King of France. He died in 1189, aged about 69, in Paris, France. He was buried in Barbeau Abbey, which he had founded. His remains were moved to the Basilica of Saint-Denis in 1817. Louis VII married twice. He was married to Eleanor de Acquitaine and Adelaide de Champagne.

Louis VII (called the Younger or the Young) (French: Louis le Jeune) (1120 – 18 September 1180) was King of the Franks from 1137 until his death. He was the son and successor of King Louis VI of France, hence his nickname, and married Eleanor of Aquitaine, one of the wealthiest and most powerful women in western Europe. Eleanor came with the vast Duchy of Aquitaine as a dowry for Louis, thus temporarily extending the Capetian lands to the Pyrenees, but their marriage was annulled in 1152 after no male heir was produced. Immediately after the annulment of her marriage, Eleanor married Henry Plantagenet, Duke of Normandy and Count of Anjou, to whom she gave the Aquitaine. When Henry became King of England in 1154, as Henry II, he ruled over a large empire that spanned from Scotland to the Pyrenees. Henry's efforts to preserve and expand on this patrimony for the Crown of England would mark the beginning of the long rivalry between France and England. Louis VII's reign saw the founding of the University of Paris and the disastrous Second Crusade. Louis and his famous counselor Abbot Suger pushed for a greater centralization of the state and favoured the development French Gothic architecture, notably the construction of Notre-Dame de Paris.

He died in 1180 and was succeeded by his son Philip II.

3088. ADELAIDE DE CHAMPAGNE (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandmother, see Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born in 1140. Adelaide was a Queen of France. She died in 1206, aged about 66, in Paris, Île-de-France, France. She was buried in Pontigny Abbey near Auxerre. Adelaide married twice, including Louis VII Capet.

Adela of Champagne (French: Adèle; c. 1140 – 4 June 1206), also known as Adelaide and Alix, was Queen of France as the third wife of Louis VII. She was the daughter of Theobald II, Count of Champagne, and Matilda of Carinthia, and was named after her grandmother, Adela of Normandy.

Louis and Adela married on 18 October 1160, five weeks after his previous wife, Constance of Castile, died in childbirth. Queen Adèle was the mother of Louis VII's only son, Philip II, and of the Byzantine empress Agnes.

Adela was active in the political life of the kingdom, along with her brothers Henry I, Theobald V, and Guillaume aux Blanches Mains. Henry and Theobald were married to daughters of Louis VII and Eleanor of Aquitaine. Adela and her brothers felt their position threatened when the heiress of Artois, Isabella of Hainault, married Adèle's son Philip. Adèle formed an alliance with Hugh III, Duke of Burgundy, and Philip of Flanders, and even tried to interest Emperor Frederick Barbarossa. War broke out in 1181, and relations became so bad that Philip attempted to divorce Isabella in 1184. Although her power decreased after the accession of Philip in 1180, Queen Adela acted as regent in 1190 while Philip was away on the Third Crusade. She returned to the shadows when he returned in 1192 but participated in the founding of many abbeys.

Queen Adela died on 4 June 1206 in Paris, Île-de-France, France, and was buried in the church of Pontigny Abbey near Auxerre.

Adelaide de Champagne was married.

Louis VII Capet[3087], aged about 40, married Adelaide de Champagne, aged about 20, on 18 October 1160. They had one son:

Philippe II Capet[3043] born in 1165; died in 1223

3089. ALFONSO SANCHEZ III (THE DESIRED) DE CASTILE (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandfather[3088], see Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born in 1134, in Castile, Spain, to Alfonso de Castile[3140] and Berenguela de Barcelona[3141]. Alfonso Sanchez III (The Desired) was a King of Castile. He died on 21 September 1158, aged about 24, in Toledo, Castile, Spain. He was buried in Toledo, Castille La Mancha, Spain.

3090. BLANCHE GARCIA DE NAVARRE (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandmother[3089], see Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born in 1137, in Navarre, Spain, to Garcia VI (The Restorer) de Navarre[3142] and Marguerite de' Aigle[3143]. Blanche Garcia was a Queen consort of Castile. She died on 14 August 1158, aged about 21, in Castile, Spain. She was buried in Monasterio de Santa Maria la Real de Nájera, Nájera, Rioja, Rioja, Spain.

Alfonso Sanchez III (The Desired) de Castile[3089], aged about 16, married Blanche Garcia de Navarre, aged about 13, on 4 February 1151 in Catahorra, Logrono, Spain. They had one son:

Alfonso VIII de Castile[3045] born on 11 November 1155 in Castile, Spain; died on 5 October 1214 in Huelgas, Burgos, Spain

3091. KING HENRY II PLANTAGENET (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandfather[3090], see Maternal Ancestry(147) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born on 25 March 1133, in Le Mans, Sarthe, Pays de la Loire, France, to Geoffrey Plantagenet[3144] and Matilda Beauclerc[3145]. Henry II was a King of England. He died on 6 July 1189, aged 56.

Henry II (5 March 1133 – 6 July 1189), also known as Henry Curtmantle (French: Court-manteau), Henry FitzEmpress or Henry Plantagenet, ruled as Count of Anjou, Count of Maine, Duke of Normandy, Duke of Aquitaine, Count of Nantes, King of England (1154–89) and Lord of Ireland; at various times, he also controlled Wales, Scotland and Brittany. Henry was the son of Geoffrey of Anjou and Matilda, daughter of Henry I of England. He became actively involved by the age of 14 in his mother's efforts to claim the throne of England, then occupied by Stephen of Blois, and was made Duke of Normandy at 17. He inherited Anjou in 1151 and shortly afterwards married Eleanor of Aquitaine, whose marriage to Louis VII of France had recently been annulled. Stephen agreed to a peace treaty after Henry's military expedition to England in 1153: Henry inherited the kingdom on Stephen's death a year later. Henry was an energetic and sometimes ruthless ruler, driven by a desire to restore the lands and privileges of his royal grandfather, Henry I. During the early years of the younger Henry's reign he restored the royal administration in England, re-established hegemony over Wales and gained full control over his lands in Anjou, Maine and Touraine. Henry's desire to reform the relationship with the Church led to conflict with his former friend Thomas Becket, the Archbishop of Canterbury. This controversy lasted for much of the 1160s and resulted in Becket's murder in 1170. Henry soon came into conflict with Louis VII and the two rulers fought what has been termed a "cold war" over several decades. Henry expanded his empire, often at Louis' expense, taking Brittany and pushing east into central France and south into Toulouse; despite numerous peace conferences and treaties, no lasting agreement was reached. By 1172, he controlled England, large parts of Wales, the eastern half of Ireland and the western half of France, an area that would later come to be called the Angevin Empire. Henry and Eleanor had eight children. As they grew up, tensions over the future inheritance of the empire began to emerge, encouraged by Louis and his son King Philip II. In 1173 Henry's heir apparent, "Young Henry", rebelled in protest; he was joined by his brothers Richard and Geoffrey and by their mother, Eleanor. France, Scotland, Flanders and Boulogne allied themselves with the rebels. The Great Revolt was only defeated by his vigorous military action and talented local commanders, many of them "new men" appointed for their loyalty and administrative skills. Young Henry and Geoffrey revolted again in 1183, resulting in Young Henry's death. The Norman invasion of Ireland provided lands for his youngest son John, but Henry struggled to find ways to satisfy all his sons' desires for land and immediate power. Philip successfully played on Richard's fears that Henry would make John king, and a final rebellion broke out in 1189. Decisively defeated by Philip and Richard and suffering from a bleeding ulcer, Henry retreated to Chinon in Anjou, where he died.

Henry's empire quickly collapsed during the reign of his youngest son John. Many of the changes Henry introduced during his long rule, however, had long-term consequences. Henry's legal changes are generally considered to have laid the basis for the English Common Law, while his intervention in Brittany, Wales and Scotland shaped the development of their societies and governmental systems. Historical interpretations of Henry's reign have changed considerably over time. In the 18th century, scholars argued that Henry was a driving force in the creation of a genuinely English monarchy and, ultimately, a unified Britain. During the Victorian expansion of the British Empire, historians were keenly interested in the formation of Henry's own empire, but they also expressed concern over his private life and treatment of Becket. Late-20th-century historians have combined British and French historical accounts of Henry, challenging earlier Anglo-centric interpretations of his reign.

3092. ELEANOR DE ACQUITAINE (Howard Charles's twenty-six-times-great-grandmother[3091], see Maternal Ancestry(147) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born on 12 June 1122, in Chateau de Belin, Gironde, Aquitaine. France, to William X de Acquitaine[3146] and Eleanor de Chatellerault[3147]. Eleanor was a Queen of England. She died on 1 April 1204, aged 81, in Mirabell Castle, Poitiers, France., France. She was buried in Fontevraud Abbey next to her husband Henry and her son Richard. Eleanor married twice. She was married to Louis VII Capet[3087] and Henry II Plantagenet[3091].

Eleanor of Aquitaine (French: Aliénor, Éléonore, Latin: Alienora; 1122 – 1 April 1204) was one of the wealthiest and most powerful women in western Europe during the High Middle Ages and a member of the Ramnulfid dynasty of rulers in southwestern France. She inherited the Duchy of Aquitaine from her father, William X, in 1137, and later became queen consort of France (1137–1152) and of England (1154–1189). She was the patron of literary figures such as Wace, Benoît de Sainte-Maure, and Bernart de Ventadorn.

As Duchess of Aquitaine, Eleanor was the most eligible bride in Europe. Three months after she became duchess, she married King Louis VII of France, son of her guardian, King Louis VI. As Queen of France, she participated in the unsuccessful Second Crusade. Soon after, Eleanor sought an annulment of her marriage, but her request was rejected by Pope Eugene III. However, after the birth of her second daughter Alix, Louis agreed to an annulment given that their union had not produced a son after fifteen years of marriage. The marriage was annulled on 11 March 1152 on the grounds of consanguinity within the fourth degree. Their daughters were declared legitimate and custody was awarded to Louis, while Eleanor's lands were restored to her.

As soon as the annulment was granted, Eleanor became engaged to Henry, Duke of Normandy and Count of Anjou, who became King Henry II of England in 1154. Henry was her third cousin (cousin of the third degree), and eleven years younger. The couple married on 18 May 1152 (Whit Sunday), eight weeks after the annulment of Eleanor's first marriage, in a cathedral in Poitiers, France. Over the next thirteen years, she bore Henry eight children: five sons, three of whom would become kings; and three daughters. However, Henry and Eleanor eventually became estranged. Henry imprisoned her in 1173 for supporting her son Henry's revolt against her husband. She was not released until 6 July 1189, when Henry died and their son ascended the English throne as Richard I.

Now queen dowager, Eleanor acted as regent while Richard went on the Third Crusade, where on his return he was captured and held prisoner. Eleanor lived well into the reign of her youngest son, John. By the time of her death, she had outlived all her children except for John and Eleanor.

Contemporary sources praise Eleanor's beauty.[7] Even in an era when ladies of the nobility were excessively praised, their praise of her was undoubtedly sincere. When she was young, she was described as perpulchra – more than beautiful. When she was around 30, Bernard de Ventadour, a noted troubadour, called her "gracious, lovely, the embodiment of charm," extolling her "lovely eyes and noble countenance" and declaring that she was "one meet to crown the state of any king."[10] William of Newburgh emphasized the charms of her person, and even in her old age, Richard of Devizes described her as beautiful, while Matthew Paris, writing in the 13th century, recalled her "admirable beauty."

However, no one left a more detailed description of Eleanor; the colour of her hair and eyes, for example, are unknown. The effigy on her tomb shows a tall and large-boned woman with brown skin, though this may not be an accurate representation. Her seal of c. 1152 shows a woman with a slender figure, but this is likely an impersonal image.

The 2 hides held by Hugh son of Golda formed the manor of IFORD, and the overlordship of this manor and of the rest of the 7 knights' fees held by his successors, the Plaiz family, descended with the rape, falling in 1439 to Lady Bergavenny. Her descendants were still overlords in 1543.

Hugh son of Golda was succeeded by his son Hugh, whose connexion with the family of Plaiz is not known. Ralph de Plaiz was living about 1140, and Hugh son and heir of Ralph de Plaiz is found about 1150 (or later?). A Ralph occurs again in 1177 and two Ralphs, father and son, about the same time; one of these seems to have died about 1194, leaving a nephew, also Ralph, who died about 1204. Hugh de Plaiz owned the manor in the first half of the 13th century. He died in 1244 and was succeeded by Richard de Plaiz his son by his first wife Philippa de Munfichet, but in 1256 his third wife and widow Alice claimed a third of Iford and other manors as her dower. No Sussex manors were conceded to her. Richard died in 1269 and was succeeded in turn by his sons Ralph and Giles. Ralph died in 1283 and the manor of Iford was granted in dower to his widow Isabel who subsequently married John Marmion and would appear to have been still holding it in 1302, since it is not included among the lands of which Giles de Plaiz died seised in that year. Richard son of Giles was, however, seised of the manor at his death in 1327, holding it with its members Warningore, Wapsbourne, and Worth as half a knight's fee. His eldest son Giles died in 1334 while still a minor and in 1344 Richard brother of Giles obtained livery of his lands, dying 'in parts beyond the seas' in 1360. He had previously alienated his Sussex manors to Sir John de Sotton and others for their lives, with reversion to himself and his heirs. Richard's son John died in 1389 holding no lands in Sussex, nor were they held by his daughter Margaret, wife of Sir John Howard, at the time of her death in 1391.

Dermot MacMurrough (Diarmait Mac Murchada) was a Gaelic lord and king of Leinster. He married his second wife, Mór, c. 1152 and they had two children, Aoife and her brother Conchobar. Dermot was an ambitious man who was eager to extend his territory, resulting in many battles, abductions and power struggles over the years. He was eventually banished from Ireland as punishment for abducting his rival’s wife, Derbfhorgaill. In 1168 he sought Strongbow’s assistance in regaining his power in Ireland, and offered him his daughter’s hand in marriage. After Dermot’s death in 1171 the kingship of Leinster went to Strongbow. The most contemporary sources for information on Dermot and his arrangements with Strongbow are Expugnatio Hibernica (The Conquest of Ireland) written by Giraldus Cambrensis in the twelfth century, and The Song of Dermot and the Earl, a French narrative poem, written in the late twelfth century. Geraldus describes Dermot as “...tall and well built, a brave and warlike man among his people, whose voice was hoarse as a result of constantly having been in the din of battle.” Despite being a patron of the church and founding abbeys at Baltinglass and Kilkenny, Dermot is remembered mostly in a negative light, and is described in his obituary in the Annals of Tigernach as fer buaidhirtha na Banba ocus aidhmillti Erenn (the disturber and the destroyer of Ireland).

3106. MOR INGEN MUIRCHERTAIG O’ TUATHAIL (Howard Charles’s twenty-seven-times-great-grandmother[3103], see Maternal Ancestry(107), Maternal Ancestry(109), Maternal Ancestry(111) and Maternal Ancestry(118)) was born in 1114, in Castledemot, Kildare, Ireland, to Muirchertach Ua O’ Tuathail[3163] and Inghin O’ Morda[3164]. Mor Ingen Muirchertaig was a Queen-consort Of Leinster. She died on 10 May 1191, aged about 76, in Ireland.

Diarmuid Macmurrough[3105], aged about 30, married Mor Ingen Muirchertaig O’ Tuathail, aged about 26, in 1140 in Lough Carmen, Wexford, Leinster, Ireland. They had one daughter:

Aoife Macmurrough[3060] born on 26 April 1145 in Kingdom of Leinster, Ireland; died in 1187 in Waterford, Waterford City, County Waterford, Ireland

3107. HUMBERT II DE SAVOIE (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandfather[3104], see Maternal Ancestry(139), Maternal Ancestry(185) and Maternal Ancestry(191)) was born in 1065, in Savoy, France, to Amédée II de Savoie[3165] and Joan de Geneve[3166]. Raynald of Châtillon, also known as Reynald or Reginald of Châtillon (French: Renaud de Châtillon; c. 1125 – 4 July 1187), was Prince of Antioch from 1153 to 1160 or 1161, and Lord of Oultrejordain from 1175 until his death. He was born as his father's second son into a French noble family. After losing a part of his patrimony, he joined the Second Crusade in 1147. He settled in the Kingdom of Jerusalem and served in the royal army as a mercenary. Raynald married Constance, the reigning Princess of Antioch, in 1153, in spite of her subjects' opposition. He was always in need of funds. He captured and tortured Aimery of Limoges, Latin Patriarch of Antioch, because Aimery had refused to pay a subsidy to him. Raynald launched a plundering raid in Cyprus in 1155, causing great destruction. Four years later, the Byzantine Emperor, Manuel I Komnenos, came to Antioch at the head of a large army, forcing Raynald to beg for his mercy. Raynald made a raid in the valley of the river Euphrates at Marash to seize booty from the local peasants in 1160 or 1161, but he was captured by the governor of Aleppo. Raynald was held in prison until 1176. After his release for a large ransom, he did not return to Antioch, because his wife had meanwhile died. He married Stephanie of Milly, the wealthy heiress of Oultrejordain. Since Baldwin IV of Jerusalem also granted Hebron to him, Raynald was one of the wealthiest barons of the realm. He controlled the caravan routes between Egypt and Syria. Baldwin, who suffered from leprosy, made him regent in 1177. Raynald led the crusader army that defeated Saladin at the Battle of Montgisard. He was the only Christian leader to pursue an offensive policy against Saladin, making plundering raids against the caravans travelling near his domains. He built a fleet of five ships which plundered the coast of the Red Sea, threatening the route of the Muslim pilgrims towards Mecca in early 1183. Saladin pledged that he would never forgive Raynald. Raynald was a firm supporter of Baldwin IV's sister, Sybilla, and her husband, Guy of Lusignan, during conflicts regarding the succession of the king. Sybilla and Guy were able to seize the throne in 1186 due to Raynald's co-operation with her uncle, Joscelin III of Courtenay. Raynald attacked a caravan travelling from Egypt to Syria in late 1186 or early 1187, claiming that the truce between Saladin and the Kingdom of Jerusalem did not bind him. After Raynald refused to pay a compensation, Saladin invaded the kingdom and annihilated the crusader army in the Battle of Hattin. Raynald was captured in the battlefield. Saladin personally beheaded him after he refused to convert to Islam. Most historians have regarded Raynald as an irresponsible adventurer whose lust for booty caused the fall of the Kingdom of Jerusalem. On the other hand, Bernard Hamilton says that he was the only crusader leader who tried to prevent Saladin from unifying the nearby Muslim states.

3113. CONSTANCE DE HAUTEVILLE (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandmother[3109], see Maternal Ancestry(141), Maternal Ancestry(142) and Maternal Ancestry(174)) was born in 1125, in Antioch, Turkey, to Bohémond II de Hauteville[3171] and Alix Rethel D ’ Antioch[3172]. Constance was a Princess of Antioch. She died in 1163, aged about 38.

Constance of Hauteville (1128–1163) was the ruling Princess of Antioch from 1130 to 1163. She was the only child of Bohemond II of Antioch by his wife, Alice of Jerusalem. Constance succeeded her father, who fell in battle, at the age of two, although his cousin, Roger II of Sicily, laid claim to Antioch. Her mother assumed the regency, but the Antiochene noblemen replaced her with her father (Constance's grandfather), Baldwin II of Jerusalem. After he died in 1131, Alice again tried to take control of the government, but the Antiochene barons acknowledged the right of her brother-in-law, Fulk of Anjou, to rule as regent for Constance. Constance was given in marriage to Raymond of Poitiers in 1136. During the subsequent years, Raymond ruled Antioch while Constance gave birth to four children. After Raymond was murdered after a battle in 1149, Fulk of Anjou's son, Baldwin III of Jerusalem, assumed the regency. He tried to persuade Constance to remarry, but she did not accept his candidates. She also refused to marry a middle-aged relative of the Byzantine Emperor Manuel I Komnenus. Finally, she found a love interest and was married to Raynald of Châtillon, a knight from France, in 1153.

After her second husband fell into captivity around 1160–1161, Constance wanted to rule Antioch alone, but Baldwin III of Jerusalem declared her fifteen-year-old son, Bohemond III, the lawful prince. Constance disregarded this declaration and took control of the administration of the principality with the assistance of Emperor Manuel. Constance was dethroned in favor of her son shortly before her death.

Renaud de Châtillon[3112] married Constance de Hauteville. They had one daughter:

Agnes de Châtillon[3064] born in 1153 in Versailles, France; died in 1183

3114. PIERRE I DE COURTENAY (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandfather[3110], see Maternal Ancestry(141) and Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1126 to Louis VI Capet[3138] and Adélaide de Savoye[3139]. He died in 1183, aged about 57.

3115. ELIZABETH DE COURTENAY (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandmother[3111], see Maternal Ancestry(141) and Maternal Ancestry(142)) was born in 1127 to Renaud de Courtenay[3173] and Hawise du Donjon[3174]. She died in 1205, aged about 78.

William III of Mâcon (1088–1156), also known as William IV of Burgundy, was count of Mâcon (1102–1156), count of Auxonne (1127–1156), count of Vienne (1148–1156) and regent of the county of Burgundy (1148–1156). He was a younger son of Stephen I, Count of Burgundy, and Beatrice of Lorraine. After the death of his brother, Renaud III, he took control of the county of Burgundy in the name of his niece Beatrice. He was recognized as count by the emperor Frederick Barbarossa by 1152. He died in 1156 while on Crusade in the Holy Land, and Frederick married Beatrice and took over the county.

William married Adelaide-Pontia (Poncette), heiress of Lord Theobald of Traves.

Berthold was the son of Count Berthold III of Andechs and his wife Hedwig of Wittelsbach. His father had been a loyal liensman of Emperor Frederick Barbarossa and in turn was enfeoffed with the Istrian march upon the death of the Sponheim margrave Engelbert III. Young Berthold IV first appeared in 1170 and was mentioned as Count of Andechs in a 1172 deed. In 1175 he served as co-ruler in the March of Istriia. After Emperor Frederick deposed Duke Henry the Lion in 1180, his mother's relative Otto of Wittelsbach received the Duchy of Bavaria, while Berthold was received the Duchy of Merania.[2] The rule over "Merania" actually encompassed the same area as the old Istrien margraviate, but its ruler now gained much prestige from his new title and the comital House of Andechs was elevated to Princes of the Holy Roman Empire.

In 1186, he accompanied Emperor Frederick's son Henry VI to Italy and his marriage with Constance of Sicily. In 1189, he led the third division of the imperial army and was its standard-bearer on the Third Crusade. In 1195, he appeared as Vogt (reeve) of Tegernsee Abbey in Bavaria. Berthold committed himself to join the Crusade of 1197, however, he did not participate until Henry's death in the same year. Though he had opposed the emperor's Erbreichsplan, he backed the claims of Henry's younger brother Philip of Swabia against the politics of Pope Innocent III who supported Philip's Welf rival Otto IV. At this juncture, the
Berthold died in 1204 and was buried at the Andechs private monastery in Dießen, Bavaria.

3125. AGNES OF ROCHLITZ (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandmother[3121], see Maternal Ancestry(142) and Maternal Ancestry(174)) was born in 1166. She died on 25 March 1195, aged about 28.

The first occurrence of the name is in 1059, in a will by Eustathios Boilas, but the people mentioned there were simple peasants. Another family surnamed Laskaris appears in Thessalonica from ca. 1180 on, but the relation with the imperial dynasty, if any, is unclear.
The first Laskaris of note were Constantine and Theodore, the sons of Manuel "Manolis" Laskaris and Ioanna Phokaina Karatzaina (Ἰωάννα Φώκαινα Καράτζαινα), who became prominent in Constantinople during the latter years of the Angeloi dynasty, when Theodore had married Anna Komnene Angelina, a daughter of Alexios III Angelos. According to Niketas Choniates, immediately prior to the sack of the city by the Fourth Crusade, Constantine was elected emperor by the people, but had to flee before the Latins. Together with Theodore, he led the anti-Latin resistance of the native Byzantine Greek population in Asia Minor, but it was Theodore who established a new empire in exile, the Empire of Nicaea. There were also three older brothers, Manuel, Michael and George, and two younger ones, Alexios and Isaac.

3127. IOANNA KARATZAINA (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandmother[3123], see Maternal Ancestry(142) and Maternal Ancestry(175)) was born in 1148, in Partzerpert, Armenia. She died in 1200, aged about 52.

A member of the extended imperial family, Alexios came to throne after deposing, blinding, and imprisoning his younger brother Isaac II Angelos. The most significant event of his reign was the attack of the Fourth Crusade on Constantinople in 1203, on behalf of Alexios IV Angelos. Alexios III took over the defense of the city, which he mismanaged, then fled the city at night with one of his three daughters. From Adrianople, and then Mosynopolis, he unsuccessfully attempted to rally his supporters, only to end up a captive of Marquis Boniface of Montferrat. He was ransomed, sent to Asia Minor where he plotted against his son-in-law Theodore Laskaris, but was eventually arrested and spent his last days confined to the Monastery of Hyakinthos in Nicaea, where he died.

Afonso I (25 July 1109 - 6 December 1185), nicknamed "the Conqueror" ("son of Henry", "Henriques") by the Moors whom he fought, was the first King of Portugal. He achieved the independence of the southern part of the Kingdom of Galicia, the County of Portugal, from Galicia's overlord, the King of León, in 1139, establishing a new kingdom and doubling its area with the Reconquista, an objective that he pursued until his death, in 1185, after forty-six years of wars against the Moors.

In July 2006, the tomb of the king (which is located in the Santa Cruz Monastery in Coimbra) was to be opened for scientific purposes by researchers from the University of Coimbra.

Matilda first appears with her husband on 23 May 1146 confirming a donation that had been made previously by her mother-in-law, Teresa of León, to the Order of Cluny. She was very devoted to the Cistercian Order and founded the Monasterio of Costa in Guimarães and a hospital/hostel for pilgrims, the poor and the sick in Canaveses.[6] She stipulated in her will that this hospital was to be kept always clean, that it should be furnished with good and clean beds and that, if any of those lodged at the institution should die there, three masses were to be celebrated for the salvation of their souls.

Walter Map, in his work, De nugis curialium, tells a story that "the King of Portugal now living", almost certainly Afonso, had been convinced by evil counselors to murder his pregnant wife out of misplaced jealousy. However, there is no other authority for this account, and it is not generally accepted.

Queen Mafalda died in Coimbra on 3 December 1157 or 1158[a] and was buried at the Monastery of Santa Cruz where her husband, who survived her by more than twenty-seven years, was later interred. She was survived by six of her seven children, only three of whom, infantes Sancho, Urraca and Theresa, would reach adulthood.

Alfonse I de Portugal[3134] married Matilde de Savoie. They had one daughter:

Urraque de Portugal[3084] born in 1151 in Coimbra, Portugal; died on 16 October 1188 in Valladolid, Castilla-Leon, Spain

3136. ROBERT II DE DREUX (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandfather[3132], see Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1154 to Robert de Dreux[3185] and Agnes de Baudemont[3186]. He died in 1218, aged about 64.

Robert II of Dreux (1154 – 28 December 1218), Count of Dreux and Braine, was the eldest surviving son of Robert I, Count of Dreux, and Agnes de Baudemont, countess of Braine, and a grandson of King Louis VI of France.

He participated in the Third Crusade, at the Siege of Acre and the Battle of Arsuf. He took part in the war in Normandy against the Angevin Kings between 1193 and 1204. Count Robert had seized the castle of Nonancourt from Richard I of England while he was imprisoned in Germany in late-1193. The count also participated in the Albigensian Crusade in 1210. In 1214 he fought alongside King Philip Augustus at the Battle of Bouvines.

Count Robert's tomb bore the following inscription, in Medieval Latin hexameters with internal rhyme:

Brān̄e Rōbertus comes híc requiescit opertus,
Et jacet Agnētis situs ad vestīgia mātris.

Of which the translation is: "Born from the race of kings, and a devoted guardian of the laws, Robert, Count of Braine, here rests covered, and lies buried by the remains of his mother Agnes."

It is also dated Anno Graci M. CC. XVIII. die innocentum, that is, "In the Year of Grace 1218, on the Feast of the Holy Innocents."

Robert II de Dreux[3136] married Yolande de Coucy. They had one son:

Pierre de Bretagne[3085] born in 1187; died on 26 May 1250

3137. YOLANDE DE COUCY (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandmother[3133], see Maternal Ancestry(148)) was born in 1168, in Boves, Somme, France. 3138. LOUIS VI CAPET (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandfather[3134], see Maternal Ancestry(147), Maternal Ancestry(148), Maternal Ancestry(149) and Maternal Ancestry(166)) was born on 1 December 1081 to Philippe I Capet[3187] and Bertha of Holland[3188]. Louis VI was a King of France. He died (Dysentery) on 1 August 1137, aged 55, in Paris, France. He was buried in Basilica of St Denis in Paris.

Louis VI (1 December 1081 – 1 August 1137), called the Fat (French: le Gros), was King of the Franks from 1108 until his death (1137). Chronicles called him "roi de Saint-Denis". Louis was the first member of the House of Capet to make a lasting contribution to the centralizing institutions of royal power. He spent almost all of his twenty-nine-year reign fighting either the "rober barons" who plagued Paris or the Norman kings of England for their continental possession of Normandy. Nonetheless, Louis VI managed to reinforce his power considerably and became one of the first strong kings of France since the division of the Carolingian Empire in 843.

Louis was a warrior king but by his forties his weight had become so great that it was increasingly difficult for him to lead in the field. A biography - The Deeds of Louis the Fat, prepared by his loyal advisor Abbot Suger of Saint Denis - offers a fully developed portrait of his character, in contrast to what little historians know about most of his predecessors. On 9 April 1137, a dying William X, Duke of Aquitaine appointed Louis VI guardian of his fifteen-year-old daughter and heiress, Eleanor of Aquitaine. Eleanor was suddenly the most eligible heiress in Europe, and Louis wasted no time in marrying her to his own heir, the future Louis VII, at the Cathedral of Saint-André in Bordeaux on 25 July 1137. At a stroke Louis had added one of the most powerful duchies in France to the Capetian domains. Louis died of dysentry 7 days later, on 1 August 1137. Despite his achievements, it would be the growing power of the soon to be Angevin Empire that would come to overshadow his successor, its seeds sown in the marriage between the Empress Matilda and Geoffrey Plantagenet and realised through their son, Henry II of England.

Louis VI was interred in the Basilica of St Denis in Paris.

3139. ADÉLAIDE DE SAVOYE (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandmother[3135], see Maternal Ancestry(147), Maternal Ancestry(148), Maternal Ancestry(149) and Maternal Ancestry(166)) was born in 1092 to Humbert II de Savoie[3107] and Giselle de Bourgogne[3108]. Adélaide was a Queen of France. She died on 18 November 1154, aged about 62.

Louis VI Capet married Adélaide de Savoye. They had four sons:
- Louis VII Capet[3087] born in 1120 in Paris, France; died in 1189 in Paris, France
- Robert de Dreux[3185] born in 1123; died on 11 October 1188

Marguerite de l'Aigle (d.1144) was a daughter of Gilbert de l'Aigle, Seigneur de l'Aigle and his wife Juliana du Perche. She was Queen consort of Navarre, by her marriage to Garcia Ramírez de Navarre. Marguerite's paternal grandparents were Richer de l'Aigle, Seigneur de l'Aigle and his wife, Judith d'Avranches. Her maternal grandparents were Geoffrey II du Perche, Count of Perche and Mortagine, and his wife, Beatrix de Montdidier.

Garcia VI (The Restorer) de Navarre[3142] married Marguerite de' Aigle. They had one daughter:

Blanche Garcia de Navarre[3090] born in 1137 in Navarre, Spain; died on 14 August 1158 in Castile, Spain

3144. GEOFFREY PLANTAGENET (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandfather[3140], see Maternal Ancestry(147) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born on 24 August 1113, in Isère, Rhône-Alpes, France, to Fulk V D'Anjou[3193] and Ermgarde de Beaugency[3194]. Geoffrey was a Count of Anjou, Duke of Normandy. He died (Stricken with fever) on 7 September 1151, aged 38, in Chateau, Eure-Et-Loire, France. He was buried in St. Julien's Cathedral in Le Mans France.

Geoffrey V (24 August 1113 – 7 September 1151) — called the Handsome or the Fair (French: le Bel) and Plantagenet — was the Count of Anjou, Touraine, and Maine by inheritance from 1129 and then Duke of Normandy by conquest from 1144. By his marriage to the Empress Matilda, daughter and heiress of Henry I of England, Geoffrey had a son, Henry Curtmantle, who succeeded to the English throne as King Henry II (1154-1189) and founded the Plantagenet dynasty the name of which was taken from Geoffrey's epithet.

Richard of York, 3rd Duke of York, adopted Plantagenet as his family name in the 15th century. "Plantagenest" (or "Plante Genest") had been a 12th-century nickname for his ancestor Geoffrey, count of Anjou and duke of Normandy. One of many popular theories suggests the common broom, planta genista in medieval Latin, as the source of the nickname.

3145. QUEEN MATILDA BEAUCLERC (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandmother[3141], see Maternal Ancestry(147) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born on 7 February 1102, in Caen, Normandie, France, to Henry I Beauclerc[3195] and Matilda of Scotland[3196]. Matilda was a Duchess of Normandy. She died on 10 September 1167, aged 65, in Abbey of Notre Dame, Rouen, France. She was buried in Bec Abbey, LeBec-Hellouin, Eure, France.

Empress Matilda (c. 7 February 1102 – 10 September 1167), also known as the Empress Maud,[nb 1] was the claimant to the English throne during the civil war known as the Anarchy. The daughter of King Henry I of England, she moved to Germany as a child when she married the future Holy Roman Emperor Henry V. She travelled with her husband into Italy in 1116, was controversially crowned in St. Peter's Basilica, and acted as the imperial regent in Italy. Matilda and Henry had no children, and when he died in 1125, the crown was claimed by Matilda's cousin Stephen of Blois, who enjoyed the backing of the English Church. Stephen took steps to solidify his new regime, but faced threats both from neighbouring powers and from opponents within his kingdom.

Meanwhile, Matilda's younger brother, William Adelin, died in the White Ship disaster of 1120, leaving England facing a potential succession crisis. On Henry V's death, Matilda was recalled to Normandy by her brother, who arranged for her to marry Geoffrey of Anjou to form an alliance to protect his southern borders. Henry I had no further legitimate children and nominated Matilda as his heir, making his court swear an oath of loyalty to her and her successors, but the decision was not popular in the Anglo-Norman court. Henry died in 1135 but Matilda and Geoffrey faced opposition from the Norman barons and were unable to pursue their claims. The throne was instead taken by Matilda's cousin Stephen of Blois, who enjoyed the backing of the English Church. Stephen took steps to solidify his new regime, but faced threats both from neighbouring powers and from opponents within his kingdom.

In 1139 Matilda crossed to England to take the kingdom by force, supported by her half-brother, Robert of Gloucester, and her uncle, King David I of Scotland, while Geoffrey focused on conquering Normandy. Matilda's forces captured Stephen at the Battle of Lincoln in 1141, but the Empress's attempt to be crowned at Westminster collapsed in the face of bitter opposition from the London crowds. As a result of this retreat, Matilda was never formally declared Queen of England, and was instead titled the Lady of the English. Robert was captured following the Rout of Winchester in 1141, and Matilda agreed to exchange him for Stephen. Matilda became trapped in Oxford Castle by Stephen's forces that winter, and was forced to escape across the frozen River Isis at night to avoid capture. The war degenerated into a stalemate, with Matilda controlling much of the south-west of England, and Stephen the south-east and the Midlands. Large parts of the rest of the country were in the hands of local, independent barons.

Matilda returned to Normandy, now in the hands of her husband, in 1148, leaving her eldest son to continue the campaign in England; he eventually succeeded to the throne as Henry II in 1154. She settled her court near Rouen and for the rest of her life concerned herself with the administration of Normandy, acting on Henry's behalf whenever necessary. Particularly in the early years of her son's reign, she provided political advice and attempted to mediate during the Becket controversy. She worked extensively with the Church, founding Cistercian monasteries, and was known for her piety. She was buried under the high altar at Bec Abbey after her death in 1167.

Geoffrey Plantagenet[3144], aged 13, married Matilda Beauclerc, aged 25, on 22 May 1127 in le Mans, le Mans, Sarthe, France. They had one son:

Henry II Plantagenet[3091] born on 25 March 1133 in Le Mans, Sarthe, Pays de la Loire, France; died on 6 July 1189

3146. WILLIAM X DE ACQUITAINE (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandfather[3142], see Maternal Ancestry(147) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born in 1099, in Toulouse, Jura, Franche-Comté, France, to William IX (The Troubadour" de Acquitaine[3197] and Philippa Maude de Acquitaine[3198]. William X was a Count Of Poitou and Toulousan d'Aquitaine. He died on 9 April 1137, aged about 37, in Santiago de Compostela, La Coruna, Galicia, Spain. He was buried in Santiago de Compostela, Galicia, Spain.

William X (1099 – 9 April 1137), called the Saint, was Duke of Aquitaine, Duke of Gascony, and Count of Poitou (as William VIII) from 1126 to 1137. He was the son of William IX by his second wife, Philippa of Toulouse.

William was born in Toulouse during the brief period when his parents ruled the capital. His birth is recorded in the Chronicle of Saint-Maixent for the year 1099: Willelmo comiti natus est filius, equivoce Guillelmus vocatus ("a son was born to Count William, named William like himself"). Later that same year, much to Philippa's ire, Duke William IX mortgaged Toulouse to Philippa's cousin, Bertrand of Toulouse, and then left on Crusade.

Philippa and her infant son William X were left in Poitiers. When Duke William IX returned from his unsuccessful crusade, he took up with Dangerose, the wife of a vassal, and set aside his rightful wife, Philippa. This caused strain between father and son, until 1121 when William X married Aenor de Châtellerault, a daughter of his father's mistress Dangerose by her first husband, Aimery. In 1137 William joined the pilgrimage to Santiago de Compostela, but died during the trip. On his deathbed, he expressed his wish to see king Louis VI of France as protector of his fifteen-year-old daughter Eleanor, and to find her a suitable husband. Louis VI naturally accepted this guardianship and married the heiress of Aquitaine to his own son, Louis VII.

3147. ELEANOR DE CHATELLERAULT (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandmother[3143], see Maternal Ancestry(147) and Maternal Ancestry(149)) was born in 1103, in Châtellerault, Poitou-Charentes, France. Eleanor was a Duchess of Aquitaine. She died on 10 March 1130, aged about 26, in Talmont-sur-Gironde, Charente-Maritime, Poitou-Charentes, France. She was buried.

Philippa was born in approximately 1073 to Count William IV of Toulouse, and his wife Emma of Mortain. She was his only surviving child, and thus, by the laws of Toulouse, his heir. In 1088, William went on a pilgrimage to Palestine, leaving his brother Raymond of Saint-Gilles as regent. (Before he left, it is claimed, he also married his daughter to the King of Aragon in order to disinherit her; however, this marriage is apocryphal, as contemporary evidence shows that Sancho was still married to his previous wife at the time of his death in 1094.)

Philippa's early life – if she was not married to Sancho Ramirez of Aragon – is something of a mystery. It is known that she did not marry William IX of Aquitaine until 1094, after the death of her father and the succession of her uncle; the circumstances in which she lived prior to her father's death, the manner of her disinheritance, and the arrangement of her marriage, are thus unknown. Those historians that argue her to have been married to Sancho Ramirez argue that her removal from Toulouse prevented her from effectively claiming her inheritance, and that with the death of Sancho, she was free to remarry based on her own choice.[3] What is certain is that, upon the death of Count William, Philippa's claims were ignored, and Raymond became count. Philippa then married William, whom she considered worthy due to his numerous merits: a handsome man fully capable of flattering a woman, he was not only one of the most prominent Dukes in Europe, able to give her the life she felt she deserved; his realm was also conveniently situated next to Toulouse, and consequently would easily be able to regain her homeland for her own – as indeed, the Duke promised to do for her. Consequently, the two swiftly married. Why she was allowed by her uncle to marry such a dangerous man, or indeed if Raymond had any choice in the matter, is unknown. In 1099, her husband went on crusade and he left her as regent in Poitou. She was less than pleased when, upon her return from Toulouse to Poitiers in 1114, she discovered her husband to have moved his mistress, Viscountess Dangereuse of Châtellerault, into her palace. Philippa appealed to friends and the church for assistance in ousting her husband's mistress, but to no avail – none could persuade the Duke to give up his mistress. In 1116, a humiliated Philippa, devastated by her husband's repayment of her service to him for so many years, left the Court, taking refuge at the Abbey of Fontevrault. There she became a close friend of her husband's first wife, Ermengarde of Anjou, and the two spent much time reflecting upon the shortcomings of William. However, for all Philippa's devotion to the Abbey and its ideals, she found little peace there, both angry and resentful that her husband had cast her off in favour of a mistress. She died of unknown causes there on 28 November 1118, survived by her husband, his mistress, and Ermengarde, who would shortly attempt to avenge Philippa by attempting to have Dangereuse banished from Aquitaine.

William X de Acquitaine married Eleanor de Chatellerault. They had one daughter: Eleanor de Acquitaine born on 12 June 1122 in Chateau de Belin, Gironde, Aquitaine. France; died on 1 April 1204 in Mirabell Castle, Poitiers, France., France 3148. MERGINHARD GERHARD I VON SPONHEIM (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandfather, see Maternal Ancestry(150)) was born in 1095, in Hamm, Germany. He died on 28 February 1155, aged about 59, in Sponheim, Germany.

3149. MATHILDA (MECHTILD) VON MORSBERG (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandmother, see Maternal Ancestry(150)) was born in 1100, in Kyburg, Zürich, Switzerland, to Dietrich III de Montebeliard and Irmtrud de Bourgogne. She died on 12 March 1179, aged about 78, in Neresheim, Baden-Württemberg.

Merginhard Gerhard I von Sponheim married Mathilda (Mechtild) von Morsberg. They had one daughter:

Mathilde von Saarbrücken born in 1125 in Sponheim, Germany; died in 1180 in Fontevrault, Maine-Ét-Loire, France oder Saarbrücken, Germany

3150. SIFRID SIMONSZ VAN BREDERODE VAN TEYLINGEN (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandfather, see Maternal Ancestry(150)) was born in 1040 to Simon Sifridsz van Brederode van Teylingen and Aleida (Ada) van Altena. He died in 1070, aged about 30.

3151. ALEIDA (ADA) VAN ALTENA (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-grandmother, see Maternal Ancestry(150)) was born in 1010, in Lotharingen en het Duitse Rijk. She died in 1065, aged about 55.

Sifrid Simonsz van Brederode van Teylingen married Aleida (Ada) van Altena. They had one son:

Simon Sifridsz van Brederode van Teylingen born in 1066; died in 1120

3152. GERTRUDE OF HABSBURG (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-aunt, see Maternal Ancestry(150)) was born in 1092, in Habsburg, Aargau, Switzerland, to Otto II of Habsburg and Hilla van Pfirt. She died on 15 February 1134, aged about 41, in Montbéliard, Bas Alsace, Bourgogne, France.

3153. THIERRY III DE MONTBELLIARD (Howard Charles's twenty-seven-times-great-great-uncle by marriage) was born in 1085, in Bar Le Duc, Meuse, Argonne Lorraine, France. Thierry III was a Count of Montbéliard. He died in 1154, aged about 69.

The following information is also recorded for Thierry III. Death(?) in 1154, aged about 69, in Montbéliard, Bas Alsace, Bourgogne, France.
Thierry III de Montbéliard, born in 1205 and died in 1283, was Count of Montbéliard. He succeeded his father as Count of Montbéliard in 1227/1228.

In 1248, he founded the first hospital for the poor in Montbéliard, outside the city, which will be under the protection of Pope Innocent IV. It grants the exploitation of Saunerie Saulnot to the Abbey of Lure.

His son Richard of Montfaucon died in his lifetime, he bequeathed in 1282 the county to his granddaughter Guillemette Neufchatel which is married with Reginald of Burgundy successor to Thierry III as Count of Montbéliard.

Thierry III de Montbéliard married Gertrude of Habsburg[3152]. They had one daughter:

Ermentrude de Montbéliard[3097] born in 1120 in Montbéliard, Bas Alsace, France; died in 1171.

The 2 hides held by Hugh son of Golda formed the manor of IFORD, and the overlordship of this manor and the rest of the 7 knights' fees held by his successors, the Plaiz family, descended with the rape, falling in 1439 to Lady Bergavenny. Her descendants were still overlords in 1543.
Hugh son of Golda was succeeded by his son Hugh, whose connexion with the family of Plaiz is not known. A Ralph de Plaiz was living about 1140, and Hugh sonand heir of Ralph de Plaiz is found about 1150 (or later?). A Ralph occurs again in 1177 and two Ralphps, father and son, about the same time; one of these seems to have died about 1194, leaving a nephew, also Ralph, who died about 1204. Hugh de Plaiz owned the manor in the first half of the 13th century. He died in 1244 and was succeeded by Richard de Plaiz his son by his first wife Philippa de Munfichet, but in 1256 his third wife and widow Alice claimed a third of Iford and other manors as her dower. No Sussex manors were conceded to her. Richard died in 1269 and was succeeded in turn by his sons Ralph and Giles. Ralph died in 1283 and the manor of Iford was granted in dower to his widow Isabel who subsequently married John Marmion and would appear to have been still holding it in 1302, since it is not included among the lands of which Giles de Plaiz died seised in that year. Richard son of Giles was, however, seised of the manor at his death in 1327, holding it with its members Warningore, Wapsbourne, and Worth as half a knight's fee. His eldest son Giles died in 1334 while still a minor and in 1344 Richard brother of Giles obtained livery of his lands, dying 'in parts beyond the seas' in 1360. He had previously alienated his Sussex manors to Sir John de Sotton and others for their lives, with reversion to himself and his heirs. Richard's son John died in 1389 holding no lands in Sussex, nor were they held by his daughter Margaret, wife of Sir John Howard, at the time of her death in 1391.
